CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS WILL PRACTISE WHAT THEY PREACH

Amount of Paper Used Will be Reduced to Minimum in Keeping With Big Thrift Urge.

The Canadian press is well to the fore in the campaign to promote the saving both of materials and money. Mr. John M. Imrie, manager of the Canadian Press Association, mentions it as an interesting coincidence that on the very day that the Thrif Campaign was launched in the newspapers of Canada the news print paper committee of the Canadian Press Association sent out to all papers a long list of suggestions by which paper may be saved, and a resulting saving effected in labour, materials and transportation.

Canada uses a large quantity of news print, but much less per capita than does the United States. In this country the consumption is 12,000 tons per year per million of the population; whereas in the United States the consumption is 18,000 tons per million people. In the United States the War Industries Board recently issued an order reducing the consumption of news print in that country. No such action has been taken in Canada as yet; but the news print paper committee felt that every economy possible in the use of paper should be effected, notwithstanding the fact that, even after the new regulations have gone into effect in the United States, the per capita consumption of paper in that country will be much higher than it is in Canada.

Eliminate Unnecessary Copies.

The ideas for economy suggested to publishers are of two kinds. First, the discontinuance of wasteful practices in building up circulation that have manifested themselves through the keen competition of certain dailies to get circulation at any cost. Along this line many suggestions have been made with a view to eliminating wasteful circulation, without crippling the newspaper.

Another line of policy relates to the size of newspapers. Recommendations have been made for reductions in size ranging from five per cent. in the case of small papers, to 60 per cent. in the case of large Sunday editions using over 350 columns of reading matter, comic features, etc. This would mean the eliminating, or reducing, of many comic and other features and the condensing of news reports into shorter form. In other words, the competition between papers would then be one of quality rather than of quantity of matter printed.

The Canadian press in adopting these suggestions is following up its campaign to promote saving by practising it.

Grocery Markets For the Week

Latest advices at hand are to the effect that the Allied Purchasing Commission demands in salmon all the sockeye and red springs pack, along with 75 per cent. of the pinks and cohoes, says Canadian Grocer. The remaining 25 per cent. of the last two, along with chums, are to be left for civilian trade in Canada and Australia.

An embargo has been placed on the ment will stand, though an effort to have at least a small percentage of the better grades held for Canadian trade is being made.

The United States Government has notified the trade that they will require the entire crop of Oregon prunes in sizes 50-60s, 60-70s, 70-80s and 80-90s. This will leave only 30s and 100s, with perhaps about 30 per cent. of 40s, for civilian use, and Canada will have to be content with having prunes of these sizes for her civilian trade. Similar commandeering of the California prune crop occurred some time ago, so no better assortment of sizes can be looked for in that quarter.

PRUNE CROP DAMAGED

A wire just to hand from California states that terrible damage has been done the new crop of prunes an account of the unseasonable and extremely heavy rainfall in producing districts. The crop is said to be very seriously damaged.

The Government has advised importers that licenses for the importation of Malaga raisins will not be granted. There was some hope expressed two or three weeks ago that some shipments might be allowed in, but the Government has definitely decided against this course.

An embargo has ben placed on the further import of tapioca to Canada. The Government indicates that no further permits to bring in will be granted, which means present stocks will have to take care of the trade. Spot stocks are prety well cleared up, and are in strong hands.

WESTERN SUGAR SITUATION

Jobbers are still experiencing considerable difficulty in obtaining sugar from the refineries. The B.C. refineries declare that they cannot fill any more orders for shipping to Regina. In the past, these refiners looked after the biggest part of Saskatchewan's orders, and it will now cause a still further burden to be thrown on the backs of the Eastern refineries. This will cause an additional shortage. Eastern refineries report that they will be able to fill more orders now than for the past four weeks.

Wholesalers declare that they expect a drop in the price of white beans in the very near future. The new crop is expected on the market very soon, which will send the price of the commodity down considerably.

Hardware and Metal Markets

Sharp advances have been made in reaping hooks and scythes, and some minor changes are also in evidence on harvest tools. Booking orders for spring are being accepted on basis of prices now adopted. Manufacturers of scythes intimate that they are eliminating from their product all features of appearance which in no way add to utility of the tools. This is done with a view to conserving labour and utilizing what material is available for only such purposes essential to efficiency.

Wood handles are again on the move upward, and an advance amounting to about 10 per cent. is now effective. This change does not embrace team and carriage goods, such as neckyokes, singletrees and doubletrees, the discounts on these remaining the same.

Higher levels have been reached on clay picks, rock picks, short and long cutter mattocks, grub hoes, wrecking bars and crowbars. The new prices named show an advance of about 10 per cent. over former figures, and there is no indication that the peak has yet been reached.

Poultry Netting.

Prices on poultry netting for spring are slightly higher, and increases are to be noted in quotations issued on plumbers' oakrum, copper and brass rods, tubes and sheets, lumbering tools and some makes of shotguns.

Linseed oil has advanced 5c per gallon in some quarters, which serves to narrow the range of quotations materially. Turpentine is reported scarce locally, but shipments now rolling will relieve the situation in that respect. Primary points show a slight easing off, and indications are that prices may fall still further. Shipments abroad have not been as heavy as last year, and in spite of lighter production stocks in hand are heavier. Rosin is the reverse, an advance being registered for the week, and higher levels looked for.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME.

Mr. James Prouse, cattle dealer, Shoho, Sask., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Fellow Canadians!

"HOW much thought do you give to the War—I mean honest, sincere thought on how we should live in order to win the war?

"I mean you who live from day to day in all the comfort that you enjoyed before the war, some of you in even greater comfort—

"You who spend as much or more on your enjoyment—who indulge in as many of the good things of life as you ever did—

"You who buy what you want to, eat what your fancy, go where you please—who deny yourselves nothing.

"You have no idea what it means to stand knee-deep in mud—in a dirty trench—with a cold drizzle chilling you to the bone.

"You have never heard the shells shrieking overhead—or seen bombs drop from the sky.

"But you know these things are.

"And yet you go on spending—as if this war were in a story-book—as if the menace of the Hun could never touch you.

"But it could—and it would—but for your armies.

"Do you think we could "carry-on" if we thought for a moment you were not backing us to the limit?

"Do you think we could stand it all—the terrible fighting and the tiresome toiling—if we dreamed, "over there," that you were trifling with this war?

"If we knew that you were spending money on frivolous things?

"Don't you see that when you spend a dollar on a thing you don't absolutely need, you are using the labor of a man who should be either fighting or making something that will help us—your soldiers—to fight?

"Oh, you chaps with money in your pockets—and comfort in your homes—and love of ease cankering your souls!

"If you could know—as I know—all that war means—you'd stint yourselves down to the barest necessities—so that Canada's money and Canada's material and Canada's labor could all go into guns and shells and boots and uniforms and food—for our boys over in France to fight with."

BIG DISCOVERIES THAT BROUGHT SMALL REWARDS

Man Who Found Millions of Gold in Australia Got $5, and Discoverer of Newfoundland Was Given $50.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Some fifty years back, says "Tit Bits," an Irishman named O'Reilly, engaged in buying ostrich feathers at a spot near the Vaal River, was offered by an African bushman a curiously bright "pebble" which he had picked up near by in exchange for a plug of tobacco. The white man closed with the offer, and later on submitted his pebble to a lapidary in Cape Town.

The expert at once pronounced it to be a very fine diamond, and, after some negotiations, O'Reilly sold it for £11,020. He then returned to the spot, started digging, and found several other stones, which brought him in a handsome fortune. But all the bushman—the original discoverer of the South African Diamond Fields—got out of his epoch-making find was a single cake of plug tobacco.

£1 For Finding Millions.

The first discovery of gold in Australia was made as early as 1839 by a convict servant of a Scotch settler named McAlister. This man found a nugget of what he rightly conceived to be gold while tending his master's sheep near where the town of Ballarat now stands, and took it to McAlister, who submitted it to the Governor, Sir George Gipps.

The latter had it assayed, and found that it really was gold, but fearing a mutiny of the convicts if the truth were allowed to become known, he kept his knowledge to himself. Meanwhile, he ordered the finder of the specimen to be given a sovereign in recognition of his "enterprise."

This is probably the smallest reward ever given to a white man for what was the biggest find recorded in history, for when, twelve years later, Edward Hargreaves re-discovered these same goldfields, many millions sterling were taken from them in the course of a few months.

Valueless Titles.

McLaughlin, the discoverer of the richest and most famous silver mine in the world, the Nevada Bonanza, sold his claim for ten dollars and a bottle of whisky to two men named Fair and Mackay. These two raised ore worth over £30,000,000 from the mine in the course of a few years. But poor McLaughlin, whose enterprise first led to its discovery, died meanwhile in hospital, too poor to pay for his pauper burial.

Nor have the discoverers of new countries fared much better, in many instances, than the discoverers of the hidden riches of the older ones. Columbus, who gave a new world to the King of Spain, received scarcely any reward — if we except some empty titles—for his enterprise, and was even thrown into prison by his royal master for a while on a trumped-up charge of treason.

Sir Walter Raleigh, on his return from the expedition in which he discovered the River Orinoco and added British Guiana to the Empire, was committed to the Tower and afterwards beheaded by King James I., who was bitterly disappointed because Raleigh had found no gold there; while John Cabot, who discovered Newfoundland and presented it to Henry VII., was deemed by that monarch to have been amply rewarded by the gift of a £10 note.

SPANISH INFLUENZA NOW UNDER CONTROL

Doctors Throughout the Province Circularized by the Provincial Secretary.

TORONTO, Sept. 20.—"The Department is doing everything possible to check the outbreak of Spanish influenza which was reported to us from the Polish camp at Niagara, and we feel that we now have this new but aggravating complaint well under control," was the statement made yesterday by Col. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer of the Provincial Board of Health.

Col. McCullough said that he had had a conference with Hon. W. D. McPherson, and that as a result he had issued a circular regarding the complaint to all the physicians in practice throughout the Province.

"The complaint is not unlike la grippe, although it is more annoying, if that could be possible," said Col. McCullough. "It is an acute febrile infectious condition of three or four days' duration and the symptoms are chills accompanied by severe headache with pain in the back and a general feeling of malaise or loss of energy. The face is flushed and herpes appear on the lips in some cases. The fever runs from 99 to 102 degrees and the highest point is reached on the second day, when there is a sudden drop, and by the fourth day the patient has practically recovered."

PETERBOROUGH SOLDIER MAY BE A PRISONER.

Pte. Robert Scully Has Been Missing Since November, 1917.

To hear that her husband may be alive and perhaps a prisoner in Germany is the intimation received by Mrs. Robert Scully, 517 Sherbrooke street from her brother Sergt. Albert Castle, who is at present in France with the Dental Corps. Pte. Robert Scully enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion and was reported missing in November, 1917. Six months is allowed for a soldier to be heard from, consequently last April she received word that he was presumed dead. Her brother, Sergt. Castle, writes that if he had been killed his body would have been found, as the fighting was in such a place that the body could not have been carried off. Sergt. Castle expressed the opinion that Pte. Scully is a prisoner in Germany.

A tale of two Trade Marks

For over 59 years Turnbulls have been making good knitted underwear in Canada—and underwear exclusively—They came from the Old Country with the knowledge of how to make good underwear bred in them—They brought out expert workers from the Old Country from time to time as their business grew—thus have always kept their products up to the highest standard, being made with that thoroughness and care for which the Old Country workers are famous.

The reason for this tremendous growth and popularity can be summed up in one word "Quality" first and all the time—

You cannot get away from the fact that Canadians appreciate "Quality" more than anything else—

Turnbull's two brands are

UNDERWEAR

This brand is on all Turnbull's ribbed underwear which is extremely popular with ladies and children because of its great elasticity and comfortable fitting. Made in all sizes in separate garments and union suits with special closed crotch.

This brand is on Turnbull's plain knitted underwear, all wool — finest and cleanest obtainable, made in separate garments and union suits with special crotch that stays closed and is always comfortable.

Lakefield Soldier Officially Reported Killed in Action

Was a Member of the 93rd Battalion and Went to France This Year—Notes on the Lakefield Fair—Cake and Plate Stolen.

VISITORS TO VILLAGE

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 21. — Mrs. Wingett received a telegram stating that her husband, Corp. Leonard Wingett had been killed in action on August 27th.

This news will come as a great shock to the many friends of this well-known soldier. Corp. Wingett enlisted in the 93rd Battalion early in 1916 and went overseas as a Sergeant in C Co. He reverted in England and was for a time with the military police. He was sent to France this year. He was born in England but had resided in Lakefield for a number of years, where his wife and three sons at present reside. He was a member of the Church of England.

Took the Plate.

Some one at the fair took a fruit cake and plate belonging to Mrs. E. J. Galvin, wife of the President of the Agricultural Society. The plate was a present which she values very highly and would like to have it returned. A lady was standing nearby when a man took the cake and plate, she thought he was the owner or she would have stopped him.

Fair Concert.

The proceeds of the concert on Fair night amounted to $126. The Agricultural Society had a most agreeable surprise in the splendid patronage their concert received as their spirits sank to zero with the bad weather, which, however, did not prevent their having a record house.

Tag Day.

Personals.

Mr. R. J. Munroe, of Peterborough, was a visitor to the Fair on Wednesday.

Rev. Father McGinity, of Wooler, was the guest of Father Meagher on Wednesday.

Messrs. Pennefather and F. D. Kerr motored to the Fair on Wednesday.

Mrs. Wm. Rowe, of Peterborough, spent Wednesday in Lakefield with friends.

Mrs. Cassan, of Campbellford, returned home on Wednesday after a short visit in Lakefield.

Mr. J. N. Sexsmith, M.P., of Preneveau, was a visitor to the Fair on Wednesday.

Rev. and Mrs. C. Pratt, who have been at St. Kitts, B.W.I., arrived in Lakefield on Wednesday evening. They left for Campbellford on Thursday morning to visit Mrs. Cassan.

Mrs. George H. Rowe, of Peterborough, was in Lakefield on Wednesday visiting friends.

Mr. John Miller, of Peterborough, was in the village on Wednesday.

Miss Mabel Walker, of Peterborough, was the guest of Miss McKibbon for the Fair.

Mrs. Duncan Ferguson and Mrs. D. G. McMillan and children, are visiting friends in the village.

Mrs. Bloyce, Mrs. Stewart Roso, Mrs. E. M. Elliott and Mrs. Fitz. Gerald, were Peterborough visitors to the Fair on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Manice, of Peterborough, are in the village with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Metcalfe and Miss Miriam, of Apsley, are guests of Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Chappell on Regent street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rose, of Peterborough, were in the village for the Fair.

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.L.A., of Havelock, was in the village attending the Fair.

Mrs. O. A. Sawyer, of Havelock, was the guest of Mrs. Ridpath for the Fair.

Rev. Captain Hedley, C.E.F., is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. McKenzie at the "Grove."

Mr. and Mrs. Miller, of Peterborough, moved to the village this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stewart, of Peterborough, were in the village on Wednesday attending the Fair.

Mrs. Andrew Wilson, of Young's Point, took in the Fair on Wednesday.

Mrs. Drain, of Peterborough, Mrs. Morrow and Miss Drain, of Norwood, are guests of Mrs. W. J. Charlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Armstrong, of Havelock, are visiting friends in the village.

Mr. Richard Darling, Mr. David Darling, and Mr. J. Reid, of Lakefield, and Rev. Mr. Lees, of Fraserville, were up at Lake Koshabogamog last week picking cranberries, returning home on Saturday. Notwithstanding the rainy weather they report having had a good time.

Mr. D. H. Moore and Mrs. Orr. of Peterborough, were in the village attending the Fair.

CONSTIPATED CHILDREN

Childhood constipation can be quickly banished through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which never fail to regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and in this way relieve all the miner ills of little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Eugene Couture Knox Bridge, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets have been marvellous in the case of my baby. She was constipated and feverish but the Tablets soon regulated her bowels and made her well." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Lancashire Fusiliers still retain the custom of shouting their Minden yell, and, on Minden Day, wear their roses to commemorate the stubborn stand they made in the rose gardens.

Wood Prices in Peterboro

Hardwood, cut and split, is now selling at $16.50 a cord. If you want it in cord lengths, without being split, you may get it for $15.50 a cord. One local fuel company sells mixed wood at $12.50 a cord, while another dealer will let you have it for $11.00. Nobody seems to have straight softwood on hand, and only one dealer has good hardwood.

"We haven't any coal, we can't get coal, and we won't take orders for coal," sums up the coal situation.

Another dealer has soft coal at $10 a ton and coke at $12, and some cannel coal is all the supply obtainable within the city.

It is said that plenty of wood is coming down the river on scows and can be had at $13.00 a cord from the scow.

PRISON FOR PEARL FIXER.

Hindu Used Chemical Treatment to Enhance Value of Gems.

The "fake pearl" case, which attracted a great amount of attention in Paris about a year before the war, had its denouement the other day when a Hindu named Warna was tried for fraud, says the London Mail. He is alleged to have discovered a chemical composition whereby ordinary white pearls can be given the pinkish tingle peculiar to Eastern pearls, which are much more valuable.

A pearl for which a dealer named Altschueler (row dead) gave £2,500, was handed over to Warna for treatment, and was subsequently offered for sale, the price asked being £10,400. It was submitted to experts, who, it was stated, discovered that its colour was not natural. Warna's alleged explanation was that he had put a coating of collodion over the pearl to preserve its surface while he was removing spots from it and adding lustre to it, and that he had not finished his work.

The prosecution was instituted on the ground that the process did not really alter the pearl but merely gave it a temporary colour which disappeared of itself in course of time, and could be removed by steeping the pearl in proof spirit, and that in reality it remained an ordinary white pearl and ought not to be sold as one of the pink variety.

Warna was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and a fine of £20, and Barboza, a dealer who went shares with Altchueler, was sent to prison for three months, and ordered to pay a fine of £20.

THE BLUE RIBAND OF THE AIR

(By H. B.)

The old gentleman leant across the carriage to the man with the pilot's wings and offered his cigar-case. They were good cigars. It tempted the pilot (who knew a good cigar from a bad one.)

"No, thanks," he decided, with an effort which was a minor heroism; "cigars belong to my past—and my future."

The other beamed benevolent appreciation of the sacrifice. "Your present," he said, "is magnificent." And he indicated the wings.

"Anyway, it's not cigars," said the pilot.

The old gentleman put his case resolutely in his pocket. "Great feat the other day," he said. "Zeppelin brought down by an airman. I suppose, now, that that is regarded as the blue riband of the air."

The pilot resigned himself to a conversation he did not desire; an opinion like that had to be attended to.

"Why?" he asked. "Why, any more than, for example, the man who downs a Gotha on a London raid?"

"Well, yes. In each case the raider is out to bomb innocent non-combatants," agreed the old man.

The air man smiled a trifle wearily. "So," he said. "You only consider the "blue riband of the air" in connection with raids on England. You don't think of associating the idea with German raids on the British soldier in France?"

The other looked nonplused. "Well, er"—he said.

"You wouldn't think of artillery reconnaissance as the blue riband, would you? Dull job, of course. It's like doing sentry-go, only it's done over the German batteries, just behind the front where the Archies happen to be thickest, and your orders are not to attack a German aeroplane except in the way of defence. Your duty is to observe and the German's duty is to prevent your observing. Oh yes, a dull job, but it has its risks and it happens to be the daily round."

"Another thing, and another candidate for your blue riband. What about the fighters, the men who fly swift fighting machines and are the gunners of the air? It's an exceptional thing to down a Gotha near London because it's exceptional to find a Gotha near London; but it isn't at all exceptional for a man to have downed a dozen Hun machines over the German lines with Archies below him as well as Huns in the air.

"You know what "ground-staffing" is? Amongst other things, it's another candidate for your blue riband. Low-flying isn't too nice at any time; low-flying over troops firing with rifles at a vulnerable target like an aeroplane is—well, sir, it's war. So it long reconnaissance far into German territory; and then there are the fellows who "raid the Rhine towns."

"I shall want a lot of riband," said the old gentleman reflectively.

The pilot smiled. "They are dressing us in blue," he said. "Perhaps that's why."

"Heroes all—all of you. I can't pick and choose."

Would Let the Germans Know Their Punishment

That Is the Demand of a Considerable Section of French Public Opinion —Advocates of the Plan Think a Declaration Made Now Would Shorten the War.

A MEANS TO HASTEN PEACE

PARIS, Sept. 20—In his letter of thanks to the Paris Municipal Council General Foch expresses in a sentence the feeling of all France today: "We are continuing our task, implacably pursuing the enemy."

To drive the Germans out of France —this is the whole gospel of France in regard to the war at the present moment. The public here is expecting to hear of a fresh German peace offensive daily, but in no country is there a more resolute determination to refuse even to consider the possibility of commencing peace negotiations so long as a single enemy soldier remains inside the frontier. No doubt is felt here that the Germans now realize that victory is absolutely impossible and that they are now continuing the fighting solely with the hope of being able to force the Allies to meet them at the peace table before they have been forced to relinquish their grasp on the last foot of French soil this side of the frontier. Everybody realizes what an immense asset it would be for the enemy to be able to negotiate while still in possession of even the smallest portion of France For this reason, among others, French opinion has received with intense satisfaction the statement cabled from Washington that there can be no question of negotiation of any kind with the enemy, but that the war must continue until Germany is driven to capitulate without condition or reserve.

The French are entirely in agreement with what appears to be a growing American sentiment that the first duty of the Allies is the chastisement of Germany for her long list of crimes against humanity, and that whenever the time comes for the nations to sit at the peace table the German people must be brought before it as suppliants pleading for mercy and in no shape or form as honorable foes ready and willing to settle a quarrel with antagonists whom she regards equally blameworthy with herself.

GET TOGETHER

What is strongly felt in many quarters here is that the time has now come for the Allies to get together and make some more definite pronouncement than hitherto has been made as to the nature of the chastisement that Germany must undergo. It is felt that in the present circumstances some more or less clear and unmistakable in favor of the liberation of all oppressed nationalities held in bondage by Germany and Austria, including Alsace-Lorraine, and has also given notice through the official voice of her Ministers that she is firmly decided that in no circumstances shall the greater proportion at least of Germany's former colonies be returned to her. But this, it is felt here, is not enough. What has had far more effect on French opinion is the declaration made by 600,000 British seamen of a drastic boycott on Germany for a fixed period that shall be extended in exact proportion to time during which Germany persists in continuing her hopeless struggle against rest of the many petsisrs in continuing her hopeless struggle against the rest of the world. This, it is felt, is something concrete, definite and easily understandable Why ,it is asked, do not the Allies now state plainly to the world the punishment they intend to inflict on Germany so that proposals may be discussed by public opinion in each country and the public mind prepared with more or less definite proposals when Germany decides to throw up the sponge?

Such a pronouncement would not interefere with a vigorous prosecution of the war and would have a more positive influence on the enemy plans than a whole series of victories in the present stage of the war.

RELIEVING A TRENCH

By SECOND LIEUT. J. B. Morton.

The men are drawn up outside their billets, in full marching order. At length comes the word of command and they move off at a slow pace, with several minutes interval between each of the four companies. Along the uneven cobbled roads they tramp, their entrenching tools clattering against their bayonets, their backs slightly bent with the great weight upon them.

When the order to halt is heard, they move to the side of the road and sit down contentedly on heaps of stones or mounds of grass. Gas helmets are brought to the "Alert" position ,and when they start again each company is split up into platoons with an interval between each platoon. The sound of the guns comes nearer; dusk draws on and star-shells hover on the horizon, making the line seem much nearer than it really is. Stray shells burst each side of the column crawling up the road. Now the platoons split into sections with a fixed space, between each section. The leading platoon starts off in file, one file on each side of the road. The platoon officer leads, and at the rear of the fourth section comes the Platoon Sergeant, heartening the young ones by words and example.

One or two faces wear a tense expression. These are the men who are coming under fire for the first time, and only a soldier with an understanding heart knows just how formidable the experience is. They are setting nerves and muscles to avoid any appearance of noticing the danger ahead, or of feeling the physical strain of the pack. They sneered well enough, but they envy the hard-bitten old soldiers, who amble along at peace with the world. To the young soldier the pack becomes a terrible old man of the sea, which he cannot shake off. A fag is denied him. The order has come to cease smoking and talking. The pace becomes slower, as the road degenerates with shell-holes. Imploring messages to "Step short in front" are sent up— but the Platoon Officer knows he must not linger too long. There is a machine gun that plays on a certain corner near here.

At Brigade Headquarters they halt, and the guides attack themselves. The leading platoon moves forward again, still more slowly, the guide going in front, with a long stick to feel his way, and help him over rough ground.

Then comes the order—"Bend low and run," and little black figures scurry past a cross-road. Soon after this, like a welcome haven, the communication trench looms into sight. In single file they move along it, through mud and slush, until, as a welcome surprise, their feet strike duck-boards. And now begins the tiring, the most tiring part of the march, if it is a long communication trench. There are corners to be squeezed around, and narrow spaces to be negotiated. Now and then a party of engineers or men on fatigue meet the ingoing platoon, and the men have to flatten themselves against the sides of the trench. Through the support line they go, where one platoon is dropped. The rest go on, enquiring anxiously from time to time as to the distance to the front line, the methods of the Boche, the state of the dugouts if there are any, and many other details that mean so much to Tommy.

On arriving in the front line, the platoon starts to relieve. Sentries previously detailed, are mounted in place of those of the outgoing platoon, and each man relieves another on the fire-step —gleaning what information he can, as to snipers, and dangerous bays. Generally the numbers of the ingoing and outgoing platoons do not coincide — in fact such a thing is exceedingly rare; so that the relief is not quite such a simple matter as he above description might seem to convey. Good organization is needed to make the thing run as smoothly as it does. Finally the outgoing platoon moves down the trench, and the men exchange last pleasantries, the young soldiers getting a special dose of chaff.

The relief naturally takes a considerable time as the platoon officer knows that he must not take over the trench until he is satisfied that all the stores are there, and in good condition. If there are any dug-outs the yare allotted, but there will not be much time for sleeping. The men who are not on sentry-go are required for other work, digging or filling sandbags, or taking up and cleaning half-submerged duck-boards. Everyone has his job, and on cold nights is very glad of it. The work is commenced as soon as 'stand-to' is over—(the men stand-to on relieving) and this is more or less left to the discretion of the officer. It depends largely on the mood of the Boches opposite.

In a few hours everyone has settled down to a period of trench life to the steady, remorseless work which never ceases day or night on the long western front.

HARVEST LEAVE WILL BE EXTENDED

It is announced hat harvest leave will be extended until October 31st to men in Categories A, B and C, who are actually working on farms and required for the purpose of saving the crops, subject to immediate recall should necessity arise. Steps will be taken immediately to deal with all cases so as to avoid unnecessary travel and expense.

Mexican Army to Eliminate Bandit Element

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 19 — The Mexican daily paper La Prensa published an interview with a prominent Mexican recently arrived from Mexico City, who said President Carranza has decided to reorganize his army. He will do this by discharging the former bandit revolutionists who infest the country and recalling the best among the officers of the old federal army. He intends to have a disciplined army of one hundred thousand men instead of the present unmanageable hordes, who are a menace rather than a protection to the civilian population.

The arrangement, according to the interview, was adopted at a meeting President Carranza had with his most prominent generals. He told them frankly that unless the army was reorganized and the anarchy prevailing all over the country stopped it would be impossible to restore order and to make any real progress.

"What we need," President Carranza is quoted as having said to his generals, "is a cleaning up in the army to eliminate every undesirable man, and, still more, to bring back all former federal officers with clean records who are ready to help us in the task of reorganization. We must also resuscitate the old Military Academy, in order to obtain able officers, as required for a respectable and strong army."

It was decided to have a standing army of one hundred thousand men, distributed all over the country, to undertake immediately its pacification.

General Jose Augustin Castro will be appointed Secretary of War, with power to undertake the reorganization.

QUEBEC, Sept. 21.—Thomas Moore, of Niagara Falls, was elected president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada yesterday afternoon over J. C. Watters, the retiring president, by a vote of 295 to 155.

Mr. Watters has held the position for seven years.

At the opening of the afternoon session of the Trades and Labour Congress the secretary read a telegram from the Vancouver Trades and Labour Council, of Vancouver, denouncing President J. C. Watters as of "anti-working class character."

The telegram asserted that Watters in speeches at Victoria, Lethbridge, and Winnipeg, had expressed himself regarding Vancouver matters without availing himself of information that he could have had from the Vancouver executive.

"Therefore," it continued, "the Vancouver Trades and Labour Council, of Vancouver, hereby register condemnation of Watters' action and in our opinion he has thus given indication of his anti-working class character."

WANT SIX-HOUR DAY.

The annual conference of the Miners' Federation of Great Briain has unanimously affirmed the principle of a six hours' working day for the local mining industry, and action is to be immediately entered upon to secure legislation to come into operation within four weeks after the declaration of peace. These are proposals to etxend the principle of the six hours' working day to the railway and transport industries. A Yorkshire proposal to open up negotiations for the payment of six days' wages or five days' work was also unanimously agreed to.

Real Wonder-Worker For Wrinkled Face

Those who have tried all sorts of so-called "wrinkle-removers" in a vain effort to lose those unwelcome traces of age, illness or worry, can scarcely find words to express their delight with the wonderful saxolite formula, once they have given it a trial. The success of this method is due not alone to its marvelous effectiveness—upon the deepest lines and crows-feet, as well as upon the very fine ones—but also to its surprisingly quick action and its entire harmlessness. Its simplicity and its inexpensiveness are other commendable features, for one need only dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, and bathe the face transformation is behold transformation is behld.

It is not only the effect on wrinkles and creases that is so noticeable, but facial contour is remarkably improved and the face looks much younger. One should be sure to ask the druggist for the powdered saxolite. The lotion, being so refreshing, is particularly grate-

HENRY W. SAVAGE offers THE MUSICAL COMEDY DELIGHT

Have a Heart

BOOK AND LYRICS BY GUY BOLTON AND P. G. WODEHOUSE

MUSIC BY JEROME KERN

It should be of interest to local play-goers to know just what they are going to see when Henry W. Savage's charming musical comedy success, "Have a Heart," is presented here.

This is not an untried attraction, but one of the genuine successes of the New York season where it was hailed at the Liberty Theatre as something positively unique among music plays for its radical departure from familiar, stereotyped lines. "Have a Heart," deals with the complications arising when a young couple, upon the eve of divorce, sought through foolish, groundless jealousy, decide to elope for a second honeymoon. The story being based on Sardou's "Divorcons," Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse have furnished a witty book and catchy lyrics, and the music is by Jerome Kern, to whose witching melodies all young America is energetically dancing.

"Have a Heart" is the forty-seventh stage production of Henry W. Savage, whose offerings run the gamut from "The College Widow" to "The Merry Widow," and from "Excuse Me" to "Everywoman." His name stands for the highest quality of entertainment. As one New York reviewer declared, in giving "Have a Heart" enthusiastic endorsement: "Mr. Savage has hit the bull's eye again with a piece that has racy American humor, very delightful melodies and a libretto of real intelligence. Incidentally there is a cast of the superlative kind that he always provides, the chorus has rare loveliness and singing ability, and on the pictorial side it is a beautiful production— one of the most charming that Mr. Savage has ever made." The more conservative New York Evening Post declares that "it is a far finer product of made-in-America musical comedy than the mere title implies and equals the best foreign novelties."

This is the only company presenting "Have a Heart" and is under the personal direction of Henry W. Savage. The big cast numbers such musical comedy experts as: Ruth Oswald, Grace Hoey, Lucille Saunders, Helen Ukers, Rosie Green, Joseph Keno, Henry Antrim, Joseph McCallion, Sam J. Burton, Edward A. Smith, Lawrence Wood, Victor Leroy, Edward Giannelli and Keno and Green.

There is a usual Savage beauty chorus of singers and a large orchestra which is carried by the company.

Local Association of Boy Scouts Formed in Peterboro

Meeting Held Last Evening in the Public Library—Addresses by Mr. J. H. Burnham, Rev. C. A. G. Spence, Mr. Hammond and Others.

A local association of the Boy Scouts was formed at a meeting held last evening in the Public Library. The following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Hon. Vice-President—Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.

President—Mr. R. M. Hamilton.

Vice-President—Mr. C. E. Jamieson.

Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. E. J. Whiteside.

Apart from Scouts and prospective Scouts, the attendance was small, among those present being J. H. Burnham, G. A. Gillespie, Revs. W. White and C. A. G. Spence, R. M. Hamilton, and representatives of St. Alban's, St. Luke's, St. James' and Mark Street Churches.

The troop of Lakefield Scouts, under their Scoutmaster, Rev. Mr. Spencer, were present, and looked very smart in their dressy uniforms. St. Alban's Troop, under Patrol Leader Frank Bougard, paraded at the Market Square and marched to the Public Library, where they were inspected by Mr. Hammond, the Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scout Association.

Mr. Burnham, who, in the absence of the Mayor, whose engagements prevented him being present, presided, made a very eloquent and inspiring speech, in which he referred to the Boy Scout Association as the most splendid organization for young men in existence. Every organization nowadays seemed to be based on amusement or enjoyment, but the motto of the Scouts was self-sacrifice. Selfishness is inborn in the human race, and needs no cultivation, but unselfishness requires the utmost cultivation. This principle was the spirit of the Boy Scout Association, and enabled the Scout, when he became a man, to be firm and just, looking only for his due. No real gentleman wants any favour — he only wants his due.

Must Be True.

"Remember boys," said the speaker, "you must be true to yourself. It will be a proud thing for you to be able to say when you are old men, and looking back over your life — I never betrayed the truth. Purity of character is the greatest thing in the world. General Baden-Powell, in forming this organization, gave new birth to the chivalric idea of the knights' errant of old. Mr. Spence, who had done much good work for Peterborough, deserves great credit for getting this meeting with the object of reviving the Boy Scout movement here."

Very Few Friends.

Rev. C. A. G. Spence remarked that judging from the sparse attendance, the boys of Peterborough had very few friends really interested in their welfare, and that for three weeks he had advertised and appealed to those supposedly prominent and interested in boys' work to attend this meeting. However, he had called the meeting with the object of forming a local association, and that association would be formed before the evening was over. Any credit given to him should be shared equally with his fellow-workers in Brownton, especially Mr. E. J. Whiteside and Horace Blake, secretary and assistant Scoutmaster respectively, who were indefatigable in their efforts to further the work.

Heart-to-Heart Talk.

Mr. Hammond, in a clean cut, characteristic heart-to-heart talk with the boys, said that he was glad the organization fell through in Peterborough, because it showed the boys had learned the lessons inculcated by the Scout movement, and were ready to sacrifice everything, even life itself, when the call came. It would not be long before Canada would have 50,000, instead of 20,000 Boy Scouts. The Boy Scout Association was trying its best to teach the boy to lead a good, clean, manly life. Canada must be carried on as a clean, manly nation, and it was up to the Scouts to do that. What have the Scouts done? It is hard to say what they have not done.

Visit to England.

Speaking of his experience during a recent visit to England, he said that one would find Scouts everywhere—in the Admiralty, in the War Office, on the farms, patrolling the east and south coasts; in fact Lloyd George had said that he scarcely knew how England could have carried on in some respects if it were not for the Boy Scouts.

Here in Ontario, out of 7,000 Scouts, 4,000 were working on farms or actively engaged in agriculture, doing their bit in extra production, and they would soon be lined up preparing to push forward the next Victory Loan.

The Boys' Work.

The boys' work was founded on common-sense. There was no definite religious policy, because every Boy Scout goes to his own church or Sunday School. The Scout must remember that because he is a Scout, much is expected of him — a little more than is expected from the boy on the street. Little publicity was given to the work of Boy Scouts — and they did not want it. Let the deeds show. Let the publicity come from the Scouts themselves by their acts, their willingness to sacrifice, to play the game. The spirit of fair-play, the spirit of gentlemanliness, were the outstanding features of a Boy Scout. Leaders were wanted, and he could assure them they would themselves benefit from their association with boys. They wanted big men. It would take a big man to have the courage to lead 10 boys in Scout uniform through the streets of Peterborough. He was talking to Sir Julian Byng at the front not long ago, and he said that he was longing for the war to be over to go home to his Boy Scouts. He had been head of a troop of 1,000 boys at home, and 976 of them had taken part in the great war, and he was looking forward to the time when he could raise another troop.

He would be glad to see a Local Association formed in Peterborough, and would always be glad to assist in any way.

The meeting terminated with the singing of the National Anthem, followed by the Scout yell, given with a vim by the St. Alban's Troop.

BIG RALLY AT THE Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. is holding its annual Fall Opening Rally on Tuesday evening, the 24th. A splendid programme is arranged, and it is hoped that a large number of members and those who are interested in the work of the Association will be present. The latter part of the evening will be of a social character. The aim of the Opening Rally is to gather the members of the Association together after the holiday season, to outline the work and the objects of the Association, and to give everyone an opportunity to become acquainted. No member or anyone intending to become a member should miss the Rally on Tuesday evening. Come and hear about the classes for this winter, and decide which class you will join.

SWIMMING POOL

On Thursday the 26th and Saturday the 28th an exhibition will be given in the Swimming Pool, showing what has been accomplished in that department of the Y.W.C.A. work during the summer. Many who have not visited the pool or watched the classes will be surprised at the progress that has been made with the pupils. The Swimming Exhibition will be an unique entertainment in Peterborough.

The members of the Life-Saving are asked to come for an extra lesson on Monday evening at 8.30.

MONTREAL CAR RATES

CASH FARE IS SIX CENTS WITH FIVE TICKETS FOR A QUARTER.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21—The new street railway tariff for Montreal, as set forth in a decision handed down by the Public Utilities Commission, provides for a six-cent cash fare, five tickets for a quarter, six workingmen's tickets for a quarter, seven school children's tickets for a quarter, and a straight 15-cent fare after midnight.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS.

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

Don't Give Your Children Raw Milk

Once more, it is urged upon the part of parents, not to give their children Raw Milk, but Pure Pasteurized Milk.

The difference between Pasteurized Milk and Raw Milk is exactly the same as the difference between a soft-boiled egg and a raw egg. Who would like a swallow of SOME Raw Eggs?

PASTEURIZING MILK

TUBERCULOUS COWS.

The extent to which tuberculosis exists in all dairy herds is much greater than is generally supposed. In one herd in the United States, in December last, 73 tuberculous cows were found in a herd of 86. This was a "model" dairy where every expense and precaution had been taken, but was not a certified herd. Our Department of Public Health veterinaries advise us that from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. of the cattle supplying milk to Toronto are tubercular.—Chas. J. Hastings, Toronto's Medical Officer of Health.

A CRIME—Dr. Murphy, of Chicago, the greatest surgeon and probably the greatest doctor in this country, declared that it is a crime to use milk raw when pasteurization makes it safe.

Protect your children, and give them all the Pure Pasteurized Milk they can drink from the Creamery of

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Yes, and Presence of Grover Alexander Would Have Made a Difference

Grover Alexander, pitcher, although he went over to France a few months ago with the 342nd Field Artillery, has not lost sight of what the Cubs have done in the National League, according to a letter received by his pal, Bill Killefer. At the time he wrote the Cubs had not cinched the pennant, but he knew there was no chance for them to lose. He added that baseball dope was scarce where he was, but that he managed to get enough information through the mail from friends to keep him posted on what was taking place.

"The way things are going over here now, Bill, I hope to be back to open the season with you next spring," added Alexander in his letter. "We are full of pep about finishing the war before next spring. Of course, one never knows how soon it will end, but the boys certainly have the spirit to go right through to Berlin without a stop. There are a lot of interesting things to write about the war, but we are not permitted to say anything and we can't even tell where we are, but maybe they'll let me say we can hear the big guns booming on a still night.

"I am keeping the arm in good shape by working out every day. We play quite a few games every week and surely do have lots of fun. It is wonderful recreation for the boys. You cannot imagine the enthusiasm that they show. They have the fans at the parks backed off the boards, and the French and English who are mingled with us are as interested as our boys are. I think baseball will be the natioanal sport over here after the war, judging from the way the soldiers are playing it. Some of them are crude, but they learn in a hurry.

"No doubt you fellows will have the pennant won by the time you get this letter. I am sorry I am not with you and I certainly will be pulling for you in the world's series. Tell Mitch and the boys I wish them all the luck in the world. I would like to pitch one of the games, but I am over here fighting for a great cause and I hope to do my share before I get back.

"Bill, if you ever start over let me give you a little tip. Put in a supply of ready-made cigarettes before getting on the boat. I am rolling my own now, but I hope to be shifted to a place where there is a Y.M.C.A. hut so as to buy some real ones. We had a dandy trip on the water. I did not get sick at all and very few of the boys did. It was a splendid journey and this is a great country, too, although considerably upse by the war and activities that are constantly going on. But I do not think it will last much longer and we'll soon be home."

Stuffy McInnis is of the stuff that baseball players are made. Stuffy was a star ball tosser back in 1905 as a student at the Gloucester (Mass.) high school, and he never got over it. In 1908 he started his professional career on the diamond with the New Bedford team of the Eastern League.

From New Bedford he was shifted to Haverhill, of the same league, and it was while he was with the last-named club that one of Connie Mack's scouts got sight of the youngster, and recommended his purchase. Connie followed the advice, and for a few hundred dollars became possessed of one of the steadiest all-round players the game has ever produced.

Stuffy was an infielder when he joined the Athletics, and for the first three or four years as a Mackman he covered shortstop. "Covered" is the right word in the right place. Few balls indeed there were that came in his general direction without having the lid put all over them. In the course of time Mack discovered a weakness at first base, and he informed Stuffy that he had been promoted and in the future would be expected to guard the region about the first sack.

Stuffy acquitted himself just as well at his new position as he had in his old position, and soon came to be regarded as one of the leading first basement of the big leagues.

Mack finally decided to break up his $100,000 infield, and one after another of the stars who had aided Connie in bringing pennants and world's championships to Quakertown were put on the block and sold to the highest bidder. But Mack held on to Stuffy until this year, when just before the season opened, McInnis was sent to the Boston Red Sox.

Ed. Barrow, manager of the Bostons, as a result of the "ravages" of war, found himself without a third baseman on the eve of the opening of the 1918 campaign. Stuffy was elected to fill the vacancy. And he was filling it, too, to the satisfaction of all concerned, until Hoblitzell, the veteran first baseman of the Red Sox, answered his country's call. Stuffy again was commandeered to close the breach. So McInnis returned to the near corner, where he was a powerful factor in keeping the Red Sox in the van in the race for the pennant.

SPORTING COMMENT

Bob MacDonald, the long hitting golf pro, was in the Boer war and says his golfing eye was of assistance in handling a rifle. Maybe so, but most of us have no occasion to hunt for a rifle ball in the rough.

As to the David Haruming, which was put over by Quinn, of the Browns, at the expense of Huggins, of the Yanks, last winter, Pratt, of the of the Browns, who came to New York in exchange for Nunamaker, Maisel, Gedeon and Hendryx, of the Yanks, outhit each and everyone of the four Verbum sap.

The A. A. U. track and field championship meet at the Great Lakes Training Station on September 20, 21, and 23 will be a hummer if all the entrants who are bent on lowering a record do so. Andy Ward hopes to run the hundred in 9 3-5, Dan Ahearn will try to do better in the hop, skip and jump than his own record of 50 ft. 11 in.; Mike Devaney has his eye on better figures than Meredith's 1m. 52 1-5s for the half mile, and Joie Ray thinks this is the time to beat Taber's record for the mile of 4m. 12 3-5s. Here's hoping for the right track and weather anyway.

BATTLE STORIES FROM FRANCE

THE STICKERS.

By "Z."

"To be perfectly frank," said a young wounded officer who lay in a London hospital, "I am very glad to have some one to talk to. When I came off the boat I did a foolish thing. As you see I've been pretty well messed up by a shell. Well, I thought it would vex people terribly if they saw me in this condition, so I thought it would be better to stay in London rather than go north where they would be visiting me every other day and worrying me. Of course, the thing washed out at once, for they all came down in a body and stayed in London for a bit. I thought I could put up enough camouflage to make them think I was lightly damaged and lend them off till I got up to scratch again. Now they've gone back I feel rather lost.

"If you want me to tell you anything about fighting I shall have to think back for months—back to the show in November. This lot I've got is my second 'Blighty' and the funny thing about it is that it came right bang in the middle of an extraordinary quiet time. We were banging on to a bit of the line, not fighting much, in fact none at all—just digging like blazes and wiring, consolidating our position generally. We sometimes had the excitement of a German raid or getting mixed up with the German when patrolling No Man's Land, but that's pretty much in the day's work and nothing out of the ordinary. In a way, these encounters are a measure of the comparative abilities of our men and the German soldiers. Fritz cannot touch our fellows at any time, least of all in these encounters when personal and individual initiative counts most. Our boys always come out on top and usually bring in a German or so just to prove the fact. I often say that my own men were the finest men in France, but then I suppose most officers have the same opinion of their lot.

The Men Who Stick It.

"There are times when most fellows who are living in the ditches over there cannot help getting sick of it all, the mud, the discomfort, the uncertainty. I take it that I'm pretty average among officers with about two years of scrapping. Sometimes the longing for home and the comfort of it get too much for me—I want to have my feet on the fender before a cheery fire, talk to my mother, and feel that there is nothing facing me in the morning but a quiet time. When these moods came on to me, I used to get out of my funk-hole and stroll along the trench to talk to my men. I used to simply say, 'Hullo, Soanso. How goes it?' and invariably the reply was indomitably cheery. I would give our prize jester a chance, an opening to chaff me. He always played up. I always came back from my round with the feeling that I was an ungrateful beast, that I wasn't worthy of the men I had charge of it.

"I don't think the men ever realized what they did for me. They simply played the game naturally without any pretending. I think my men liked me; at any rate, I've had more kindness from them under the quiet unpleasant conditions of the trenches than I've ever had from anyone except perhaps my mother. And it never varied, this kindness and consideration, it was always the same ready willingness to help. What could one do for men like that except value them highly? There they were, living and working under conditions nothing short of damnable—in spite of all that can be done to make things better—in the mud and slosh, seldom dry of clothing, under shell fire, gas, machine-gun fire, every damn thing to lower their spirits, and they never wavered for a moment—not a single moment.

"Remember this, I am not handing out bouquets to my chaps exclusively. From what I've heard from other officers of the thinking sort my case is pretty general along the line. You have to think of all that long line, stretching to hundreds of miles, with millions of British soldiers along it—and I'll bet there's not one officer who doesn't think exactly the same of his men as I do of mine.

The Home Front.

"I should be inclined to laugh, if it were not so serious, when I think of some people at home and compare them with the men at the front. I am ready to admit that the people at home have backed us up admirably with turning out our supplies, but there are certain sections of the folk at home who appear to have 'got the wind up' as my fellows would say. These folks are inclined to grouse about the shortage of food—I take it theres' a definite shortage— and to fancy they are faced with starvation. There are some, again, who think the Germans are going to break through our line some time soon, that there's going to be such a frightful bust-up soon, that the war is going to finish quite on the wrong side. These folk have never lost the scare-feeling that the Germans are invincible, that they can do whatever they make up their minds to.

"I wish I could take some of these people with the sinking stomachs and plank them in a safe place where they could watch my chaps sticking it. They wouldn't worry about any German offensive, for one thing, and they would feel ashamed at their grousing about food for another. I'm not denying that the Germans may come back at us in great weight and give us a tough time for a bit, but I've seen the Germans over two years, and I've seen the British soldier for the same time. It will certainly be a tough time for us in the trenches, but I haven't the slightest fear that our men will break. I know them too well for that. And what sort of a time do you think it's going to be for the Germans?

"When you boil the whole situation down to its essence, the thing that comes out is not the staying power of the fighting man. It is the staying power of the folks at home. The men in the trenches have never let their folks down and, if you ask me, I don't think they ever will. But it's up to the folks at home to see that the simple soldier is not worried with home affairs. He won't fight with any concentration if he is perpetually thinking that his wife and kids are starving. We know darned well that the German people two years ago were at the same stages as we are now and it's only at the present time they show signs of beginning to crack-up.

"Take it that the Germans do get up a big offensive, and take what is almost a moral certainty —that it washes out, comes to nothing, like Verdun or Ypres. The Germans won't have done anything to hurt the Allies, but they will have done something to crush the last remnants of the spirits of the German people—they'll never stand it. Mind you, I'm not anticipating a revolution in Germany, during the war. You have to remember that the bulk of the German males are under army discipline; it will keep them pinned till the fighting stops. But the moment these men get out of uniform, the moment they are released from the fear of shooting by court-martial, well then look for for squalls.

"All that's a long way from the mess-up of mine. It was a chance 5.9 shell that did it just as I was having some tea—the sort of thing that happens on occasion. . . . A few bones broken, a few punctures, general bust-up, but mending, thank goodness, mending."

Ministry of Sport Is Now Suggested

LONDON, Sept. 20. —The Referee says: And here is Capt. P. F. Warner advocating the establishing of yet another Ministry, a Ministry of Sport, an off-shoot of a Ministry of Health! One of his governing motives if he were at the head of it, as he says he would like to be, would be, needless to say, the furtherance of cricket, not, however, to the detriment of other games.

All the same, he does not think that cricket needs protection, for, he writes: "If that were so, I should feel despondent about England, for the game is a portion of her very heart and its imperial sway links Britons together in whatever part of the world they have their abiding place." So says Capt. Warner, and a great many others will say, "Hear, hear!" He would never think of abusing baseball, he protests, though it seems possible that if so much had not been heard of it lately he might not have written his little article. But baseball, he is convinced, does not accord with the temperament of Britons. They could not welcome "a sport in which the onlookers 'barrack' the players to put them off their game."

With this sentiment I am inclined to fancy the great majority of us will cordially agree; and probably the waving of little flags does not appeal to everybody. Capt. Warner conveys the agreeable information that in the public schools cricket is going stronger than ever, and that the army is very keen on it. This authority on the national game does not anticipate that much change will be found or will be made in it when peace comes and things are settling down, though he thinks it likely that there will be more two-day matches and fewer three-day.

To whomsoever this may concern:

Mr. Marlev Sherris, a member of the vocal faculty of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, is well known as a successful teacher of singing, and as a singer of eminent qualifications. I have pleasure in commending him to the favourable notice of any desirous of engaging the services of a competent instructor in vocal music.

Committees arranging for concerts will find in Mr. Sherris a baritone of much talent and effective vocal gifts, either in concerts or oratorio performances.

(Signed) A. S. Vogt.

Mr. Sherris will visit Peterborough weekly, and is identified with the vocal department of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music.

"FOCHORN" YIELDED.

Decided to Wear Mufti to Please Military Authorities.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—The Militia Department wishes to correct a statement appearing in the morning papers with regard to the withdrawal of the prosecution of Major "Foghorn" McDonald for wearing a uniform when not actively employed in active service. The Department points out that he was prosecuted for this offence under the provisions of an Order-in-Council which provided only for civil proceedings. This Order-in-Council was cancelled by a later one under which he was made liable to military law. The civil prosecution was withdrawn for the purpose of proceeding against Major McDonald for the military offence. As he, after consultation with his lawyer, decided to comply with the law and to wear civilian clothes, the assembly of a court-martial for his trial was rendered unnecessary. Major McDonald was congratulated by the court upon the good judgment which he had shown.

HENRY FORD ON THRIFT.

"By thrift we do not mean the hoarding of money, but the intelligent saving and investing of it. This saving and wise investing—this thrift—must not be confined to mere money and other material wealth, but must be applied to the elements of mind and body—for in thrift to make for growth there must be a surplus of human power, and in just such proportion will the income work for your health and your habits, and also lay up a portion of it to have, and to hold, and to use, when some of the unlooked-for contingencies of life arrive.

"The great street car systems of their country get their power from central stations, direct from generators, but they are also ever storing in batteries a sufficient quantity of current so that when the producing machinery shall be incapacitated for a season there will be something to draw on so that the wire may at all times be kept alive and the cars moving.

"Get a battery for yourself, in the shape of a bank account, and see that day by day something is stored up for the time when either your producing mechanism may be incapacitated or be worn beyond repair."

STRANGE NEWS

GLAD HE MADE THAT BET

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—A bet of a 10-cent cigar against $1,000 made as a result of a joke while the Chicago National League team was training at Pasadena, Calif., last Spring, has been won by "Billy" Killifer, catcher of the Chicago team. The loser, William Wrigley, one of the club's stockholders, wagered the $1000 that the team would not win the National League pennant. Killifer, who accepted it in jest, had forgotten about the bet until he was reminded of it by receiving a check for the amount this morning from Mr. Wrigley.

SOLDIERS LEND A HAND

SEATTLE, Sept. 19.—C. L. Lindsay, a farmer of Chimacum, Wash., found himself unable to get farm hands at any price. When it seemed two days ago, that his crop would be a total loss he went to Fort Worden and laid his predicament before the commanding officer, with the result that the latter granted furloughs to six men, who are helping the farmer in the harvesting.

ALL DENIED OWNERSHIP

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 19.—While the spirit moved the worshippers at the "Holy Roller" Church in Flat Shoals avenue, last night, policemen removed the spirits—that is, a quantity of corn whisky—from under the edifice. Members of the congregation and the preacher were quizzed, but the identity of the owner of the liquid joy remains a mystery.

Some people would not want to be happy if everyone else was.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY BY BROOKLYN SURGEON

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The discovery by a well known Brooklyn army surgeon of a new solution, which promises to revolutionize wound treatment at the battle front and to eradicate the terrors of what is known in wartime surgery as gas gongrene, is reported in a special cable despatch to the Brooklyn Eagle, dated from Paris. The despatch says:

"The discovery of a new solution against gas gangrene was announced yesterday before the American Red Cross Research Society in Paris by Major James T. Pilcher, of No. 121 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn. To gas gangrene in wound infections is due the majority of limb amputations. Major Pilcher's new method of proceeding against it is one of the important medical discoveries of the war.

"Dr. Pilcher, who was formerly surgeon major of the old First Cavalry, and who went to France in June as commander of the Field Hospital, Company No. 108 (formerly the old Third Field Hospital of Brooklyn) has been directing researches during the summer at the American military hospital at Auteuil, near Paris. The new solution already has been used there by Dr. Pilcher, extensively in wound cases of the more serious type, with surprisingly good results It overcomes many of the difficulties inherent in other agents of the same class.

"The chief attributes of the new remedy are simplicity of preparation stability and the ease with which it can be concentrated for transportation. Its strength is easily varied without impairing its properties, and it is suitable for the initial treatment of wounds at dressing stations or evacuation hospitals.

"Quino-formol is the name given to it by the originator of the solution. It contains quinine, acetic and hydrochloric acids, formaline and thymol merged into a strong salt solution.

"Results thoroughly tested and checked at the Auteuil Hospital during the recent influx of seriously wounded troops were evolutionizing in the advance indicated over the present wound treatment procedure many cases of gas bacillus infection being rendered sterile within a few days. In only one instance was a failure experienced, and not a single amputation has had to be performed within the last six weeks. These cases in which the solution was so successfully demonstrated were all received fresh from the battle field within two days from the time of the injury, within which time the majority of the wounded were treated.

"Dr. Pilcher, in telling of the new treatment, modestly emphasized that the new solution is not a cureall nor panacea, but is applicable only where proper surgical methods already have been taken. Application of the solution is identical with that of the Carrel-Dakin treatment, which often has been used in conjunction with quino-formol.

"Gas gangrene has caused more mutilated soldiers than any other infection throughout the war. The importance of this new step toward cure, discovered by one of the best known Brooklyn surgeons, may be readily imagined."

TRINITY YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY.

On Sunday evening, in Trinity Methodist Church, the Rev. F. E. Malott will preach on "Life's Complete Equipment." Young people are especially invited. On Monday night a social evening for the young people of the church and their friends will be held in Reid Street Hall.

AMERICAN DYE MAKERS HURT BY HUN PROPAGANDA

Industry Has Perfected Colours, But is Forced to Fight Prejudice.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—American dye manufacturers who are building up an industry that is dealing a vtial blow to Germany's plans to conquer the world's trade are still fighting the prejudice against American dyes that was started by German propaganda. As a result of this propaganda, it was said, the public is now demanding a standard from American dye manufacturers that they never demanded before the war for a similar class of goods when Germany supplied the United States with all but two per cent of its dyestuffs.

The normal consumption of dyes in this country is about 60,000,000 pounds a year. Before the war the two per cent that was manufactured here was produced from intermediates imported from Germany. Controlling both the dyes and the intermediates, Germany had an absolute monopoly of the industry not only in this country but throughout the world.

Naturally the American manufacturers first developed the colors in greatest demand. The blacks and blues and others most used are being produced in ample quantities by reliable firms that have gone into the business on a permanent basis and not merely for war profits. These colors are of the same identical quality and steadfastness as corresponding German dyes.

Many retail stores throughout the country advertised that they were selling goods without a guarantee as to the fastness of colors, whereas in fact before the war they never guaranteed goods of the same class. German dyes were not guaranteed.

IS A SEVERE BLOW TO GERMANY

The development of the dye industry in the United States is a severe blow to Germany in more ways than one, and it is no wonder that the enemy is using every means possible to discourage the manufacture of dyes in this country. The raw materials from which dyes are produced also are the source of a great many pharmaceuticals and photographical chemicals which have played an important part in German export trade As other countries had no coal tar dye industry to speak of they were practically excluded from this trade.

Dr. Charles H. Herty, secretary of the American Chemcial Society, returning yesterday from the annual convention at Cleveland, Ohio, said that "the meeting was wonderfully inspiring and prophetic of the great future development of chemical industries in the United States The determination to win the war at all costs was the dominating note of the proceedings.

BAN NAMES OF THREE HUN CHEMISTS

The names of three prominent German chemists—Walter Nernst, Wilhelm Ostwald and Emil Fischer—were stricken from the list of honorary members of the society because of the active part they played in the inauguration of gas warfare.

ELUDED THE POLICE OF PORT HOPE

WANTED FOR THEFT OF GOLD WATCH

One Edward King, 14 years of age, commonly called Eddie, proved smarter than his captors last week when he eluded the vigilant police of Port Hope.

Edward worked for Mr. E. Wright, a farmer near Garden Hill and one morning early last week is alleged to have appropriated Mr. Wright's valuable gold watch and $29 in greenbacks. He bought a ticket at Garden Hill for Peterboro and took the C.P.R. Toronto train from here before the local force was aware of the theft. The Toronto police were notified and before night Eddie was in the toils. Port Hope was notified and Captain Colville, Port Hope's chief of police brought the young offender back to Port Hope to stand trial. In the night Eddie did not take kindly to the Police cell and took his departure for parts unknown. Nothing has been heard of him since or of the gold watch

Dont blame the hen if the egg is bad. It was all right when her responsibility ended.

Tipping Has Received Death Blow as Result of War, Says Hotel Manager

Copeland Townsend Declares Un-American, Non-Essential Custom is Rapidly Vanishing Before Great Wave of Thrift and Conservation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.— Tipping—the most un-American of all American institutions — has received its death blow as a result of the war in the opinion of Copeland Townsend, manager of the Majestic Hotel. He believes that the search for the essential in the stress of war time has exposed the lack of good sense in this non-essential nuisance and that when peaces comes the palms of the tip seekers will remain unburdened for ever.

terminate this long attacked habit," terminate this long atacked habit," said Mr. Towsend, "but I believe the it has at last been accomplished and that in hotels and elsewhere America is to be rid of a never ending imposition and anndyance. America will produce no more Rudolphs, who amass a fortune with no other ability than a smattering of French, good judgment in the handling of a tray and the necessary equipment of blue jowls.

"Since the war began there has been a noticeable falling off in tipping. Conservation in that detail is of course considered just as important as conservation in other things. Perhaps back of it all is the spirit of of thrift. The hotel patron gives one-half the size of the tip he formerly gave and invests the other half in Thrift Stamps to help win the war. Moderate tipping was, perhaps, all right, but it was overdone. Instead of being conducive to good service it in many cases checked it. I do not believe that the American public will ever go back to the habit of lavishing big tips."

FRENCH STEAMSHIP SUNK BY SUBMARINE.

Canadian Press.

Paris, Sept. 21. — The French Line Steamship "Admiral Charner," 4600 tons, bound from Bixerta to Mtala, has been torpedoed with a loss of six lives. An unseen submarine fired three torpedoes, two of which struck the ship, but the vessel remained afloat for three hours.

IN MEMORIAM.

HOLMES.—In Loving Memory of Dorothy Vivian Holmes, aged 13 months, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Holmes, died Sept. 21st, 1917.

She is not dead,—the child of our affection,
But gone unto that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
And Christ Himself doth rule.
In that great cloister's stillness and seclusion,
By guardian angels led,
Safe from temptation, safe from sin's pollution,
She lives, whom we call dead.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Pte. Thomas A. Frost, late 93rd Battalion, who died at Shorncliffe Hospital, Sept. 21st 1916.

Though earthly ties are broken,
In life we'll meet no more
My heart is with you dear husband
On yonder distant shore.

Food Board Flashes

Save your sunflower seeds!

There's a reason for it. Sunflower seeds are excellent fare for chickens, and by saving the heads of the giant blooms of the garden you can be a food conserver.

Let the flowers wither on the stalks. Be sure to give the seeds enough time to mature. Then take them off and mix the seeds with your chicken feed.

Sunflower seed has long been used in mixed feed by the manufacturers of poultry mixtures, but the war has put it in the luxury class, and its price is almost prohibitive.

The backyard chicken raiser, however, can have some of the seeds without any expense. They give the chickens a nice glossy appearance and are nourishing into the bargain.

The Enemy is Removing Civic Population From St. Quentin and Placing New Batteries

Eighteen Thousand Turks Captured by the British Forces Operating in Palestine—British Losses Were Small—Ground Regained on the Western Front.

WEEK-END WAR BULLETINS

Monday morning bulletins:

ST. QUENTIN IN FLAMES.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—St. Quentin is in flames. The enemy is reported to have removed the civil population and placed their batteries in the city to combat the steady march of the Allies.

TURKS OVERWHELMED.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—General Allenby's forces in Palestine have taken eighteen thousand prisoners and one hundred and twenty guns, practically annihilating the Turkish forces in the district. The British losses were small.

RECOVERED GROUND.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 23.—In a midnight attack the British regained most of the ground lost between St. Quentin and Cambrai.

LAON SHELLED.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Laon is being shelled by Mangin's Franco-American forces who are now seriously menacing the enemy's defensive line.

Sunday evening bulletin:

EXPLOSIVES DROPPED.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Explosives were dropped on Mannheim and on warves and factories at Karlshue and other important points yesterday.

THRAWLER TORPEDOED.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 22.—The American steam trawler "Kingfisher" was torpedoed and sunk 85 miles off the North Atlantic coast last night. No one was injured.

AMERICANS AT METZ.

WITH AMERICAN ARMY ON LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 22. — There has been no bombardment of Metz, but the forts around Metz have been shelled.

PENETRATED HUN LINES.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—French troops penetrated the German lines last night in Lorraine and returned with prisoners.

GERMANS MAKE STAND.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—British headquarters report to-day that in Epehy sector the British have taken 400 prisoners and made further gains between Venduhile and Bellicourt. Fighting continues heavy and the British have given ground slightly at some points. The Germans are reinforcing in this region and making determined efforts to stop the British advance.

Sunday morning bulletins:

ADVANCE AT ST. QUENTIN.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—British made further advances midway between St. Quentin and Cambrai, east of Epehy, and took a number of prisoners.

FRENCH ACTIVITY.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—North of the Aisne there was quite a heavy artillery fire last night. French detachments raided German lines in Lorraine and in Champagne.

Two German raids on the Vesle front were repulsed.

ON BALKAN FRONT.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—North of Monastir the enemy after artillery barrage, tried to penetrate our trenches but were repulsed. East of Cerna there was stiff fighting throughout the day with alternating successes.

TROTZKY AGAIN.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 22.—A despatch from Kiev says an attempt was made to assassinate Leon Trotzky, Bolsheviki Minister of War and Marine.

AIR LOSSES.

LONDON, Sept. 22. — Nineteen German planes were brought down yesterday. Eleven of ours failed to return.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—French Headquarters' statement says: French have made considerable advance in Soissons region.

German War Office statement admits that the French troops have gained a footing on high ridges north west of Soissons.

RIOTS IN GERMANY.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 22. — Despatches report that serious food riots are in progress at Salzberg, Germany, where a number of persons have been killed and army stores plundered. Reports from other points say that soldiers have joined rioters, demanding more food.

IN CHAMPAGNE SECTOR.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—French Headquarters report heavy gunfire in St. Quentin sector.

RAIDING OPERATIONS.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—American Headquarters report that along the Lorraine front American troops are carrying out numerous raiding operations. A number of new American units have arrived on this front.

Saturday evening bulletin:

PRINCE HAS FLED.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 21. — The Roumanian Crown Prince has fled from Roumania and is reported to be in Moscow, according to Ukrainian newspapers.

FURTHER RETIREMENT.

WITH AMERICAN ARMY ON LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 21. — Fires were observed in the town of Don Martin behind the German lines to-day with heavy movement of men and waggons behind the line. This would indicate a further retirement of the Germans.

WITHDRAWN AGAIN.

BERLIN, Sept. 21.—German advanced troops south of the Somme in the region of St. Quentin were withdrawn on Friday.

ADMITS ENEMY GAIN.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Berlin admits that the French have gained a footing on the high ridges west of Jouy north of the Aisne.

RUMANIA BOILS OVER AGAINST THE GERMANS

Dr. W. S. Solf and General Mackensen Rushed there to Handle Outbreak.

London, Sept. 21. — Dr. W. S. Solf, German Secretary of State for the Colonies, has been ordered to go to Bucharest, and General Mackensen, who has been on leave, will return at once to Roumania as the result of the anti-German outbreak in that country, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Daily Express.

Agitation headed by the Queen.

Amsterdam, Sept. 1. — The North German Gazette, the German semi-official organ, reports that there is serious agitation in Jassy and the unocupied parts of Roumania, in which the Queen is the prime mover to renew the association with the entente.

King Ferdinand, it is asserted, is holding aloof, but under certain circumstances might yield to the pressure.

THE GERMANS HARVEST WHEAT FOR THE FRENCH

Prisoners Set to Work Cutting Grain Which Enemy Failed to Destroy.

RED CROSS MEN IN CHARGE

PARIS, Sept. 23.—The most usefully employed Germans in the world to-day are harvesting wheat in the neighbourhood of Chateau-Thierry for the French people. They are German prisoners, captured at Belleau Woods and other places near where they are now doing compulsory agricultural work. The wheat they are cutting is the same grain they did not have time to destroy because of their rush to get away from the French-American advance at the beginning of the allied offensive on July 18.

A. Y. Scott, a cotton planter of Mississippi, and Robert Hawthorne, a farmer of Mormouth County, N. J., are two Red Cross officers in charge of such agricultural work in the invaded regions, acting under Homer Folks, head of the Division of Civilian Relief. They managed to mobilize 1,200 scythes and fifty horse-drawn machines for work near Chateau-Thierry, in which region alone 400,000 bushels of wheat now are being cut by German prisoners.

They took me the other day to this reconstruction front, so recently the battlefront, where now the rattle of mowing machines and the singing of scythes succeed the cracking of rifle fire and the banging of machine guns and artillery. Needless to say, the former German fighters engaged in this work are much more contented than when trying the hopeless task of stopping the advance of the American troops on those same fields.

Their work, however, is not entirely without danger, because of the many unexploded shells and grenades gathered about the fields, which would be set off by a blow of the scythe or mowing machine; so one man goes ahead of each harvester, gingerly picking up and removing each shell. One of these pilots, the other day, came across the body of a dead German whose comrades fled so quickly they had no time to bury him.

Another of the many features of this agricultural work of the American Red Cross is the renting of 4,000 acres of land at Montefaut Chateau, to which agricultural refugees are sent. The land is sub-let to them, with small allotments of farming tools sold or lent, with the understanding that they plant and harvest one crop while awaiting the release of their own farms from the invaders in Northern France. Elsewhere in the recently reconquered country the Red Cross is lending money or tools to the returned farmers till they are able to collect damage funds or secure loans provided by the French Government for such cases.

To see the return of the refugees to their demolished homes is even more pathetic than their arrival in Paris during the invasion last spring. I saw one old woman with two grandchildren returning to what had been their home in the demolished villages of Bouresches, near Belleau Woods. They were mounted atop a heap of household goods in a cart, drawn by a small donkey, the same outfit they had escaped with. There is nothing in the absolute level heaps of destroyed houses and walls to distinguish a former habitation from another.

Donkey Finds Ruined Home.

The old woman seemed puzzled as to where she had lived, but the donkey knew. He stood stock still in front of what had been a stable door. The old woman evidently was satisfied to take the donkey's word for it. She and the children climbed down and unloaded their goods, making for themselves an emergency shelter out of bits of wreckage, to await the time when the real rebuilding begins. It was for this old woman and hundreds like her that wheat is being cut by the former vandals with the American Red Cross mowing machines.

The eagerness of these peasants to return to the destroyed villages is sometimes embarrassing. They are grateful for all help extended to them, but the one thing they want most of all is to get home. It is still home, no matter to what extent the demolition may be. There is not one of them but would rather be exposed to rain and weather in a makeshift shelter on on his own land, than to stay a day longer than necessary in the barracks or other refugee shelters.

It was at Chateau-Thierry on this trip that I met an artist named Arman Jean, living there near the birthplace of Fontaine. When Jean fled last March, he left a sign in the library, stating that the German invaders had been in that same house in 1870, but had not destroyed his books. This hint to the present invaders was taken, for the books and other articles in the artist's home were not mutilated.

Jean expressed the hope that the American people would subscribe to a fund for a great monument at Chateau Thierry to mark the scene of their first big, victorious participation in this war."

SIAMESE FOR WESTERN FRONT.

Contingent of New Ally's Soldiers Arrive in France to Join in War.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Siamese troops, with a general and his staff, have arrived in France to participate in the war.

A call for volunteers was issued by the Siamese Government last September to augment the regular army, which consisted of ten divisions. Siam declared war on Austria and Germany in June, 1917.

John W. Sterling Left $15,000,000

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 19.—Examination by Yale officials into the estatt of the late John W. Sterling of New York city, which was left to Yale, subject to a few minor bequests has led to the official statement that the amount which the university will receive is valued conservatively at $15,000,000. As the entire endowment of Yale is only $22,000,000, the Sterling gift has practically doubled Yale's possessions.

Officials of the university state that no dispostion of the property has been decided upon. The will of Mr. Sterling indicates that it is to be used largely for memorial buildings. It can be stated on high authority that the use at present favored is the erection of a new general university library. It is possible that a new graduate school also will be established. If the Sterling bequest will allow both the construction of a new library and the erection of a graduate school plant this disposition of the millions is most likely.

At the university the statement was made to-day that the legacy had "supplied Yale with the necessary funds by which her expansion and development of the next generation may be helped rather than furnishing a financial prop to her existing institutions or assistance to her in her annual need to make both ends meet as she goes along."

James O. Bloss, a lifelong friend; George H. Church, with whom he was closely associated professionally, and the Farmers Loan and Trust Company of New York have been named by him as executors and trustees.

Barring possibly the Gordon McKay bequest for the development of science of Harvard, the ultimate total of which, it is understood, is not yet known, and the bequest some years ago of James Campbell of more than $20,000,000 for the specific advancement of medical science at the St. Louis University, which is not to be released for years to come, the bequest of John W. Sterling to Yale is said to me the greatest in the history of American universitites. Both of these famous bequests were for science.

It will be about a year before the university begins to have the use of the gift. The death of Mr. Sterling occurred July 5 during a visit to the Fishing Lodge of Lady Mount Stephen in Canada.

CINQUEVALLI IS DEAD THE FAMOUS JUGGLER

Paul Cinquevalli, known the world over as a juggler, died suddenly at his home. He had just started playing the pianola, when he was seized with faintness and collapsed, says Lloyds Weekly News.

Born at Lissa, in Poland, he was the son of a miller. He ran away from home at the age of thirteen and joined a performer whom he had seen at the theatre, and whose name, Cinquevalli, he adopted. His first public appearance was made at Odessa as a performer on the high wire, and he toured all over Europe until he revisited Russia. Meeting with an accident at Petrograd, he abandoned trapeze work for juggling, and soon became one of the first exponents of this particular form of entertainment.

He made his first appearance in England at Covent Garden Theatre in 1885, then open as a circus, and the following twenty years appeared at leading variety theatres in all parts of the world.

Triumph of Patience.

Cinquevalli would practice his various feats at least two hours every day, but much labour was expended in perfecting some of the accomplishments which, when brilliantly executed, seemed simplicity itself. "It is not quite so easy as it looks," he confessed on one occasion. "It took me eight years to learn how to balance a couple of billiard balls on a cue, and I have spent months, sometimes years, in learning to perform other feats."

In learning to catch on a plate an egg thrown high in the air, he broke as many eggs as would have stocked a flourishing provision shop for a week. Once he gave a trapeze performance from a balloon, and was carried out to sea.

He had many narrow escapes. When he appeared at the Crystal Palace before the Shah of Persia and the Prince and Princess of Wales, afterward King Edward and Queen Alexandra, he sustained a sever strain, and retired for a time, but a clever surgical operation enabled him to resume his stage work.

Retired at Beginning of War.

His clown assistant "Walter," who was also a very adroit juggler, died in 1910, and Cinquevalli himself retired at the beginning of the war.

In private he occasionally proved his ability as a conjurer, but conjuring was a mere hobby with him, while juggling was his business. He was also an accomplished linguist, speaking eight languages, a skilled musician, and an amusing story teller.

He always said that English and American audiences were more appreciative than others, because they were more capable of recognizing the difficulties of a feat.

A SIGN OF VICTORY.

Letter on Oat Leaves Impresses the Farmers.

Among the list of munitions of war, which are vital to victory, there is none more important than the oat crop of Canada, the food for man and beast and one of the most valuable of the farmer's field crops, and in the oat plants themselves this year many people profess to find a portent of coming victory for the Allied arms.

For some weeks, observant people in the agricultural districts, have pointed out a curious phenomenon in connection with the structure of the leaves of the oats, which many claim was observed the year the British arms triumphed in South Africa. The sign or portent is to be found on the flag leaf of the oats. The sign can be variously interpreted as the letter "B" or the figure "8" some of the leaves looked more like the one and some the other.

Does it mean that "victory" is coming to the British arms in 1918? Such is the interpretation given to the phenomenon by the superstitious, who declare they looked in vain for the sign last year and the year before, remembering the portent of victory in 1902.

The sign may be seen by anyone. It is to be found on the flag leaf, which is the leaf nearest the head of the grain. To find it, pull the leaf, in doing which it is unnecessary to injure the grain, and spread the lance-shaped frond flat on a table under a strong light. It makes no difference which side of the leaf is uppermost as the mysterious sign can be seen on either side. About one-third of the distance, from the place where the leaf joins the plant to the tip, there is usually, but not always, an appreciable narrowing of the leaf, and right at this point, impressed through the leaf, as it were, as though with a large type, is the letter "B" or the figure "8," plain to the eye.

One of the persons interested in the phenomenon, said recently: "They are all talking about it all over the country, they say that at the time of the Boer War, the letter 'V' which presages 'victory' was observed in similar circumstances on the oat leaves.

'Some say it is a "B" and some say an "8" and many believe that it means 'victory' for 'Britain,'" he said. "A farmer pointed it out to me yesterday and it's there all right.

Another explanation of the sign which finds favor with some, is that it is connected with the new star, for many people believe that astral visitors have a special influence on crops. The grapevine is supposed to be peculiarly susceptible to the influence of comets, and wine produced in the years when comets, in the course of their erratic orbit, pass the earth is supposed to be better than in other years and the supposition during last century has been proved on many occasions, commencing with the visit of Halley's comet in 1811. "Comet Port" was especially sought by connoisseurs of wine.

And comets themselves, whether or not they can influence the growing crops, are believed in many lands to presage war. An old Scotsman now in the city, who remembers the Crimean war, remembers also the visit of the comet that year.

The strange part of the appearance of the sign on the oat leaf this year is that it should be this year. With the portent of victory in South Africa in 1902 it may safely be assumed that eager eyes scanned the leaves last year and the year before and people there are who see in the sign the interpretation of the recent war despatches which tell of the defeat of the German arms and the discomfiture of the Crown Prince's forces.

Stories of the discovery of the sign are not confined to any one field or any one locality, but are widely scattered over the farms of old Ontario.

Labor Lost.

"How is that expert in genealogy you hired?"

"Nothing to him."

"How's that?"

"He has traced my ancestry back fifty years without finding anybody worth mentioning."

A VOICE FROM THE PAST

(By Captain J. A. F. Ozanne).

There is a saying, attributed to St. John Chrysostom, to the effect that there is nothing new under the sun, and those who study history are constrained to admit the truth of that saying. No doubt it is because of this that history so frequently repeats itself. And it is just because history does repeat itself that a writer may be excused for going back a matter of nearly twenty-two centuries to find a soldier trying to persuade his country not to make peace with an enemy who is still unbeaten and who has proved himself to be incapable of keeping treaties.

That soldier was one Regulus, and he was a Roman General. In the year B.C. 256, during the first Punic War, he defeated the Carthaginians. The following year Regulus was defeated by Xanthippus and was taken prisoner. The Carthaginians sent him on an embassy to Rome to ask for peace. Regulus strongly advised the Roman Senate to come to no terms with an enemy who bore so faithless a character as did the Carthaginians. He then returned to Carthage and was put to death by torture.

Warned of Danger.

About the year B.C. 19, the great Latin poet, Horace, published the three books of his Odes, and in the Fifth Ode of the third book one can read the arguments of Regulus. That Ode is all the more worth reading because to-day Regulus speaks to this country as earnestly as ever he spoke to the Roman Senate, when he warned his hearers of the danger and futility of trusting to a peace based on Punic faith. Rudyard Kipling in "A Diversity of Creatures," represents Mr. King of Stalky and Co. fame as saying that the lines of the Ode from the eighteenth to the fortieth ought to be written in blood, and one almost wonders what Mr. King would have said about those lines if he had spoken in these days.

Regulus told the Senate that it had been his lot to see the standards of Rome displayed as war trophies in Carthaginian temples, he too had seen the sufferings of his fellow-countrymen who were prisoners in enemy hands: "I have beheld the arms of our citizens wrist-bound behind their free-born backs," and he asks the Senate if they labour under the delusion that these men ransomed with mere money will come back better soldiers. He points out to the weak and shifty politicians of his day that there is such a thing as honour, and that "the wool once dyed can take no second hue."

Once a Soldier.

Regulus, of course, spoke from the soldier's point of view. In his eyes, once a soldier allows true courage to fall away, trusting to a false enemy's word because it is convenient to do so at the time, his courage has gone for good. He bluntly says that a soldier cannot mix up peace with war, and that if he is frantic to save his life at any cost it is absurd to suppose that he will fight valiantly in some future war. One might as well expect a hind which has been tied up to turn and fight as soon as she has been set free. That was how Regulus summed up the situation, although he knew that he was cutting his own throat with every word that he uttered.

Hold Good To-day.

That great Roman General's words hold good to-day. His spirit is the spirit of the British Army at the front. The reason is that the fighting man will not see the work which he has done for his country thrown away by his own countrymen if he can help it, even if such an attitude cost him his life. To-day England finds herself pitted against an enemy who is unscrupulous, mercenary, capricious, and faithless, just the same as the Carthaginians of old. Although the majority of the country is agreed that Prussian militarism must first be utterly destroyed, there are some who, in their ignorance, think that the German can be trusted and that a lasting peace can be founded on a compromise. The British soldier, who knows the German as he really is, steps forth like another Regulus and bars all talk of peace until Germany has been beaten—even although he knows that going on means for him yet another winter in the trenches, if not his own death.

Ku Klux Clan Makes Appearance Again

Activities of Secret Organization in South on Side of Loyalty.

According to an article in the New York Times by Mr. Littell McClung, the dread "Invisible Empire" is again abroad in many districts of the South. The activities of the secret organization are all on the side of loyalty, fortunately; and, as to the seventies, public sentiment is said to be strongly behind it. The most notable instances of recent interference occurred at Mobile, Ala., when a threatened strike of stevedores and washerwomen was prethreatened with revolvers and the prisoner removed from the wagon. What became of him after this is not recounted, but the strike was averted and war work proceeded as usual.

At Birmingham, Ala., a strike leader was planning for a big walk-out of workers at some mills in the suburbs. The strike, however, never materialized, and the man has never been heard of since. The Klan professes to be on the look-out for alien enemies, for the disloyal and for strike agitators. If there are no labour troubles, the Klan goes after slackers and idlers. A preliminary warning is given, which, if not heeded, is followed by more drastic action. In Montgomery, the Klan has warned off all immoral women from Camp Sheridan.

The members of the secret society are said to be drawn from the best men in the community, and the long white robe, covering both body and face, is worn as in the old days. Horses and automobiles are similarly covered. By this terrifying costume it is the object of the Klansmen to strike fear into their victims as to obviate further drastic action; if this should fail of its intended effect, however, the members are all sworn to carry out their purposes without fear of the consequences.

The re-creation of this formidable body, after an inactivity of fifty years, is one of the most extraordinary outcomes of the war. All who have seen the Birth of a Nation picture can readily conceive what an immense power for good or ill is possessed by a secret association such as this. It is a matter for profound thankfulness that its influence is being exerted in the interests of the Allied cause.

THE MAPLE LEAF.

'Tis never the need of tears for you!
You went as you wished to go—
When the skies of France were April blue
As the Northern Spring your boyhood knew—
With your forehead toward the foe!

Under the rim of the red barrage
Where the tall colonials came
You found the Grail of your questing lad—
And your soldier-soul was only glad
In the midst of mortar-flame!

'Tis never the need of tears for you
Nor the wistful words of grief!
For death—ah, hush, to the heart of me!—
But bound with the golden fleur-de-lis
The bronze of the maple leaf!

For death, who reaps for the shining sheaf
Of the symbols which are best,
But stooped, in a splendor breathless—brief
To seek the sign of the maple leaf—
Which I wear against my breast!

'Tis never the need of tears for you!
With your face set toward the foe,
While the clear colonial bugles blew
Your last charge, lad—for your last adieu!
You went as you wished to go!

SOLDIER MASCOT'S TRAVELS.

Frank Jenkins Has Been With C.E.F and American Army.

Not yet fifteen years of age, but tall and strong, Frank Jenkins has travelled some, and on his own hook, too. He is now back in Toronto, satisfied that he's seen all he wants to see of the world for some time to come, and ready to settle down.

Selling newspapers since eight years of age, when war broke out he frequented Exhibition camp and later Camp Borden, in pursuit of his trade. Then, 12 years of age, without acquainting his parents of his intention, he departed for England as official mascot of the 180th (Sportsmen's) Battalion. His home folks got their first clue to his whereabouts when they spotted him in a moving picture showd in a local theatre, showing the battalion sailing from St. John. Because of his tender age, Frank was sent back from England, arriving Febuary 28, 1917, and he has the regular C.E.F. discharge paper, showing that his conduct while with the corps was good.

Less than a week after his return home, he disappeared again on March 3, and was not heard of again until recently, when he returned to his home. From Toronto he had gone to a farm for six months, then to Winnipeg, where he got a job, and from that city he went to the States with a travelling show, winding up at a U. S. army camp in Texas, where he was adopted as mascot by a Machine Gun Battalion. He hoped to go with them to France, where he thought he might meet his father, but the officers said the army regulations would not permit of taking him on the transport, so he dropped off at Buffalo and returned home.

His father, Thomas Jenkins, served with the 12th Battalion overseas, but was invalided home and discharged six months ago.

WOMAN WORKS 15 HOURS A DAY

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Peru, Ind.—"I suffered from a displacement with backache and dragging down pains so badly that at times I could not be on my feet and it did not seem as though I could stand it. I tried different medicines without any benefit and several doctors told me nothing but an operation would do me any good. My druggist told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with the result that I am now well and strong. I get up in the morning at four o'clock, do my housework, then go to a factory and work all day, come home and get supper and feel good. I don't know how many of my friends I have told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. ANNA METERIANO, 36 West 10th St., Peru, Ind.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THE TROUBADOURS.

Probably the most cheerful and picturesque figures of the age of chivalry were the troubadours who sang in southern France and northern Italy. There have been minstrels and strolling poets before and since them, from the time of Homer to something very like the present, but the troubadours are in many ways distinct. They were among the first indications of a return to culture and they bloomed like flowers in the midst of the darkness and ignorance of the Middle Ages, appearing first among the vine-clad hills and vales of lovely Provence in southern France. A hint of their charm lies in the very music of their name which comes from the Provencal verb trobaire, to find or to invent, and refers to the finding of rhyme, in which they took delight, after the severe reign of the quantitative measure of classic Greece. North of the Loire, by a similar process with a similar French verb, they were called trouveres. They sang in Provencal tongue, an ephemeral one founded on the decadent Latin, out of which grew the Italian, Spanish, French and Portugese Languages not to mention the influence it exerted in the formation of English. Chaucer using the minstrel songs as his first models. The troubadours occupied much the same position in France and the south of Europe as did the Minnesingers in Germany, and the minstrels bard of England.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Roman Scarf

By EMILY S. WINDSOR

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

Miss Minerva's knitting fell to the floor, as, rising hastily, she adjusted her spectacles, and peered out of the window.

The door leading into the kitchen was open, and Elizabeth Ann had seen Miss Minerva's agitation. "I wonder what it is this time," she muttered, as she poured hot water into a pan, preparatory to washing the dinner dishes.

"Yes'm," she answered in response to Miss Minerva's excited call of "Elizabeth Ann!"

"That horrid dog from the next place is chasing Peter. Run and put the little beast out!"

As Elizabeth Ann crossed the yard, a large black cat, closely followed by a Scotch terrier, whisked past her and in at the kitchen door. The dog wagged its tail, and frisked around Elizabeth Ann.

"Oh, Flip, why do you worry poor, old Peter so? Go home, sir," she said severely. The terrier trotted after her to a remote corner of the yard, where he submissively crept through a gap in the fence which separated Miss Minerva's property from the adjoining place.

A man at work on the other side threw down his hoe, and came up. He was tall and spare and was clad in blue jean trousers and checkered shirt.

"Flip tresspassin' again?" he asked.

"He was chasin' Peter," said Elizabeth Ann. "It was the chickens this morning, Mr. Dobbs."

"Keeps you pretty busy, doesn't it?"

Elizabeth Ann laughed. "I don't mind it, it's fun," she said.

"She always did set great store by Peter, but Flip can't abide him. Still he wouldn't hurt the critter."

"Miss Minerva doesn't like dogs," said Elizabeth Ann laughing again.

Mr. Dobbs chuckled. "I reckon it's more the dog's owner that she doesn't like," he said.

"I must go back," said Elizabeth Ann in a regretful tone. "Good-bye, for now, Mr. Dobbs."

"Mighty interestin' child for only bein' eleven, too," said Mr. Dobbs, reflectively, stroking his grizzled beard, as he looked after Elizabeth. "Wonder what Miss Minerva Collins 'd say if she knew me and her is such friends."

As he resumed his hoeing his thoughts went back to the years when the relations between him and Miss Minerva had not been in their present strained condition; to that unlucky evening when a discussion arose as to the proper mode of baptism. He had contended that sprinkling was sufficient, and Miss Minerva had held out for immersion. That was long before Elizabeth Ann had come to live with her aunt. Mr. Dobbs had often told her about the quarrels.

"And she's never taken any notice of me since. I tried once to make it up. And it was strange about that, too," he had added thoughtfully. Elizabeth Ann had wondered how he had tried to make it up, but had not liked to ask.

"Did you see him on his own side before you came back?" asked Miss Minerva when Elizabeth Ann went back to her interrupted dish washing.

"Yes'm," answered Elizabeth Ann. "Nasty little beast!" ejaculated Miss Minerva. When the last dish had been placed in the closet, and the kitchen put in spotless order, Elizabeth Ann went into the sitting room.

"If everything's done you may have the afternoon to yourself," said Miss Minerva, who was now tranquilly knitting, and Peter curled up on a cushion near her.

Elizabeth Ann stood awhile looking out of the window. She was undecided whether to go down to the fence and talk with Mr. Dobbs, or to go up to the attic. But she saw that it was beginning to rain, and reflected that Mr. Dobbs would not continue hoeing, for he had been having rheumatic twinges lately. So with some regret, she decided in favor of the attic, for, great as were the charms which the latter place had for her, Mr. Dobbs' society possessed a stronger attraction. He told her such interesting stories, and listened to all of her confidences so attentively, and he never told her not to be foolish, as Miss Minerva had done when she had ventured to communicate her thoughts to her.

There was an old-fashioned trunk of odds and ends which Miss Minerva had told her she could have to play with provided "she kept them tidily."

Elizabeth Ann had not yet explored to the bottom of the trunk. She would do so today. There were pieces of ribbons and lace, ends of embroidery, some bunches of artificial flowers and various other articles of cast-off finery. Under all, on the bottom of the trunk something was folded in white tissue paper. Elizabeth Ann opened it, and a long Roman striped silk scarf fell out in glistening folds. It was soft and fine, and of beautiful coloring, the ends deeply fringed. Elizabeth Ann gave an exclamation of delight. She had a passion for rich colors, and this was the most beautiful thing she had ever seen. Severe plainness of dress was part of Miss Minerva's creed.

Elizabeth Ann smoothed out the soft folds again and again. It would make such a lovely sash, she thought. How sad her aunt ever thrown it aside? She passed it about her waist and tied it in a bow with loops that fell to the bottom of her skirt. A ray of sunlight lashed through the attic window. Why, it had not rained much after all. She would run down to the orchard, and see if Mr. Dobbs were out. She must show that scarf. Mr. Dobbs liked pretty things, too. So she crept quietly downstairs, and avoiding the sitting room, went out of a side door. If Miss Minerva saw her with the scarf on, she would tell her not to be foolish.

Miss Minerva was still knitting placidly, and Peter purred at her feet, when, chancing to glance out of the window, she beheld a sight which made her suddenly sit up stiff and erect in her chair. Mr. Dobbs crossing her yard! He came on with a long, rapid stride that in a few moments brought him to her sitting room door, which he opened after a warning knock. Miss Minerva turned her stern gray eyes upon him in cold inquiry. He held a gay-colored silk scarf in his hand.

"Minerva, why didn't you send it back as I asked you, and then I'd a known—and not waited and waited as I did for months?" he asked reproachfully, as he looked alternately at the scarf and Miss Minerva.

The latter made no answer, and Mr. Dobbs went on: "Our not agreein' on sprinklin' or 'mersion made no difference. When a man asks a woman to marry him, he naturally looks for an answer."

Miss Minerva now found voice. "Jonathan Dobbs will you tell me what all this means?" she asked frigidly.

He held out the scarf. "Why didn't you send it back, if you didn't want me?"

Miss Minerva stared at him in ever-growing astonishment. "I don't know what you are talking about. Send it back? I never saw the thing before."

"Is that really so, Minerva?" he asked eagerly.

"It's not my habit to lie," replied Miss Minerva, icily.

"I've often had misgivings that there was some mistake. I never had the courage to ask you about it, for you know how you treated me when we met. Turned away your head and—"

Miss Minerva rose impatiently. "What are you talking about? What have I to do with that silk thing?"

"Well, Minerva, I'll go over the whole thing. I 'spose you remember our argument about baptisin', I talked the way I did just to tease you, but you took it all for earnest. Now, I had had it in mind for a long time to ask you a certain question, and a day or two after our misunderstanding I was down to the city on business and saw a lot of silk things like this in a shop window, and the ladies was a wearin' them around their necks—so I just thought I'd buy one and send it to you, and at the same time ask you that question. I writ a little note and sent with it. It was tellin' you if you was willin' to be Mrs. Dobbs to wear it to meetin' the next Sunday, and if not to send it back. But you didn't wear it to meetin', and you didn't send it back."

As Miss Minerva listened, her stern face relaxed and a softened light shone in her eyes. Before Mr. Dobbs had finished, she turned her gaze to the window, and there was a little flush in her cheeks.

"I never had a note from you, and I never saw that scarf before," she said quickly.

"I sent them by the hired man."

"That was the summer Cousin Mattie Simmons was with me. Likely I was out, and he left them with her. You know what a scatter-brain she is." The color had deepened in Miss Minerva's cheeks, and there was none of her accustomed severity of manner.

She looked down at the scarf in Mr. Dobbs' hand. "But where did you get it now?" she asked suddenly.

"Elizabeth Ann found it in your attic, and—"

"Elizabeth Ann!" repeated Miss Minerva.

"Never mind about her, Minerva—Will you take it? You know the conditions."

"It is a good quality of silk," she said quietly. "But you know, Jonathan, I'm too old to wear such gay colors."

Mr. Dobbs laughed contentedly. "Please yourself, Minerva, so long as you take it."

Fresh, rich milk that "keeps" for months

It may be used in every way that ordinary milk is used.

But it is richer than ordinary milk, for Carnation Milk is evaporated to the consistency of cream.

Its quality may be judged by the fact that it whips beautifully when thoroughly chilled.

MADE IN CANADA

In coffee, tea, cocoa, with cereals or fruit it is used undiluted, as it comes from the can. Add an equal quantity of water to Carnation Milk and it is a wholesome, rich milk—pure and safe for the children to drink.

Remember, Carnation Milk is not artificially sweetened.

It "keeps" perfectly, because it is sterilized. No sugar or preservatives are added. And nothing but water is taken away.

So when you add water to Carnation Milk you "bring back" the original, fresh milk.

Used in preparing foods, cooking, creaming vegetables, soups, gravies, Carnation Milk imparts a creamy richness without the need of adding butter.

Carnation Milk takes the place in your home of cream and milk. Saves the waste of those perishable foods. Improves every dish you prepare with milk. Enables you to have always at your command a perfectly safe, rich milk, in just the quantity you may need. Order from your grocer—the Carnation Milkman. Try three or four cans—the new tall can (16 oz.) is the most economical.

More's Capable Daughter.

The demand that women shall be paid men's wages for men's work may represent a desire for justice rather than a desire for gain; but money fairly earned is sweet to the hand and heart. "An open field, an even start, no handicap, no favors and the same goal for all." Which reminds us that Sir Thomas More had a clearer perception of the value of woman's work and a finer sense of justice than some of his sex possess. "My Meg is better unto me than ten sons," he said, "and it maketh no difference at harvest time whether the corn were put into the ground by a man or a woman."—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic Monthly.

Condor Largest Bird of Prey.

The eagle is commonly spoken of as the largest of the birds of prey. This is wrong. The largest is the condor, a South American vulture. The condor is a native of the great mountain chain of the Andes, especially in Peru and Chile. It lives in a region of perpetual snow, from 9,000 to 16,000 feet above sea level. The length of the male condor is about 48 inches, and the span of wings when extended is nine to ten feet. The plumage of the male is glossy black, with gray on the wings and white on the margins of the wing coverts.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr.Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

LOCUST TREES.

They Are Very Easy to Raise and Yield Valuable Timber.

No wood is easier or more quickly grown than the common locust, and but few if any kinds of timber are more valuable to their owners at this time of need in lumber that has a commercial value.

Curiously enough locust trees will grow in almost any soil. They are easily started and can be transplanted without danger of loss. They also may be grown in out of the way or waste places where the soil is unfit for cultivation, and they grow so rapidly that in a few years a locust grove will have trees that are large enough to be made into posts for fencing or lumber for furniture or house finishing.

Locusts bear the most honey laden flower carried by any tree extensively grown in America, and where there are plenty of locusts and bees in the same community there will be a heavy yield of honey.

Locust posts have been known to remain in the ground for fencing purposes for a period of sixty years, and when removed the bark was not decayed, and the wood was almost as solid as iron.

The latest use for locust is in the manufacture of fine furniture and interior finishing of fine residences. The wood has a grain and color not found in any other timber.—New York Journal.

Two Trees.

The two navel orange trees that are the parents of all of California's millions of Washington navel trees are still alive. One of the trees is in the garden of Frank Miller's Mission inn, where it was transplanted by Theodore Roosevelt when he was president. The other is at the head of the famous Magnolia avenue at Riverside. The two trees were sent by the government to L. C. Tibbetts, a Riverside colonist, in 1873. Then followed the development of California's great navel orchards.—San Francisco Chronicle.

TWO FINE SHOTS.

They Won Fame For the Marksman as a Lion Killer.

A good story is told of a trading agent in Nyassaland. He was obsessed with a particularly real horror of lions. One of these brutes began to eat up the natives of the nearby village, doing terrible havoc. The agent barricaded himself in his room and slept with six native watchmen on duty in case the lion should try to break into his house.

One night he thought he heard the lion prowling around and promptly fired out of the window, knocking a hole in the government boat. The following morning he was astonished to see what had happened.

That night he again heard sounds which seemed to foretell the presence of the lion. He seized his rifle and fired and this time succeeded in bagging the district officer's favorite mule at the first shot.

A certain well known sportsman, who shall be nameless, was hunting in the district and heard the story. He wrote to the agent and congratulated him on shooting his first lion. The agent rose to the occasion and now silences all skeptics by producing the letter. He has since acquired quite a reputation as a lion hunter on the strength of this testimonial.—Captain W. Robert Foran in American Boy.

Birds' Eggs.

Even the same kind of bird often lays eggs that show a great difference in their marking. And often this is true of the same individual bird. At least one long, infertile egg is included in the clutch of a house sparrow, besides several eggs that are of a darker or lighter shade than each other. One may find a dozen clutches that contain some one type quite different from the rest. The tree sparrow also lays one always different from the others in the clutch. Some birds always lay an uncolored egg, such as the golden eagle, osprey and others. Some birds' eggs vary much more than others in color and markings. A result of experience shows that the following are among the common birds that lay eggs which vary considerably: Robin, linnet, rook, skylark, cuckoo, hawk and snipe.—Chicago Herald.

The Mound of Death.

Tracy Robinson, an American machine-gunner and member of the "Princess Pats," the regiment whose heroism at Ypres has made them immortal, told the following account of the action at St. Eloi, to Wm. G. Shepherd, who writes in Everybody's: "After the Germans, wearing Scotch kilts, tricked the brigade that was holding the mound and routed them, our general took us out to recapture the mound. It was night. The ride brigade went out first and ran into a nest of German machine-guns. We came next; and the machine-guns got us, also. Our machine-guns were turned on to the mound, but we soon discovered that the Germans were in St. Eloi itself. A signal was given to the night-rocket men to illuminate the town. They sent white rockets into the air and, by this light, we fought through the streets of the village. It was hand-to-hand fighting; we couldn't use the machine-guns. We lost plenty of men, but the German dead were piled in the streets. Both sides used dead bodies for barricades. I saw heaps of German corpses; you had to jump over them as you ran about. All the time the white rockets were lighting the streets and electric hand torches flickered in alleyways, back yards and emptied houses as the man-hunt for Germans continued. We took St. Eloi before dawn; every German left in it was dead. And then we got the mound into our own hands again."

Canada's Population.

Whatever practical purpose may be served by the recent registration of the population of Canada sixteen years of age and upwards, the willing spirit of the people to comply with Government decrees has been convincingly proved. More than 5,000,000 men and women have registered. As the census of 1911 showed that 40 per cent. of the population was under 16 years, it would appear that the population of Canada is today not less than 8,000,000. The population as returned on the last census was 7,206,000, so that an increase of about 800,000 has occurred in seven years, or 11 per cent., without counting some 350,000 soldiers who have gone overseas. In the decade 1901-1911, the increase in population was 1,835,000; so that when allowance is made for the heavy falling off in immigration since 1914, there may be upwards of eight million people now in Canada.

Giving Veterans Their Rights

LIEUT. FRED HOLMES, Ontario officer in charge of industrial surveys in the Departmen of Soldiers' Civil Re Establishment, describes how two "total disabilities" have made good in spite of handicaps, as follows:

A great many people imagine tha the returned soldiers are not trying but a couple of instances will convince that a majority of them are; and that a majority of them are not only trying, but that a man with a terrible disability can still make good. We have one chap in Canada who had both legs blown off and one eye out. He was a married man with two children. He waddled in to see us and asked for a course of training. We said: "Why, you are 100 per cent. disabled!" He said: "I can do something." So we took him to a wholesale jewelry house and gave him a course in silver polishing. He has been there about five and a half months and has not only become proficient in silver polishing, but has added soldering to it, is taking up gilding, and the firm has absorbed him at $75 a month, in addition to which he receives his 100 per cent. disability pension.

One man whose case I think is nothing short of remarkable is Capt. Ed. Baker. Capt. Baker had just graduated from Queen's University as an electrical engineer when the war broke out. He was 21 years of age. He immediately enlisted, but his people fought against his going. He was kept in Canada for a year. Finally when the second or third contingent was called he went with No. 4 Canadian Field Company, which is attached to the Canadian Engineers.

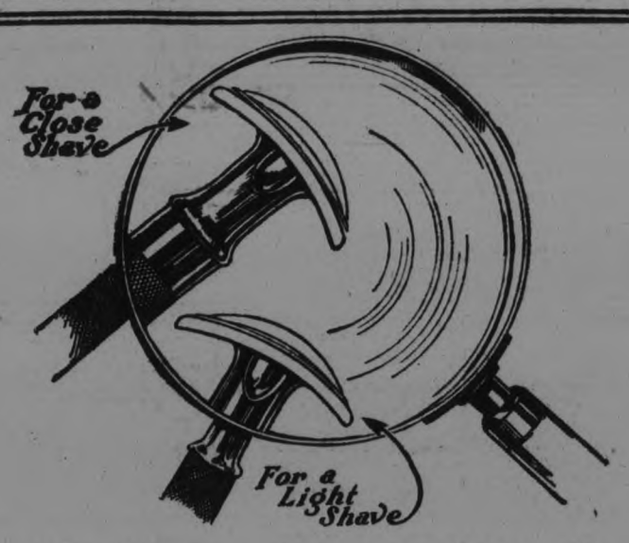
He got to France and was there only thirty days, but he did such wonderful work that he had already been awarded the Military Cross and the Croix de Guerre, the French decoration. He was a fine, upstanding young chap, as brave as a lion. He was out one fine morning reconnoitering, looking around to see what he could do, and (as he tells) he did not hear a sound, but suddenly everything turned black. A bullet had gone through his head, and both eyes were gone. Of course, he was unconscious. They carried him back to the dressing station.

The next thing he remembered he was down at Toulon, waiting for a boat to "Blighty" with a blue ticket on his coat to St. Dunstan's, that wonderful institution in England where they train the blind.

Of course, at first he was very much depressed, but Sir Arthur Pearson, who is responsible for St. Dunstan's, is a most wonderful man. He himself went blind ten years ago from overwork. He walked up to Baker, shook hands with him and said, "Never mind, you and I have seen everything in this world that is worth seeing." He helped Baker along and Baker came to so that he took a little interest in training. He took up typewriting and braille, and he specialized in them.

He was in St. Dunstan's seven months, when he was sent back to Canada as fully cured as he ever could be, with two artificial eyes. He landed in Kingston, where his home was. As I told you, he was an electrical engineer, and the Hydro-electric Company offered him a subordinate position in their office after hearing that he could operate a typewriter. Baker accepted. He gets a 100 per cent. disability pension, plus another pension of $35 a month for helplessness, as he requires somebody to lead him around. He took a position in the Hydro-electric office in Toronto, and rented a couple of rooms close to his work, so that in a short time he could make the journey back and forth without a guide.

I saw him two or three months after he landed there. He was then operating a typewriter, taking his dictation direct from the dictaphone,



Have You Tried an Adjusted Gillette Shave?

This is an exclusive extra-comfort feature of the Gillette Safety Razor. Have you taken advantage of it? Some Gillette users never do, because even without it they get so good a shave they never think of looking for a better one. Others, though, get still greater comfort, by adjusting the blade to suit the skin and the closeness of the shave they want. So can you.

If the beard is soft or the skin tender, screw the handle up tight, drawing the edge of the blade close to the guard, so that it slips lightly over the face.

For closer work on a heavy beard loosen the handle an eighth of a turn. The blade gets more hold and shaves extra clean, leaving the face as smooth as can be.

You'll quickly find the adjustment that just suits you—and then you'll enjoy your Gillette more than ever.

Whatever adjustment you like best, be sure to use the Angle Stroke, drawing the edge of the blade across the beard. This is a very simple feature, and one that makes the adjustable Gillette shave really perfect.

SCORN TO WEAR CHEVRONS.

They Say "Safety Firsts" Have a Similar Privilege.

The Canadian Associated Press understands that an effort will be made while Gen. Mewburn is in England to enlist his co-operation with Sir Edward Kemp in attempting to secure from the British War Office a better regulation regarding the wearing of chevrons. Briefly, the present regulation is that members of any branch of the forces, Imperial or Dominion, are entitled to chevrons for service overseas. In the Dominion troops a special provision was made that service overseas should count from the date of their leaving their own country. This means that Canadians who have only done service in England are entitled to the same mark of distinction as those who spent whole winters in the trenches.

There are many Canadians in England, of course, who have got no further to the actual fighting through no fault of their own, but the following is a glaring example of the present anomalous position: At Argyll House, in London, at this moment there is a certain major wearing one red and three blue chevrons, also the order of the British Empire and a Russian decoration, and yet he has spent his whole time at clerical work in England.

There is also a young captain who came over as a private, was wounded three times, earned his Military Cross in France, and yet, following the example of Gen. Turner and others, declines in sheer disgust to put any chevrons on his sleeve.

A recent letter from the War Office admitted that "some men of ours, no less than yours, earn chevrons very cheaply. For instance, all those officers in overseas garrisons at the beginning of the war are entitled to chevrons, although they may never have been moved since, and officers of the Indian army on duty in London are simiarly entitled."

Catching Up to Us.

The New York Commercial states that the United States is second to Canada in supplying farm machinery to Australia and its position in the trade is steadily improving. Eleven million dollars' worth of such machinery is required annually by Australian farmers, of which seven million dollars' worth is manufactured at home and four million dollars' worth imported.

While the present demand for farm machinery is substantial the fact is that in the normal course of events Australia is destined to become a much more attractive market for such articles. The increasing efficiency of farm tractors should eventually prove a most important factor in developing the agricultural resources of the country. In spite of the present difficulties in the path of the average American manufacturer, the market deserves the utmost attention, especially on the part of those who produce a fair number of the machines most favored by the Australian farmer.

The home manufacturers are favored by the fact that much of the land is not cleared of stumps, so that a stump-jump feature is a necessity in most implements. Canadian and American manufacturers have never been obliged to specialize on such a feature, whereas the Australian manufacturer has given it attention for years. This and other disadvantages and advantages are discussed at length in an American Government report for the benefit of manufacturers and exporters who are planning to extend their Australian and New Zealand trade as soon as normal conditions are restored.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

A very striking combination of materials is the secret of the smartness of this dress, No. 8872. It is really very simple to make, for the upper part is all in one piece from the shoulders to where the skirt section joins it. The closing is made at centre front with a row of tiny buttons set very close together. The long, close-fitting sleeves are trimmed with material to match the skirt. A very narrow belt with crossed ends marks the waistline. The two piece skirt has large pockets at the front and is gathered across the back.

The lady's dress pattern No. 8872 is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inches bust measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is 1¾ yards. The 36 inch size requires 1⅛ yards 36 inch light material and 2⅝ yards 36 inch dark material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

and taking the trouble reports over the long distance telephone, all the way along the lines between Niagara and Toronto at the different stations, and making out his trouble reports on a sheet of paper with twelve rulings on it; and, by a very ingenious arrangement on the top of his typewriter, which he himself invented, for spacing, he could put the date, the time of day, the trouble, the peak load, the low load, the number of minutes, and sign his name, and do it all just as fast as a man with both eyes, and do it just as well.

Troubles of Church Choirs.

An incomplete diary kept by a Kingstonian who died recently, after having been a choir singer for more than forty years, shows that he had witnessed tilts between sopranos and altos 7,165 times; ditto between tenors and basses 5,328, and seen 395 leaders resign; noted organists late for practice, 680 times; witnessed the marriage of 1,560 choir members; noted friction with pastors, 4,230 times, and discord among the members, 11,137 times.

The Unsung Heroes.

The work done by birds in saving food by destroying injurious insects and weeds is almost unbelievable, but the figures given here are vouched for by those familiar with the subject.

The quail, most hunted of birds, has no bad habits and eats 145 species of insects in summer and 129 kinds of harmful weed seeds in winter.

A flicker was found to have eaten 1,000 chinch bugs; a nighthawk, 600 grasshoppers; a Maryland yellow throat 3,500 plant lice in 40 minutes.

The stomach of a cedar waxwing contained 100 canker worms; a snow-bunting was found to have eaten 1,000 pigeon weed seeds; a Bob White made a meal on 5,000 seeds of the same plant, and a mourning dove ate 7,500 seeds of yellow sorel. The tree sparrow eats 875 tons of weed seeds every year.

The robin, the flicker, the thrush, all found frequently in the game bag of the hunter, subsist largely on a diet of ants, beetles, bugs, flies, grasshoppers, caterpillars and spiders. The robin, between the hours of 6 a.m. and 8 p.m. consumes 150 cut worms and wire-worms.

Food saving is patriotism. Prove your patriotism by helping save the birds that protect the nation's food supply.

Still Negotiating for Cannon.

The Manitoba Government is still in negotiation with the Hudson Bay Co. for possession of a number of ancient cannon for years past lying embedded in the sand on the shore of Hudson Bay near Fort Churchill. It is proposed to bring them to Winnipeg and mount them for decorative purposes. Transport difficulties present themselves, however.

Timmins Is a Stumpless Town.

The good people of Timmins, with their fellow-citizens, recently celebrated the extraction of the last stump on the townsite. Hereafter, should Timmins want a few stumps for fond memory's sake, it will have to import them.

TRAWLING OFF NOVA SCOTIA.

Long Hours of Hard Work Under Difficult Conditions.

"If most of the people who eat fish, especially in winter time, had to catch them," remarked Gjert Myhre, captain of the steam trawler Triumph, "the word would soon disappear from the menu cards."

The captain had just made his ship fast to her wharf in Halifax one of those zero days so usual in Nova Scotia, says the Canadian Fisherman. The Triumph, coated with gleaming ice from the top of her masts to the water line, suggested a Viking ship. The trawler's captain and crew—descendants of the Norsemen, every one—had indeed returned from a grim battle, not with their fellowmen, but with the genii of the ocean.

Winter fishing on the Grand Banks means long hours of hard work and under about the most difficult conditions one can conceive. The Triumph leaves Halifax the minute her cargo is landed. Only the fisherman's most treacherous foe, foggy weather, can deter Captain Myhre from setting out.

There is no telling just where fish will be found, but the fishing grounds from December to April are the Western Banks around Sable Island. When the steamer reaches a point some hundred and twenty-five miles off Nova Scotia coast, and almost directly east of Halifax, the trawl is let out. The depth here is 100 to 150 fathoms. It doesn't make any difference whether it is day or night; almost calm or a driving gale. The Triumph is fitted with electric lights and the crew often are obliged to work fifty to seventy hours without sleep. Think of stowing away fish in zero temperature, a sleet storm and a thirty-mile gale! If the sea is rough it is not unusual to have a whole deckload washed away and a long night's work gone for nothing. Often, too, the trawl comes up empty.

In very cold weather the trawl freezes stiff the moment it comes above water. The lower temperature of the air, as compared with the water, kills the fish almost instantly. With good luck the men make a fair wage, but working under such conditions, often with clothing wet through, fishermen are peculiarly liable to rheumatic diseases. A trawler fisherman is an old man at forty. Every one of the Triumph's crew of twenty is under thirty-five.

Another danger to which winter trawlers are exposed is that of icing up. The steel hull is frequently so heavily coated with ice as to give the ship a dangerous list, and if she should happen to encounter a storm while in this condition the Triumph would never make Halifax again.

It is not always fish the trawl brings up from the depths of the Western Banks. Sometimes there are bits of wrecked ships, or, again, a slime-covered skull—silent messenger from the unknown past—rolls to the icy deck.

Only three steam trawlers fish out of Halifax. The Triumph, purchased by Arthur Boutilier from English parties in 1916, was the first ship to engage in the business from that port. She has a carrying capacity of 300,000 pounds, and in favorable conditions, frequently brings in a full cargo, mostly haddock, but also halibut, cod and a small quantity of flat fish. The Triumph makes trips like a train, on schedule time, and her catch finds its way to family tables all the way from Nova Scotia to Vancouver. The fish are shipped fresh or cured, and this ship, directly or indirectly, gives employment to upward of a hundred men, thus in every respect more than fulfilling her present owner's most optimistic hopes.

Captain Gjert Myhre commanded steam trawlers out of Grimsby, the famous English fishing port, in the days before the war. He has fished in the White Sea, around Iceland and on the Western Banks for years. As many generations of Myhres as can be counted, almost, have been sailors who went down to the sea from Norway, which probably accounts for the safe trips the Halifax boat has made through all the dangers of hurricanes and storms that beset fishermen on the western Atlantic.

Can't Marry Canadians.

Iron-bound regulations restricting British emigration to Canada these days. An Englishwoman has to give very good reasons, indeed, to convince the British authorities that she has a right to leave the British Isles at present for Canada or any other place. Of course every available woman is required for munitions and other war work.

The Canadian emigration authorities in London have had a few particularly unfortunate cases. These are cases where English women engaged to men in Canada have sought permission to emigrate so that they might marry the men who had been gone for years, perhaps, making a home for their prospective brides in the Dominion. In nearly every case the application was refused. One of the women was forty years of age. They will be obliged to wait until after the war.

Canadian mothers, wives of soldiers, returning to Canada with babies, find it impossible to bring English nurses with them unless the nurse is so old as to be almost useless.

Heavy Fighting at Many Points on the British Battlefront Near St. Quentin

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(Official).—German troops late yesterday counter attacked in the vicinity of Gillemont Farm, on a front between Cambrai and St. Quentin, to the west of Le Caalet. Field Marshal Haig's statement to-day announces the repulse of the enemy with heavy losses.

British forces last night attacked the German lines between St. Quentin and Cambrai, opposite Le Catalet, making progress in the vicinity of Tombois Farm, and capturing a group of trenches and strong points on the ridge north-west of Vendhuile. Another enemy strong point near Ronssoy-Bony Road, just to the south, also was taken by the British. A successful local attack was carried out south of Villers-Guislan. North-west of St. Quentin, the Germans penetrated the British line at one point at Berthacourt during an attack. The position was re-established by a counter attack.

The statement reads:

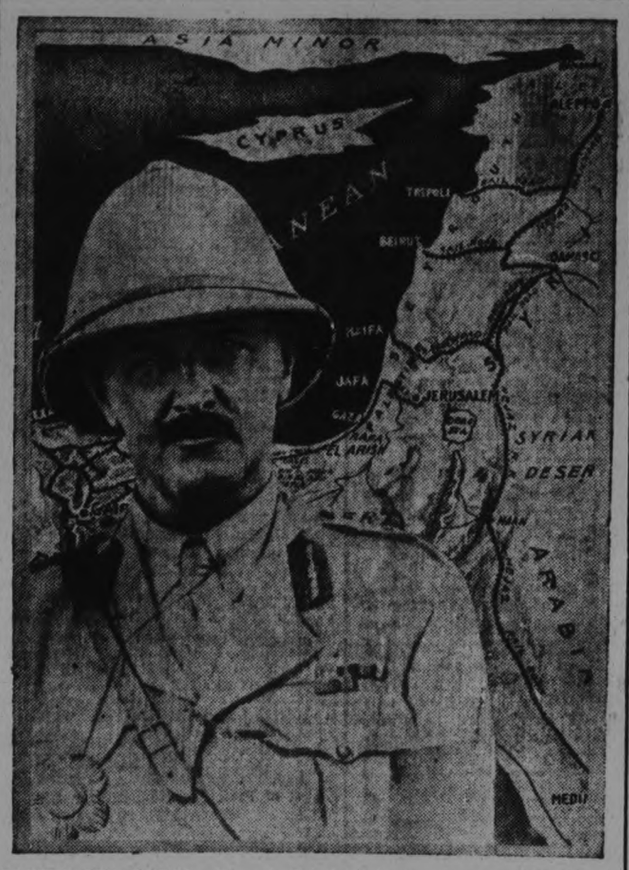
Successful minor operations were carried out by our troops yesterday and during the night at several points. In the afternoon English troops captured a German strong point in the neighbourhood of Ronssoy - Bony Road, which had held out stubbornly all day, taking eighty prisoners. Later in the afternoon hostile counter attacks from the direction of Gillemont Farm was repulsed with heavy losses by our rifle and machine gun fire. During the night other English troops made progress in the direction of Tombois Farm, after several hours' hard fighting, and farther north captured a group of strongly held trenches and strong points on the spur north-west of Vendhuile, taking a number of prisoners. During the night also over 100 prisoners were captured by us in a successful local attack south of Villers-Guislain. East of Gavrelle, English troops made progress on a front of about three-quarters of a mile, capturing 60 prisoners. Early last night the enemy attacked Berthaucourt, under cover of a heavy artillery barrage, and penetrated our line at one point. An immediate counter-attack by our troops completely re-established the positions.

On the front between Arras and Lens there was a continuation of the advance movement in the neighbourhood of Gavrelle. South-east of that village English troops made progress on a front of three-quarters of a mile

French Official.

PARIS, Sept. 23. — (Official). — French troops yesterday and last night made notable progress in their drive for the encirclement of St. Quentin. They pushed in far on the south and captured the village and fort of Vendeuil, close to the Oise, nine miles south of St. Quentin. From Vendeuil, the French pushed on to the river. North of Ly-Fontaine they penetrated a wood in the direction of Hinecourt.

In the region of St. Quentin, French troops continued their advance yesterday evening and last night. They penetrated the wood north of Ly-Fontaine, captured the fort and village of Vendeuil, and pushed on to the Oise. French reconnoitering parties took prisoners north of the Aisne and in the Champagne, and advanced in the direction of the Butte Du Mesnil. German raids north of the Vesle and in the Vosges failed.



ROUTED THE TURKS.—General Allenby, who reports a smashing defeat of the Turkish army in Palestine. Many thousands of prisoners were taken as well as many guns. The British are now close to Haifa (shown on the map), which is the terminus of the railway to Damascus.

Are Advancing in Macedonia

Enemy Railway Line Has Been Cut — Will Affect 65 Mile Front.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Allied troops in Macedonia have cut the railway from Gradsko to Prilip, according to the Serbian official communique received here to-day. The Uskup-Salonkia railway also has been cut, thus stopping all supplies to the Bulgarians on the whole sixty-five-mile front from Prilip eastward to the Lake Doiran region.

Up to Saturday, the Allies had made a total advance of more than forty miles, certain infantry units advancing 25 miles in one day.

Cut Railway.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 23. — Serbian troops have cut the main railway line between Uskub and Salonika, and are on the western bank of the Vardar River, according to a Serbian official statement. West of Vardar the Serbians have cut the railway line to Prilip, which is the main line of German communication in this region. They also have crossed the Cerna. Serbian infantry units are now in the mountainous regions, and advanced 25 miles in one day. The number of prisoners and the amount of war material captured increases daily.

Give Allies a Land Route

Development of Bordeaux—Belgrade Railway Is Spoken Of.

(United Press Despatch.)

(By Raymond Clapper.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Development of a Bordeaux to Belgrade railroad to give the Allies a land route to Constantinople, is being urged by Entente diplomats as a step to block any Berlin to Bagdad scheme.

Such a railroad would dominate the Balkans and give the Allies both military and commercial advantages, diplomats say. The Allies control connected railroads to Venice, and when Austria is dismembered, they will control the lines to Belgrade and beyond, and possibly to Constantinople.

A special study of this project has been made by Dr. P. Hinkovich, heading the Jugo-Slav National Council in the United States who, with other representatives of oppressed nations, laid plans for its elaboration before President Wilson.

A Strategic Road.

"The Allies should maintain a road into the heart of the Balkans which would dominate the land routes to Salonika and Constantinople and act as a foil of the Berlin to Bagdad path," Dr. Hinkovich said in an interview with the United Press to-day.

Railroads are now constructed over the entire route from Western Europe to the Balkans, though in Southern Austrian provinces and Serbia they are temporarily held by the enemy. Roads from Bordeaux, Brest and Channel ports in France, converge in the Alps when they cross into Italy and then into the Austrian provinces of Carniola, Croatia and Slavonia. The roads touch Trieste, the important Adriatic port. It enters Serbia at Belgrade and connects with the only rail route to Constantinople.

Dr. Hinkovich has conferred with many Allied statesmen and diplomats on the necessity of developing such a commercial and strategic road.

Bulgarian Press is Unanimously In Favour of Speedy Peace

ZURICH, Sept. 23.—The Bulgarian press is unanimously in favour of peace, according to information obtained to-day. "It is high time to listen to reason," declares the paper. "The success of the Entente in France cannot be denied." The Vir says:

"For the accomplishment of peace," says the Narod, "it is necessary that the period of negotiations, which are the verge of the beginning, shall be terminated as quickly as possible."

The Roy Front Artistically Decorated

The front of the building occupied by the Roy Studio, Hunter street, has recently been tastefully decorated and improved. The brick front has been treated to a strong cardinal shade of gloss paint, the crests of the windows are done in a nice contrasting stone color; and the ornamental coping is brought out in a rich orange. A handsome new sign with the imprint "The Roy Studio" has also been placed in position in the centre of the building, which adds greatly to the frontal effect. The sign is one of Turner's best. It is done in skilfully executed old English text and script with raised gold letters on a black ground.

ADVANCED 600 YARDS

Haig's Men Gained Several Strong Positions on a Wide Front.

BERLIN STATEMENT

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 23.—Regardless of a heavy rain, the British and Germans continued local fighting for the possession of various points between Cambrai and St. Quentin last night and early to-day.

South of Oppy, the British last night advanced six hundred yards on a 1,100-yard front, taking fifty prisoners.

At ten o'clock last night British troops advanced near Epehy, driving the enemy out of several trench elements protecting the Hindenburg outpost line.

British Advance.

(By Associated Press).

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN FRANCE, Sept. 23.—In a small attack east of Gavrelle, in the Arras sector, British troops last night advanced their lines for an average depth of 600 yards along a front of 1,100 yards. Haig's men gained several strong positions.

Berlin Report.

Canadian Press:

BERLIN, Sept. 23.—British forces to the east of Epehy, south-west of Cambrai, yesterday obtained a footing in the sections of German trenches, says an official statement issued to-day.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.— The Associated Press this morning issued the following:

"Moving northward with surprising speed and power, the Allied troops in Palestine seem to have dealt the Turks a blow that may shatter their power in that theatre of war. So far as reports reflect the situation, the Turks are completely defeated and the march of the British, French and Arabs toward the Sea of Tiberius is virtually unopposed. The advance has carried the Allies past the village of Nazareth, and they are approaching a line east of the ancient city of Tyre. To the north is Beyrout, while off to the north-west, 70 miles away, is Damascus. These two cities are important centres in this region of the world, and their capture would mean the complete disorganization of the Turkish machinery of war over a wide area. The Allied armies are still moving rapidly over the hills of Southern Serbia, where for the past week they have smashed the Bulgarian resistance and swept along at a rate which seems to indicate that the Bulgars have been unable to stabilize their line at any point where defensive warfare might be expected. The Serbians are now east of Prilep and are moving along the Cerna Valley steadily.

25,000 TURKS CAPTURED

(By Associated Press.)

London, Sept. 23 (4 p.m.) — Twenty-five thousand Turkish prisoners, and 260 guns, had been counted up to yesterday evening by General Allenby's forces pushing northward through Palestine, according to an official statement isued to-day. The war office announcement says, that the 7th and 8th Turkish armies have virtually ceased to exist. The entire transport of these two armies was captured by the British.

DISASTER THREATENS BULGARIA AND TURKEY

At Least Forty Thousand Turk Troops, With Guns and Equipment, Have Been Trapped—Bulgarians Are in Full Retreat Between Monastir and Vardar.

THE BRITISH ADVANCED 50 MILES IN TWO DAYS FIGHTING

Disaster threatens the armies of Bulgaria and Turkey on the battlefields of Macedonia and Palestine. The Allied forces are pressing with vigor their successful campaigns against the two lesser members of the Central Powers. In Palestine General Allenby virtually has wiped out the enemy forces opposing him. The Bulgarians are in full retreat between Monastir and Vardar.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The British in Palestine on Sunday seized the crossing of the Jordan River at Jisred-Damser, and shut off the Turks' last avenue of escape. At least forty thousand Turk troops, with guns and equipment, are thereby trapped.

REMARKABLE ADVANCE.

(United Press.)

(By J. W. T. Mason.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 23.— General Allenby's remarkable advance through the Plains of Sparon to Nazareth has covered fifty miles in two days' fighting, which is the record for the present war.

The British are within seventy-five miles of Damascus, the capture of which is certain if the present disintegration of the Turkish forces continues. Once at Bama, Gen. Allenby can begin to make plans for uniting his own force with the British army in Mesopotamia, which is working its way north-west along the Euphrates. This army has as its objective the capture of Aleppo, where the Constantinople railway joins the Bagdad and the Damascus lines.

From Damascus Allenby too, will advance toward Aleppo. It will be possible for him to get into touch with the British Mesopotamia operation immediately at Damascus, by the aid of cavalry. The Arabian desert, which now separates General Allenby's forces from the Mesopotamia expedition, loses itself north of Damascus, permitting the two British armies to unite under a single strategic decision for the approach to Aleppo. Gen. Allenby is now less than three hundred miles from Aleppo and has covered half the distance from Suez to the major Turkish railway centre. The extraordinary speed of Gen. Allenby's advance from Jaffa to Nazareth last week indicates that the second half of the journey will be out of all proportion to the first in rapidity of accomplishment.

A MAJOR CAMPAIGN.

With the British armies in possession of Aleppo, the nearby port of Alexandretta will certainly be seized. Thereafter a major campaign may be begun for the capture of Constantinople through Asia Minor. With Alexandretta in possession of the Allies, troops could easily be landed there, ready to move along the Aleppo railway leading across Asia Minor into Constantinople. The distance to be covered is about 800 miles. This sounds like a stupendous undertaking, but with a demoralized Turkish army in opposition, the possibility of success exists. Certainly the mere threat of so gigantic an accomplishment would work havoc with the morale of the pan-Germans.

25,000 PRISONERS.

PALESTINE, Sept. 23.—(Official).—More than 25,000 prisoners and 260 guns had been captured by Sunday. Many were still unenumerated.

Peterboro Casualties

Pte. V. N. Winston and Corp. Percy Bertrand Killed in Action.

Pte. Victor N. Winston, whose home was at 326 Water street, is reported killed in action on August 28th. Pte. Winston enlisted in Peterborough last January and later joined the 7th Reserve Battalion. He subsequently transferred to the 21st Canadians.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Word has been received that Corp. Percy Bertrand was killed in action on August 28. This information was received by his wife and mother, 502 George street. He enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion, and after going overseas was transferred to the 18th Battalion. There are left to mourn his loss a sorrowing wife, Mrs. Lula Bertrand, a mother, Mrs. H. Bertrand, and two sisters and one brother, namely, Mrs. J. Batten and Mrs. H. Batten, and Wilbert, at home.

REPORTED WOUNDED.

Pte. Albert E. Parberry, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded in the leg. He was transferred from the 93rd Battalion to the 5th Labour Battalion. His home was ot Young's Point.

PTE. SIDNEY DUNSFORD

Mr. W. H. Dunsford, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Commerce, has received word that his son Pte. Sidney Jarvis Dunsford was slightly wounded on Sept. 2nd but had remained on duty. Pte. Dunsford was a lieutenant in the 247th Battalion here and when only a limited number of officers were allowed to go overseas he reverted to the ranks in order to get over. He went overseas with the 235th and was transferred to another Canadian battalion in France

BOMBARDIER DUNSFORD.

Mrs. J. Sucee, 530 Sherbrooke street, received word to-day that her brother, Bombardier W. C. Dunsford has been badly wounded in the leg and has been operated on twice and expects to go to England as a convalescent. Bomb. Dunsford enlisted in Peterborough over three years ago with the 93rd Battery and has been in the thick of the fighting ever since. He was an employee of the G.T.R. before enlisting.

GUNNER S. T. HARRIS.

Captain R. Harris, Gore's Landing, was officially notified that his son, Gunner S. T. Harris, has been admitted to a casualty clearing hospital suffering from a gunshot wound in the head and concussion. Gunner Harris was formerly a member of the office staff of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. He enlisted in the 2nd Cobourg Heavy Battery.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 23.—Solemn ceremonies over the body of Nicholas Romanoff, former emperor of Russia, have been held at Yekaterinburg by troops of the "people's army" according to "Izvestia" of Moscow. The work of exhumation was done in the presence of many representatives of supreme ecclesiastical authorities of western Siberia, as well as delegates of the "people's army" Cossacks and Czecho-Slovaks. The body was placed in a zinc coffin encased in Siberian cedar and placed in the cathedral at Yekaterinburg under a guard of honor composed of commanders of the "people's army". It will be buried in a special sarcophagus at Omsk. For long time after the execution of the former emperor the disposition made of the body was a mystery One report stated that it had been taken to the deepest pit of a coal mine at Yekaterinburg and there destroyed.

WAS QUITE DISGUSTED

Secretary of Montreal Automobile Association Stayed in the House All Day—Opinions Expressed

FUTURE OF CAMPAIGN

MONTREAL, Sept. 23.—"Quite disgusted" was verdict of Automobile Association officials last night in connection with what they term the failure of voluntary "gasless" Sunday. That the government would be quite justified in issuing a mandatory order for the conservation of gasoline was another opinion expressed.

"I didn't stir out of my house yesterday afternoon, and in twenty minutes I counted no less than forty six cars pass my window," said Mr. T. C. Kirby, secretary of the Montreal Automobile Association yesterday, the license numbers of care were noted.

The failure of the campaign consists in spite of the fact that people of good will, who for patriotic motives, have abstained from using their cars, are being penalized by their own sense of loyalty, while in certain sections of city there has been no observation of a voluntary conservation campaign whatever. West of St. Lawrence boulevard there was an appreciative lessening of traffic; east of St. Lawrence apparently as many cars as ever were running. In Outremont the number of cars out was very noticeable as also in St. Henri and some other suburbs, while in Westmount they were very scarce.

BE A HARDSHIP

Of the hundreds out yesterday probably the vast majority were a poore class of cars, whose owners probably have little time for motoring other than on Sunday, for these, it is claimed, a regulation forbidding the use of cars on Sunday would be a hardship, which have given rise to a demand for gasoline rationing, and several members of automobile association have already sent in a petition to this effect to the government. They request that gasoline cards be issued, entitling car owners to purchase so much gasoline per week, according to business for which the cars are required. The failure of voluntary campaign is giving great impetus to this agitation, and as much pressure as possible will be brought to bear on the government to enforce a rationing system. During the past two weeks personal letters have been sent by the Secretary of the Automobile Association to car owners whose cars have been seen on streets during the "gasless" Sundays, but it is said they have had little effect, judging by number of motors to be seen out.

The Paved Streets Were Cleaned Saturday Night

Two Dustless Sweepers Made a Good Job of It.

The dustless sweepers made a good job of cleaning the streets on Saturday night. Two machines were in operation, and cleaned up the dirt and dust and polished the pavement from curb to curb in good shape, and Sunday church-goers were not bothered in any way with the usual Sunday dust.

WHEN IN DOUBT.

Eye trouble does not always mean poor eyesight, on the contrary, some of the most serious troubles occur where the sight is exceedingly keen. If you are in doubt about your eyes consult Dr. Lacey, 410 George street.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 23RD, 1918.

A SELF-DENIAL EFFORT.

The self-denial week plan of raising money for the Belgian Relief Fund is important not only because of the funds it it will furnish, but because it shows the public a way to practical thrift that might be adopted permanently. During the self-denial week people are asked to sacrifice some pleasure and to donate the money thus saved to the Belgian Fund. Such a system followed out week by week would result in a considerable saving, and if generally adopted would put the people of Canada in a position to supply the funds necessary to finance Canadian war effort.

SEND IN THE COUPONS.

It is to be hoped that the citizens who have not as yet obtained any coal are making use of the coupons printed in the local papers to notify the authorities of the fact. It is of the greatest importance that those in charge of the coal situation in Peterborough should have complete information as soon as possible concerning every household in which there not a supply of coal. Information of this kind is of little use unless it is both full and accurate so that those without coal should lose no time in using the coupons to notify the Coal Commission.

As it is proposed to take steps if possible to see that every citizen shall have some coal ready for winter, the public will readily see the importance of carrying out the wishes of the local fuel authorities in regard to reporting.

A BETTER SHOWING.

It is gratifying to be able to announce that the second motorless Sunday was more generally observed in Peterborough yesterday than a week ago. While a number of cars that should have been left in the garage was out, yet the drivers received such marked attention from pedestrians and were the subject of so many pointed and perfectly audible remarks that the offence is not likely to be repeated next Sunday. Hundreds of patriotic motorists loyally obeyed the request of the Fuel Controller; they would just as soon fly the German flag over their homes as to refuse to do anything that might impede the successful prosecution of the war. For those who in spite of the many times repeated request for the conservation of gasoline took their cars out as usual the general public has a feeling that closely approaches contempt. It has been suggested that a roll of dishonour to consist of the numbers of all cars seen on the streets next Sunday should be published in the papers the next day, eliminating of coure, the number of those cars that were legitimately out. This may become necessary if a few motorists unpatriotically persist in ignoring the request of the Fuel Controller.

THE SECRET SERVICE'S BIT.

Somebody has pointed out that there are few of the marvellous German war machine's activities that have not been equalled by similar departments of the Entente nations, while in some cases they have been surpassed. The latter is especially true of the secret service. For decades Potsdam' epionage and intelligence departments kept the world pop-eyed with a mixture of amazement of fear. We were told that nothing escaped the kaiser's persistent and omnipresent agents. The whole world, political, social, commercial, had been ticketed, scheduled, docketed, filed away at Berlin. Now we know how much of this stupendous mass of information was accurate. The German secret service, from ambassadors down, was unable to grasp the true situation and feeling in belligerent countries, and as a result Prussia's leaders, from the very beginning of the war, were misled into one staggering blunder after another.

Contrast this with the achievements of the British and American secret services. If ever the inside history of their activities is given the world, it should furnish some amazing and thrilling incidents. Until the war is over we cannot know of the details, but the exposure of Teuton duplicity by the British and American Governments, from information gathered by the secret services of the two nations, has supplied the Entente with a telling weapon. It has driven home to all and sundry the lesson that Germany as present ruled, cannot be trusted. The exposure of German plotting to raise Mexico and Japan against the United States and the sell-out to Berlin of Russia by Lenine and Trotzky are both unanswereable arguments in favour of a war to a completely victorious finish. The publication of the Bolsheviki leaders' betrayal of their country is especially effective, being neatly timed to counter the opening of the central powers' peace offensive. Only the most stupid pacifism would now approve of a conference such as Austria-Hungary asks. Nobody believes for an instant that the offer from Vienna has been made without the consent of Berlin, which would guide any peace conference with the same entirely selfish, cruel and unprincipled manner she followed at Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest.

These exposures will heavily offset any advantage the enemy hopes to gain against neutrals by President Wilson's rejection of the Austrian emperor's invitation.

In fact of these latest revelations of Kultur, the world at large will not be deceived any longer by the carefully prepared whinings of the kaiser that he is not to blame for the continuation of the world war.

Once more the secret services of the Entente nations have scored heavily against the enemy in a field that was supposed to be peculiarly his own. In an autocracy such as Prussia's the development of a powerful airtight secret service system comes more natural than with democracies like Britain, Franch or United States. In an autocratic form of government there is built up around the monarch a personnel selected for life, and only after years of proved service and allegiance would it be placed in possession of vital information.

On the other hand democracy frequently changes its political coat with consequent reorganization of the machinery of government—a condition not the best for the keeping confidential and secret of acquired information. The secret services of the Entente nations have proved splendidly efficient, which would have been impossible but for a high degree of honesty and patriotism as well as of intelligence amongst the members of the staffs.—London Advertizer.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The news from Palestine is of the most splendid nature. The Turkish army facing General Allenby seems to have been completely obliterated.

Germany has accepted Austria's peace offer. Having originated the proposal in the first place the Perman leaders could not very well refuse.

Judging from the rattle and clamour of some of the cars out yesterday riding in them could hardly come under the head of pleasure motoring.

A motorist from Brockville, who piloted a vehicle of 1899 vintage, species unknown, up George street yesterday afternoon attracted a lot of attention. He was absolved from the charge of joy-riding because as one astonished spectator put it, "only stern necessity would drive any one to bring that think out in the daylight.

Mayor Duncan's appearance at the ball park Saturday to welcome the visiting Hilcrest team was a Tommy Church attention that pleased the

WELL OBSERVED IN PETERBORO

Officials of Automobile Association Well Satisfied With Result

The Peterborough Automobile Association is delighted with the observance generally of the request to conserve gasoline on Sunday. Mr. H. O. Fiske, the secretary, said today that he was surprised with the very few automobiles which turned out. "I only saw a few," he said, "and those were at church. This is not a disregard of the request, as a man may easily motor to church and save the gasoline the rest of the day. When you consider that one gallon takes you 20 miles, a two-mile trip to church is not a serious infraction of the request."

Asked if he thought the saving necessary, he said: "The supply of gasoline comes from the States; they have placed the Sunday embargo upon its use, and if we do not fall in line with the producers we are liable to lose our supply."

Pinch the Joy-Riders.

Mr. Reginald Turner, president of the association, said that he is glad to give up Sunday motor trips if it is of national importance. "The Motor League," he said, "not only want but will thank the police to pinch any man who tries joy-riding on Sunday and is caught exceeding the speed limit. That is the only way we can get even with them."

Canadian Air Service Formed

OFFICIAL STATEMENT GIVES GUIDANCE FOR THOSE WISHING TO ENLIST.

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—The following announcement with regard to the new Royal Canadian Air Service was issued by the Naval Department:

"The establishment of the Royal Canadian Air Service has now been completed by the Naval Department. The discipline for the new force is the same as for the Canadian navy. Bases have been chosen at suitable places, and a number of air cadets have already joined and are now under training as flight officers. A large number of applications are filed with the Air Section, Naval Department, Ottawa, and the applicants will shortly join instructional classes.

"Flight cadets are paid $1.10 per day from joining up to the time of training. They receive $2 per day during ground training, and $1 flying allowance, in addition, upon commencement of flying. Flying officers are paid $150, uniform allowance; $75 on joining and $75 on completion of training.

"The department requires skilled and unskilled mechanics for service at the air bases. The recruits will be chosen as far as possible from those not called up under the Military Service Act. Should qualified mechanics of military age apply, arrangements will be made for their transfer. These men, while training, will receive the same pay and allowances as privates in the army. Technical officers will be chosen from the best qualified trained men.

"The officer's uniform is of blue serge, cut on military lines. The distinguishing rank badges are similar to those in use in the Royal Air Force. The cap is of naval pattern, with badge indicative of Canadian service. A brown leather 'Sam Brownie' belt will also be worn."

CLERGY'S TRIBUTE TO HUMBLE WORKER OF SOUTH END CHURCH

The funeral of Mrs. Frank Christopher was held from her late home on Parnell street this morning to the church of the Sacred Heart, where a requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien attended the mass and paid eulogy to the late Mrs. Christopher for her unassumingt but effective work in everything that tended to promote the church of the Sacred Heart. Rev. J. J. O'Brien yesterday made an exception in the announcements of the sick and departed members of the parish to add his tribute to Mrs. Christopher's assistance. Since the church was opened she had attended daily mass, in the work for the annual social her executive ability had been invaluable, and she had undertaken any and every detail in which she could help.

Only One Hit Off Ed. Scott

Kirn Pitched Grand Game for Riversides, Holding Toronto Sluggers to Six Scattered Singles—Stage Fright on Part of Homesters in the First Three Innings Gave Visitors the Battle.

MURTY'S CIRCUS CATCH

The Hillcrests, senior amateur champions of Toronto, thanks to lanky Ed. Scott's twirling and an attack of stage fright on the part of the Riversides, champions of the local city league, obtained a big edge in the O.B.A.A. semi-finals by beating Manager Solomon's aggregation at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon by 5 runs to one. Riversides acted in the first three innings as if they had no right to be on the same field as the Hillcrests and before the local gang realized that the boys from the big city were only ordinary individuals like themselves and not world's series possibilities, the "Pit" League crowd had a 4 to 0 lead. The Riversides came back to earth then, and for the last six innings it was as tight a fought battle as one would wish to see. Each team scored a run in the seventh and that represented all the plate crossing for the last six stanzas.

It was a pitcher's battle between Cannon Ball Scott, the elongated speed marvel of the Hillcrests, and Howard Kirn, the Riverside's pitching ace, and while the honours went to Scott because he won his game and allowed only one single, yet Kirn emerged out of the struggle with a whole lot of credit. In fact had the support on both sides been perfect the teams might have been battling yet for a score, for not one of the six runs scored was earned.

Kirn held the Hillcrest sluggers to six scattered singles, no two of them coming in the same innings. He had more smoke than usual and his curve was breaking sharply, with the result that the visitors failed to swell their batting averages. Turofsky, the athlete with the Bolsheviki cognomen, who looks after the interests of the Hillcrests at third base, and who has been a demon slugger all season, poled out a neat single on his first appearance at the plate, but was easy after that, fanning twice and hitting weakly to Kirn on his last time up. Hennessey, the big catcher, was the only player on either side to get two safeties, which shows how much the pitchers had on the swatsmiths.

Scott, whose speed was not so terrific as press reports have stated, nevertheless looks like one sweet pitcher. He has splendid control, mixes his slants nicely and fields his position like a veteran. The Riversides were plainly nervous at the plate, the advance notices of Scott's ability having their effect on the homesters.

In the field the visitors did not outclass the Riversides. In view of the fact that Scott fanned ten men, and threw out seven at first, and that the balance of the team turned in four errors on the few chances they got, the fielding of the Hillcrests was none too steady and with a less effective pitcher working, the visitors would hardly look like a championship outfit.

Turofsky, the third baseman, pulled two speedy plays on slow hit balls that were executed in big league style, and Spanton, the veteran first sacker, moved and looked like Connie Murphy and smothered throws like Stuffy McInnes. Egan, the youthful shortstop, contributed a couple of bad throws, but he looks like a comer at that.

The sensational fielding stunt of the day was turned in by Mac Murty, left fielder for the Riversides, who robbed Spanton of a triple and cut off a sure run by a wonderful running bare hand catch of a line drive to deep left. There were two out in the sixth, and Allward, who had singled, had started to steal second when Spanton's bat met one of Kirn's fast ones right on the nose. The ball sailed on a line to left, and Murty, who was playing over towards centre, did not seem to have a chance. However, he was under way with the crack of the bat, and while running at full speed, stuck out his bare right hand and grabbed the ball. It was a circus performance and the crowd cheered wildly.

Cherrett's classy work around second was another feature. The local second baseman handled eight chances, some of them difficult ones, with the smoothness and ease of a big leaguer. He smothered everything that came his way. Guerin was an absentee and Manager Solomon had to take his place at first. The Riverside pilot, while he is no Hal Chase in graceful action, covered the bag in faultless fashion.

The game was well handled by the two umpires, Harry Taylor of the Y.M.C.A. League, Toronto, who performed at the plate, and Alex Kay of Peterborough, who was the arbitrator on the bases. Both gave every satisfaction.

Hillcrests had a good following with them, including many of the O.B.A.A. officials, and a small army of newspaper men, the latter including Athol Gow, who writes most of the Toronto Star's amateur baseball news.

First Innings.

Hillcrests—Crocker drew a pass and went to thrid on Michie's infield out to Solomon unassisted. Nicholson bunted to Kirn, whose throw to the plate had Crocker beaten, but Phelan dropped the ball and everybody was safe. Nicholson advanced on a passed ball. Turofsky singled to right, scoring Nicholson, took second on the throw in and went on to third when Phelan let the peg from the outfield get away. Turofsky was caught at the plate on an attempted speeze play, Allward failing to connect with the ball. Allward fanned. Two runs, one hit, two errors.

Peterborough—Sheehy fanned. McCarney's fly in front of the plate was grabbed by Hennessey, and Scott threw Cherrett out at first. No runs, hits or errors.

Second Innings.

Hillcrests.—Spanton singled to left centre and stole second, going to third on Hennessey's sacrifice, Kirn to Solomon. Spanton scored and Egan was safe at first on Sheehy's fumble, Egan died stealing. Phelan to Cherrett. Scott missed three. One run, one hit, one error.

Riversides. — Phelan and Murray fanned. Solomon rolled to Scott. No runs, hits or errors.

Third Innings.

Hillcrests.—Crocker reached second on Murray's bad throw to first and went to third on Michie's infield out, Cherrett to Solomon. Crocker scored on a wild pitch. Cherrett made a pretty play on Nicholson's smash and got the runner at first. Turofsky fanned. One run, no hits, one error.

Riversides.—Kirn fanned. Murty was safe when Egan's throw pulled Spanton off the bag. Connors and Sheehy fanned. No runs or hits, one error.

Fourth Innings.

Fifth Innings.

Hillcrests.—Scott fanned. Cherrett threw out Crocker. Sheehy made a fine stop of Michie's hard smash and nailed the runner at first. No runs, hits or errors.

Riversides.—Murray was out, Scott to Spanton. Nicholson threw Solomon out. Kirn drew a pass, but Scott grabbed Murty's roller. No runs, hits or errors.

Sixth Innings.

Hillcrests.—Nicholson fanned. Turofsky missed three. Allward singled to centre. Murty made a sensational bare-handed catch of Spanton's hard smash to left. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Riversides.—Connors flied to Egan. Sheehy was safe when Allward dropped his fly to centre. McCarney bunted and Turofsky made a pretty play to nail Sheehy at second. McCarney stole second. Cherrett fanned. No runs or hits, one error.

Seventh Innings.

Hillcrests.—Hennessey was safe on Murray's bad throw. Egan sacrificed, Murray to Solomon, Hennessey going to third. Scott fanned. Crocker singled to left, scoring Hennessey. Cherrett made a nice catch of Michie's high fly back of second. One run, one hit, one error.

Riversides.—Phelan singled to right, the first hit off Scott. Phelan stole second. Hennessey's throw was wide, and the runner went on to third, reaching there safely when Turofsky dropped Egan's throw. Murray fanned, Solomon popped to Nicholson. Kirn tapped one to Egan, who threw badly to first and Phelan scored. Murty rolled to Nicholson. One run, one hit, two errors.

Eighth Innings.

Hillcrests.— Nicholson walked and stole second, going to third on Turofsky's roller to Kirn, who threw the batter out at first. Allward lifted a foul to Phelan. Cherrett retired Spanton at first on a nice play. No runs, hits or errors.

Riversides.— Turofsky nailed Connors at first by fast fielding of a slow roller down the third base line. Sheehy fouled to Hennessey. McCarney fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Ninth Innings.

Hillcrests.— Hennessey singled to right and was sacrificed to second by Egan. Scott's roller was grabbed by Cherrett, who also threw out Crocker. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Riversides.—Cherrett was out on a slow one to Scott, Phelan struck out, Lee, who took Nicholson's place at second in the last innings, made a nice pick-up of Murray's smash and got the runner at first, and the game was over.

BOWLING NEWS

The opening of the Peterborough Five-Pin League takes place next week. There are now eight teams entered, and judging by the interest being manifested in the game, the league should prove to be an interesting one. A meeting has been called for Thursday night at the Alleys, when all captains are asked to be present.

The prize given for three highest games five-pins last week was won by Mr. R. Ross, with 712 for a total. Other scores were as follows:

Ross	131	269	212—712
Touchet	276	246	185—707
Routley	301	215	186—702
Jackson	208	246	175—629

HEROES AND HEROES.

The world's baseball series this year produced no heroes. Every other year there have been "miracle men" such as Stallings, and heroes by the score. They were heralded as semi-deities, so to speak. There were none such in 1918. People have new ideas on heroism now. Only those are heroes who are doing the Big Thing in the war.

Big Thing is only a relative term. There are the boys who win the V. C. There are grades of medals and honors, but all demanding the heroic fibre. Then there are those who work unnamed and unnoticed to win the war.

You can never get a Victoria Cross by producing bigger and better crops, but you can help to win the war, which is a Big Thing at that.

A. G. ROBERTS WON QUOITING TOURNAMENT HELD SATURDAY

Bad Weather Did Not Interfere With Game—The Scores.

The first quoiting tournament on the new quoiting grounds adjoining the Collegiate Institute was played off on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and despite the bad weather the enthusiasts had a splendid afternoon. Nine braved the stormy outlook and entered the draw, while several interested spectators watched the game. Mr. A. G. Roberts confidently expects that with the splendid work done by the quoiters they will enter the Dominion tournament next year.

City Rugby League Organized With Four Teams and May Form a Group of the O.R.F.U.

Four teams were represented at the meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night when a City Rugby League was formed with the prospect that it will constitute a group in the junior O.R.F.U. The officers elected were as follows:

Hon. President—H. R. H. Kenner.
Hon. Vice-Presidents—C. G. Graham and F. D. Craig.
President—Dr. Wood.
1st Vice-President—Dr. Wightman.
2nd Vice-President—A. C. Kay.
Secretary - Treasurer — Horace Walkey.
Executive—D. Layfield (C.G.E.), M. Sheehy (T.A.S.), R. Yeamans (Collegiate Institute), Horace Walkey (Tigers).

The proposal will be made to the O.R.F.U. that the City League constitute a local group in the O.R.F.U., conforming to its regulations in regard to age, etc. It is understood that there will be no age limit, but this will be clearly determined when the reply is received from the O.R.F.U. It has been practically arranged for a silver trophy. All the teams will begin practices at once, and a schedule of games will be announced shortly.

The Tigers will be composed of employees of the banks and uptown stores. From the present outlook this group should provide an interesting series, and in any event the autumn game will be kept alive in Peterborough.

Draws for the Second Round of Golf Trophy

The following are the draws for the second round of the club championship. The games must be played on or before Saturday, Sept. 28th:

Wightman vs. Patterson.
Denham vs. Mowat.
Bond vs. Weber.
Neill vs. Macdonald.

Macdonald Trophy.

Ackerman vs. Sangster.
Langley vs. Morrow.
Gilman vs. McDermid.
Graham vs. Potvin.
Kerr vs. Stansfield.
Brown vs. Hamilton, G.
Lundgren—bye.

These games must be played on or before Saturday, Sept. 28th.

New Prayer Book In Use This Year

Revised Edition will be in Hands of People as Soon as Printed.

The revised Prayer Book of the Anglican Church will be available and permissable for general use in all Canadian churches just as soon as it is off the Cambridge Press, according to the message given to the Synod by the House of Bishops, now in session in Toronto. The message was as follows:

"That in order to enable both clergy and people to become familiar with and to judge by practical experience the value of the Revised Prayer Book as approved by the General Synod, the Book of Common Prayer as revised and approved by this Synod be, with the sanction of the bishop of each diocese, permitted for provisional use until the next meeting of this synod, and that the House of Bishops recommends the general use of this revised Prayer Book."

The Bishops reported to the Synod that while they were in complete sympathy with the proposal of Bishop Bidwell of Ontario for the authorization of a simple form of service to be used in special circumstances instead of the present order of Evening Prayer, they did not recommend that such a service be authorized; but that they will take the matter up with careful consideration with a view of meeting such a service.

PEACHES, PEARS AND PLUMS CANNED WITHOUT SUGAR

From the following Recipe:

Wash fruit and put in sealers, fill jars with cold water. Put water in boiler or steamer, then put in your jars, with glass tops and tin rings on, but NOT the rubbers. Water enough to come to top of jars. Bring the water to a boil and boil for twenty minutes. Then put on rubbers and seal tight. Put a layer of hay or straw in bottom of boiler to protect the jars from the heat of the fire. Will keep for eighteen months.

Washington, Sept. 23. — Provost Marshal-General Crowder will act promptly to rid American shipyards of draft evaders and slacker workers.

On the heels of a walkout of workers at the great Cramp yards, Philadelphia, a protest against employment in easy jobs of pugilists, ball players, actors and others in shipbuilding work—the Provost Marshal-General has issued new regulations covering this and similar situations in other yards.

These will be immediately enforced

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

There is Going to be a Great Reunion Declared Rev. A. Doner

Memorial Service Conducted in Bethany Tabernacle in Memory of Lance-Corporal Milton and Pte. Percy Bertrand.

For the Lord Himself shall descend from Heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first.

—Thessalonians iv., 16

Such was the message given by Rev. A. Doner Sunday morning to the congregation of Bethany Tabernacle on behalf of Lance-Corporal Milton Griffin and Pte. Percy Bertram, who were killed on the battlefield on the 27th and 28th of August respectively.

World is Grieving.

The whole world is grieving, and thousands and thousands of homes are grieving and thousands of memorial services are being held to-day, said Mr. Doner. We could count the homes that are not mourning. We know that when they go overseas to fight in France that they are in great danger of being mutilated and killed, yet we keep hoping that the boys will come home to us again. Do not we sing "Keep the Home Fires Burning, Till the Boys Come Home."

God wants us to be happy. His plan from the very beginning was that everybody should be one great family. Remember that God is our Father and our Mother. He gave us a beautiful home called the Garden of Eden. Just when God's plan was under way man turned and sinned. When man tasted of the fruit of evil He turned man out of his home. That was when the great family quarrel began. Cain slays Abel and afterwards is a fugitive on the face of the earth. Man continues to fight and blood is shed.

The whole earth is filled with violence and God repented that He made man.

A Great Re-union.

In spite of all the heart aches, the wanderings away and disunion there is going to be a great re-union in the skies. Everybody is waiting for this great re-union. The whole world is waiting. Those in the underworld are waiting. The angels wait. His kingdom shall be a kingdom of everlasting peace. What a glorious time it will be when the boys who have fallen in France, poured out their life's blood for the cause of freedom are united to us again yonder in the skies. Together we will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. While our loved ones are gone we will mourn as those who have gone only for a time. We are glad that they are not mutilated and thus return home. They are not hungry now, not thirsty, or cold. Those who have fallen in His arms have fallen to rest.

Junk Dealer a Collector of Scrap Metal and Memories That Haunt it to Melting Pot

And at the end of the road is the scrap heap. It is the common destiny of all created things in this temporal world. Man and his materials have each their heyday of service, shining in use, but gradually expending their powers to the last reserve, wearing down under work, breaking up, only to be separated finally, and cast into their respective discards.

A junk pile is a forbidding sight perhaps to everyone, but the owner to whom it represents, in these days of high prices, handsome additions to his bank account. To the imaginative mind comprehending the past of this conglomerate dilapidation there is something sepulchral about it. The ghosts of all the associations of varied lives seem to haunt it, and the saving thought of regeneration scarcely lightens the depression which this evidence of transiency evokes.

Contemplation in this strain probably seldom touches the attendants of Mr. L. Florence's heaps of scrap metal in his yard on Bethune Street. There are no Greys or Goldsmiths about the premises, but almost every piece of rusted metal invites speculation upon its former place in some of the spheres of human interest and activity. These scrambling heaps of cast off machinery, implements of the home, the farm and the factory, household articles beyond numeration, all suggest old associations that have been wrapped up with the affairs that many persons held dear and important.

Signs of Progress.

The scrap heap is essentially the symbol of progress. Pick over some of the nondescript articles, formless in the tangled background, and they take familiar shapes before you. Here are the parts of an old stove, one of the old-fashioned kind, that no doubt provided that warmth through long winters that was the centre of some family life. It may have witnessed a cycle of bliss from the first days when it was proudly purchased with other household furnishings that were to be hallowed by a new family's use. In the course of time one little group of children suffered the universal experience, and, once burnt, learned to dread the fire. Or this relic of some family's life may have known associations it is now glad to forget, years of bickerings in a group whose happiness was in its own hands, had there been those homely virtues that are essential to its nurture.

On another heap is a more modern derelict, the battered frame of an automobile. Stripped of all its peculiar accessories, it is an unfamiliar figure at first sight, and then gradually the wraiths of its parts resolve around it, and it appears in its pristine finish, brightly polished, undented and unsoiled by the road. Its contribution to the chronicles of the yard might be as varied as the whims of man. It must have known many pleasure rides, perhaps a few that are significantly styled "joy rides." Men may have jested about it, and as it began to wheeze and develop unmistakable signs of senility it was probably dubbed a jitney. And finally its usefulness sank below the war market prices of the copper, brass and iron in its makeup.

In poking through the pile you uncover a fire-dog and an andiron. Its companion is missing. Vagrant fancies follow this find, from the kitchen and highway, to the living-room of some home, evidently a substantial one, in which these bits of junk were cherished as the fittings of the hearth about which the family frequently gathered. The re-unions of Christmas and other similar occasions found the pair of dogs leashed to the fire of bulky logs, in which corn was popped, chestnuts toasted, and the past recalled with a fine humour over which pathos brooded. This was perhaps the home of "A Man of Property," and the old dogs were the confidants of long years of prosperity and the little tragedies that John Galsworthy depicts so faithfully in his story of a family of the English bourgeoisie.

You come across an old kitchen iron that was displaced by the whirl of electrical progress. It was retained for a time after the nickeled newcomer had supplanted it, and then one day the persistent and friendly ragman got it for a cent or two. It was lost in the load of junk until it reached the wholesaler's yard. There it was sorted from the other grades and kinds of metal and deposited upon the pile that seemed ordained to receive it.

Another Victim of Progress.

In Mr. Florence's yard you may find the stripped cores of motors and dynamos that have been relegated to the scrap heap as the result of the expansion of the Hydro Electric power service in this district. They were used in old power stations, some of which were operated by steam. Of late this Trent district has contributed not a few such victims to the relentless progress that demands efficiency and ousts the antiquated machines without mercy.

Hundreds of plow points are thrown together. They have long since reached the end of their last row, giving all they had in a short but useful service of turning up the soil. Waggon tires, lawn mowers, rails, girders, parts of binders, anything and everything that man had made and used, and finally thrown away as useless.

Junk is Re-melted.

It is hardly necessary to explain that from this graveyard of broken-down utensils and machinery new metal is obtained. Employees of the yard, after the scrap is purchased from the itinerant purchasers who work independently as retailers, so to speak, these sharp-eyed and experienced employees pick out the different grades of iron. Each has its separate pile. The steel is sold almost entirely to a Hamilton company that has a blast furnace; wrought iron goes to the Belleville Rolling Mills or to some other company that requires it. Machinery cast iron is one of the bulkiest groups in the yards plow points are usually delivered in carload lots.

The business is far more intricate and involved than the average citizen imagines. Scrap metal dealers follow a market that is seldom static fluctuating under the influence of the metal markets, and the existing equation of supply and demand for scrap.

Some Reclaimed.

Not all of the junk that comes to the wholesaler's yard is destined to the melting pot; not yet, at any rate. Some of it enjoys a new lease of life and service. Just as the war has called back to work the men who a few years ago were considered too old who had been "Oslerized," thrown on the human scrap heap by an inexorable business maxim that preferred youth and all its energies, so too, there is a general reclamation of articles from the metal scrap pile. Not long ago the Peterborough Cereal Company required a quantity of rails. They obtained them in the Florence yard. Contractors often discover there lengths of girders, or other metal fittings, that exactly fill their pressing needs.

No Hope For These.

In short, this practice of searching the scrap heap for articles that may be improvised for various purposes is a common one. But there is no redemption for the scratched and faded face of an old alarm clock with its brass springs disarrayed and hopelessly loosened, or an old pair of curling tongs that reigned in a boudoir, in a service the plebian plow points doubtless envy when the fragments of the scrap heap gossip their experiences. And here are the ends of shells that have been cut off the bases of ninety-pounders, providing some ex-shop clerk or youthful retired farmer with an excuse for accepting the fabulous wages of eight to ten dollars a day.

The scrap heap is truly the end of the road, no matter what person or created object travels it. And for the inanimate metals there is the big fire beneath the melting pot, regeneration, and in a sense reincarnation. The memories of old associations, old familiar uses will be sloughed off with the dross from the molten metal and lost in oblivion. For mortal man—but that's another and more serious prospect; for either, however, there is a certain emphasis on the futility of hoping for ultimately escaping the discard in the idea contained in the two lines from an almost forgotten "once popular" song: "Any rags, any bones, any bottles to-day.

Prize Winning Speech Given by Miss Mae Petrie at School Fair

How the School Children Can Help Win the War, Formed the Subject of Miss Petrie's Address.

Miss Mae B. Petrie, of School Section No. 12, Otonabee, gave the following prize-winning five-minute speech at the Otonabee Rural School Fair, which was held at Zion on Thursday last. The address given by Miss Petrie follows:

How We School Children Can Help to Win the War.

Judges, Ladies and Gentlemen, and Fellow-Students:

It is my privilege to speak to you for a few minutes on the subject "How we School Children Can Help to Win the War."

In this time of national stress this question of "How Can we Children Help to Win the War?" comes to each one of us. It is a national duty to consider this seriously.

Must do Our Share.

In the first place, we must do our share in conserving food. This can be done in many ways.

Then again we must avoid wastage of food at the table, e.g., in leaving scraps of bread and butter or meat at our places. Also we can conserve wheat by substituting even more vegetables and potatoes for some of our usual bread and pastry diet.

Again, though five per cent of our diet should be some form of sugar, yet so many candies are not a necessity, nor so many dishes of ice cream.

Also, we can do with less pastry, thus conserving sugar, flour and fats. Instead of making our time-honoured fruit cake, we might use a freshly made bran cake, which, if well made is not only economical but very wholesome.

The Fishing Season.

During the fishing season we have once more an ideal opportunity for obeying our patriotic impulses, and at the same time enjoying an excellent day's sport at the lakeside. By using more fish we can save other meat supplies for shipment to our brave soldiers.

Then let me urge those of us who help our mothers to exercise the utmost care in our cooking. Cook every kind of food thoroughly, meanwhile watching diligently lest it burn and thus waste the fat, flour, sugar, etc.

Another way in which we may help to win the war is by growing food. We might grow potatoes, peas, onions, beets, carrots, corn, tomatoes, etc. If living in a city we might make use of the back yards for this purpose. Otherwise in fence corners, or on other waste land, we may have our win-the-war garden. We are able to hoe and rake the seed-beds, plant the seed, and weed and water the plots, thus enabling our parents to spend more time on Red Cross Work or heavier agricultural work. We must be prepared to harvest our vegetables at the most opportune moment and in the most successful manner. Some must be canned, some must be stored, but always and ever we must avoid waste.

Another Way.

There is yet another way in which we are co-workers with the allied forces. We can exert a strong influence upon others.

First, in our Home or School Gardens, with the seeds given by the Department of Agriculture, we can illustrate to the community the most successful modern methods of gardening. This information we get from the pamphlets and bulletins so freely supplied to us by the Department of Agriculture.

Secondly: By learning well the agricultural lessons taught us in school and by performing careful experiments under the aid and direction of the teacher, we can be a benefit to our neighbours by passing on our new information.

Thirdly: We may secure bulletins and pamphlets on seasonable topics, suited to the needs of the farmers in our section and distribute these, thus enabling them to find more successful methods of doing their work.

Home Grown Seeds.

Then we may create a distinct preference for home grown seeds, carefully selected and cleaned, by planting such biennials as carrots and mangels during their second season. Thus we might grow enough seed for many farmers and use the money received for enlarging our garden, for Red Cross Work or Victory Bonds.

Then, too, it is a national duty to save our clothing, especially woollen goods. This is not such a difficult task as may at first seem if we urge our parents to use good judgment in buying our necessities and then we ourselves care for them. How often we are slackers when we forget to mend old clothes. A small hole in our stockings or dress or sweater coat is neglected until it becomes so large that the required patch presents a very unsightly appearance. Though we are very fond of our snug-fitting woollen sweater coat or delicate serge and tweed suits, we might again wear our old ones this season, thus making a very slight sacrifice and leaving wool for socks and suits for our overseas army.

Already I have told you of some of the ways in which we may help win the war—by saving food and clothing, by growing food, and by our influence upon others. My last words are—

"All together, onward to Victory."

Music & Drama

DADDY LONG LEGS.

The fact that it was the third appearance here of Jean Webster's book play, "Daddy Long Legs," did not seem to detract either from the attendance or the merit of the performance, for there was a large audience at the Grand on Saturday evening and the pretty little play was apparently enjoyed as much as ever. The story of the little orphan girl who succeeds in rising from the obscurity of the John Greer Home into the "white light that beats upon the throne" of a successful novelist who eventually marries the man whose assistance enabled her to develop her career is too well known to require any extended reference. Edna Walton as Judy Abbott, the centre figure of the play, added to the laurels she won on her last appearance in the part here, and was admirably supported by a capable caste. Robert Philips gave a splendid interpretation of the part of Jervis Pendleton, and a clever bit was contributed by Leonra Bradly as Mrs. Semple. The juveniles who appeared in the roles of the orphan children added much to the success of the first act by their clever work.

The man who wants the earth is the very one the earth can't get along with.

Mission For Men at St. Peter's Cathedral

Began Last Night and Will Continue Throughout the Week.

The large congregation that practically filled St. Peter's Cathedral last night was composed entirely of men for whom a mission is being conducted this week by three members of the Redemptorist Order of Toronto. Devotions will be held each evening beginning at 7.30 o'clock, at which a special sermon will be preached, and in the mornings there will be masses at 5 o'clock and 7 o'clock, followed by short instruction. At the first services last night the men of the three Catholic parishes of the city were largely represented. During the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament a special prayer was offered for those who are not making the mission, and at the same time the church bell was tolled as a reminder to them that the mission had commenced.

Rev. A. McBrearty preached the sermon last night, quoting his text from the 10th Chapter of St. Luke. "Martha thou art solicitous about many things, but one thing is needful." Man is prone to engross himself with the affairs of this world, to seek wealth, honour, pleasure, forgetful that he is destined for eternity, Rev. Father McBrearty said. But life is transitory and no man knows when or where he will die. He should be always solicitous about his eternal salvation. God had provided His grace to sustain man, but He had also endowed him with a free will by which he could elect either to co-operate with that grace or reject it. Father McBrearty's appeal to the men was to live in God's grace, and daily to serve Him that they might be prepared for death whenever and wherever it might come. The speaker outlined a regimen of daily service, beginning with the morning prayer, grace at meals, dedication of the day's works, thoughts and actions to God, resistance against temptations to sin and finally night prayer with a review of the day's events.

Rev. Father McLaughlin will preach this evening on the subject: "The One Great Evil of the Present Day."

RESULTS WERE A GREAT SURPRISE

Heard So Much Talk About Tanlac, Took it Herself and Troubles End.

"Well, there is no doubt in my mind now about Tanlac being a fine medicine, for I have tried it," said Mrs. Fred Boulter, who resides at 1024 Dufferin street, Toronto, recently. Mrs. Boulter has lived in Toronto for nearly twenty years and has many friends. She is engaged in the flour and feed business on Dufferin street.

"My friends tell me I am looking fine now," she continued, "but before I took Tanlac I certainly was feeling terrible. I had been suffering with my stomach for two years and in spite of all my efforts to find relief I kept getting worse. My appetite was so poor that I never relished anything and what little I did eat made me feel miserable for hours. My stomach was sour and upset all the time and I would fill up with gas which would press on my heart and make it hard for me to breathe. No matter what I ate I suffered from indigestion and would have such awful pains in the pit of my stomach at times that I could hardly stand it. I felt tired and worn-out all the time and suffered constantly with fearful headache. I couldn't rest well at night and would get up in the mornings feeling as badly as if I hadn't slept at all.

"I heard so many people in the store talking about the good results they had gotten from Tanlac that I made up my mind to try it and my improvement has really been surprising. I have just started on my fourth bottle and I never feel a sign of indigestion at all. My appetite is splendid and I feel stronger and have more energy than I have had in a long time. I got one of my friends to take it some time ago and she is simply delighted over the results. I gladly recommend it to every one because I know from experience how fine it is.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Four Million Men Will Be Sent to France by Next June by United States Government

All Men in the States Will be Forced Out of Non-Essential Employment —Government Will Muster the Women of the Nation to Take Their Places.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Machinery designed to force men out of non-essential employment and muster the women of the nation to take their places was put in motion to-day by 1,000 community labour boards reaching into every section of the country.

The Boards are acting under detailed instructions from the Government working through the United States' Employment Service.

Each Board soon will publish lists of industries in its locality in which men should be replaced by women. The lists will be based on surveys of all industrial plants in each Board's district. The surveys will be minute. Each job will be studied to determine whether a woman should fill it.

Will Publish Lists.

Publication of the lists is expected to cause employers to comply and substitute women as a result of the moral pressure thus exerted. Where moral pressure fails, stronger measures may be undertaken. The Employment Service, working through the War Industries Board, has power to shut off the supply of raw materials from any plant.

This move is a test of the enlarged army programme under which four million men will be sent to France by next June.

It is expected to weed out of non-essential employments every man in the nation. The corollary is the probable induction of hundreds of thousands of women, not only into non-essential war industries, but into munitions factories as well. Officials say the number of women may run into millions.

The women are imperatively needed to insure an adequate supply of material and munitions to the fighting men in France.

Lakefield Plans to Purchase Double Cylinder Fire Engine

Public Meeting Was Held to Discuss the Matter of More Fire Protection for the Village.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 23—A Public meeting called by the Reeve and council to discuss the question of better fire protection was held in the Town Hall with Reeve F. J. Moore in the chair.

In opening the meeting he explained that our present fire protection was not what it should be and as various schemes were exploited he thought it better to call a public meeting of the citizens and discuss the matter thoroughly in order that the council might the more intelligently provide a substantial Fire Protection system.

Mr. E. R. Tate spoke at some length on our present fire equipment and said that as we have had a steam fire engine for a number of years why not sell or exchange it for one of the modern gasoline fire engines.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard stated that he had not thought of a gasoline fire engine before but had an idea that the suggestion was a good one.

Mr. Robert Duff was also in favor of a gasoline engine in preference to our present steam fire engine.

Mr. J. F. Lillicrap spoke in favor of repairing our present steam fire engine and then when the war was over take up the question of Water Works and the Electric Lighting with the Hydro Commission.

Mr. John E. Richardson was of the opinion that if our present steam engine was put in proper repair it would still do good service and if properly repaired would still be cheaper than any other system we could get at the present time.

WATER WORKS SYSTEM

Mr. W. J. Charlton of the Lakefield Elevator, spoke very strongly in favor of a water works system, as if we purchased a gasoline fire engine we would be in no better position than we are now with our present engine.

Mr. Alex. McDonald gave an illustration of a small town out in Western Canada in which he lived and they owned their own Water Works and Electric Lighting Systems and derived a larger revenue from them which would eventually pay the principal and interest and he would strongly recommend a similar system for Lakefield.

It was moved by Mr. W. J. Charlton seconded by Mr E. R. Tate that we would recommend the council to get an estimate of a Water Works System with a main pipe running up Queen street as far as the rail track and also a main on Bridge street to Hills Corner and to get quotations for 6 inch, 8 inch and 12 inch mains and also to include and electric pumping station which was carried unanimously.

FAVOURED CHEMICAL ENGINE

Dr. J. C. Smith, who had been called away in the earlier part of the evening cam ein and as he is an enthusiast on a chemical fire engine, he made a stirring appeal in its favour as he said in nine cases out of ten if a chemical engine were on the ground quickly incipient fires would be quenched before a heavy fire engine or hose could be got out of the engine hall and even if we went in for a Water Works System it would still be a necessity

It was moved by Dr. J. C. Smith and seconded by Robert Duff that we recommend the council to secure a demonstration at once of a double cylinder chemical engine on a Ford Chassis from the American LaFrance Fire Extinguisher and if the demonstration is satisfactory that we buy it at a cost of $1700.00 which was unanimously carried.

It was also understood that our present engine would be overhauled and put in a state of repair.

After which the meeting adjourned The meeting was a fairly large and representative gathering.

LAKEFIELD PERSONALS

Annual Meeting of Soldiers' Comfort Club.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 23.—Sergt. C. Stenner, of Kingston, is spending a few days' leave with his family in the village.

Mrs. T. H Darcy has gone to Detroit, where she will spend the winter with her niece, Mrs. Alfred Edmonds.

Mrs. Wainwright (nee Pedlar), of Winnipeg, is visiting friends in the village.

Mrs. Charles Grylls, Mr. Frank Grylls, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Northey and daughter, Ruth, have returned from Stoney Lake, where they have spent the summer.

Mr. Jack Mahood, of the Bank of Commerce, Peterborough, is a week-end visitor at his home in the village.

The Boy Scouts who had a stand at the Fair cleared $10, 85 of which has been donated to the Soldiers' Comfort Club, and the remainder banked as a nest egg. The proceeds from the Wolf Cats' stand amounted to $5.05.

School Opened.

The Grove School re-opened on Thursday last and is larger than ever. A number of new faces and many old ones are seen among the boys.

Lance-Corp. James Garvey, who has been spending a month's leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Garvey, has returned to Quebec, where he is stationed.

Miss Corkery, of the Public School Staff, spent the week-end with her parents in Peterborough.

Miss Priest, a returned missionary from India, will speak in the Baptist Church on Thursday evening.

Mrs. H. G. Fitzgerald, of Sandy Point who was visiting in the village for the fair, returned to the lake on Thursday.

Mrs. W. G. Stone, of Hamilton, is the guest of Mrs. John Sanderson this week.

Mrs. I. Cheyne and Miss Margaret, of Gore's Landing, are visiting Mr and Mrs. F. Waldon.

Annual Meeting.

The Soldiers' Comfort Club will hold their annual meeting on Thursday afternoon, September 26th, at three o'clock, in the Town Hall. Reports of the officers will be given and the election of officers for the coming year will be held. As this is an important meeting a large attendance is asked. Afternoon tea will be served, after the business is over, at a moderate charge. Beginning next Thursday the meetings will be held from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Theatre in Lakefield.

On Saturday evening Mr. W. W. Leonard opened the "Queen Street Theatre." The interior of the theatre is very attractive and up-to-date in every particular. The upper walls are a rich cream tint and the lower part is dark green. The theatre is well lighted and is a credit to the town. The seats are of the newest design of theatre seats and are very comfortable. A piano has been installed, and Mr. F. Erskine played during the performance. The pictures were heartily appreciated by the large audience. The theatre will be open on Tuesday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

Mr. Fred Stubbs, of Galt, who has been visiting his uncle, Mr. W. H. Down, for the past two days, has been very successful as a fisherman while here, catching two fine maskinonge on Thursday in Lake Kahawanoonkah, and on Friday a twenty-four and a half pound maskinonge, measuring 50 inches long.

A group of chorus girls who make "Have a Heart" such a fascinating musical comedy. Henry W. Savage will offer this tuneful treat at the Grand next Wednesday. The seat sale opened this morning.

"Have a Heart," the forty-seventh production of Henry W. Savage, and one of New York's most emphatic musical comedy hits, will be seen at "The Grand" next Wednesday, Sept. 25th. Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse wrote the book and lyrics and the music is by Jerome Kern, whose tingling melodies have been cabareted, victroled, hummed, whistled and danced to from Coast to Coast.

Among the popular numbers are "You Said Something," "I'm so Busy," "Look in His Eyes," "I'm all Alone," "I'm Here, Little Girls, I'm Here," "Have a Heart," "Samarkland," "Napoleon," "Honeymoon Inn," "Can the Cabaret," "My Wife—My Man," "Daisy," "Bright Lights and "The Road that Lies Before." One novel scene is the lingerie section of a big department store, alert with life, laughter and feminine loveliness, while another depicts the luxurious lounge room of a fashionable summer hotel at Blueport, R.I. "Have a Heart" will be presented with the high quality of singers, dancers and comedians and the lavish stage embellishment that have made the Henry W. Savage trademark so reliable in the past. There is a large beauty chorus of singing ability and the special orchestra of the company.

Approves of the Platoon System

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—The Trades and Labour Council passed a resolution declaring that "Every human being had a right to the joys of home life," and approving of a double platoon system being adopted "so that every fireman in the civic service can have at least twelve hours off duty each day."

President Wm. Moodle of the International Fire Fighters, Local 113, declared that in the past the firemen had "catered to the aldermen, controllers and civic officials," but that on January 1 they intended to "bring weight to bear" which would bring about a change in conditions under which the firemen work. "If we can't why we intend to kick over the traces," he said, though there "We are here, and here to stay," ence in his statement.

Affiliated For Keeps.

"We are here, and her to stap," he said, referring to affiliation with the Council. Speaking further relative to the firemen catering to Council and civic officials, he said that "after the election they are in and we are out, where we always were," Ninety per cent. of the citizens did not know the firemen were on duty 24 hours a day, six days a week.

Under the two-platoon system the firemen would work 12 hours a day, seven days a week.

"We are going to help Ald. Birdsall win that hat," he added, referring to a wager made with Controller McBride that the firemen would not go on strike.

Acting President Richards assured the fire fighters of the support of organized labour in their effort to bring about proper working conditions.

Condition A Scandal.

Delegate Cox declared it to be a "scandal that a city of half a million people compels its firemen to spend 24 hours a day, six days a week, either in the fire station or on the street," and expressed pleasure that the "threat didn't take," referring to the opposition to the firemen becoming affiliated with organized labour. "Another association which serves the public were told several years ago that they couldn't join the labour movement, and that if trouble came up they would have to stand the consequences. Well, trouble did come up, and we stood the consequences," said Delegate Cox. He was referring to the postmen.

Police To Organize.

The delegate predicted that the police, too, would soon organize. "They have just as much right as the chief constables have to organize. We organize for the betterment of ourselves and the community that we serve," he said.

A delegate, who had been a fireman, said the sleeping accommodation and sanitary conditions at some of the older stations were a disgrace.

VON HERTLING TIRED, SAYS GERMAN ACCOUNT

Claims He is Tired of Power and Worn Out by Events.

Washington, Sept. 21. — Count Von Hertling, according to an article in the Boersen Zeitung, a synopsis of which was received here in an official despatch from France, gives the impression of an exhausted man, tired of power and worn out by events.

The paper says there are so few men in the empire capable of acting as political leaders that it is necessary to make use to the utmost limit of the strength and capabilities of an old man, who after all, has rendered eminent services. The different parties in the Reichstag are preparing of a continuation of the discussion in the principal committees of the Reichstag, which will meet on Sept. 24th.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—The government has urgently requested that Canadians buy at home. The adverse balance of trade with the U.S. amounts to over 400 millions. We are paying not only for these goods, but a premium on the rate of exchange as well. Why? Because a creditor nation always has the whip-hand of a buying nation. It is just as if we had to pay a very high per cent. for borrowed money. This sort of thing will ruin us if it is not stopped. Some people seem to think that having the goods is just as good as having the money. Is having land just the same as having the money? Or cattle? Or produce? If we do not keep the only medium for buying (money) in the country by doing our own growing and manufacturing, we will run on the rocks. We are on one now. Let us wake up and get rid of our own prejudices and face the facts that at this very moment staring us in the face from across the line. Do not put yourself in other people's power or they may make you pay for it Do not forget that.

NEAR DROWNING AT STONEY LAKE

MONTREAL VISITORS JOLTED OUT OF LAUNCH WHICH STRUCK A ROCK

The Stoney Lake season closed without a drowning in the lake but last week a narrow escape was recorded near "Gladbalken". Mr. Walters of Montreal, whose summer home is near Juniper Island, was driving his launch at full speed down the lake when it struck a rock. The force of the collision knocked Mrs. Walters who was in the launch overboard. Seeing her mother overboard, Miss Helene Walters immediately dived after her and rescued her. It was several minutes before Mr. Walters discovered what had happened and turning round to speak found the boat empty. Fortunately there were no ill results of the accident other than the discomfort caused.

PTE. BELL WAS A BRAVE SOLDIER

The mother of Pte. Harold Bell, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action on August 9th, has received the following letter from the officer in charge of his section:

France, Aug. 24th.

Dear Mrs. Bell: This is the first opportunity that I have had to write you and express my deepest sympathy in the loss of your son, Pte. H. H. Bell, who was killed in action, August 9th. Pte. Bell was one of the most willing and cheerful boys in the section and was a real favorite with all. He was courageous and brave at all times and his death is a great loss both to you and the machine gun corps.

Pte. Bell was buried very close to where he fell. I am sure it will relieve you to hear that death was instantaneous, caused by a machine gun bullet through the head.

If I can be of any assistance to you in any way I would only be too glad to have you write to me.

Yours sincerely,
Lieut. A. S. Haas,
1st Canadian Machine Gun Battalion.

LEAGUE WILL COLLECT PAPERS.

The Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham will canvass the city for paper on Wednesday, September 25th. All those who have paper, magazines, etc., are kindly requested to have same tied up and ready on the verandah, or at the door, for the convenience of those who will call. The League are anxious to secure enough paper to fill a car, and the patronage of the citizens will be greatly appreciated.

MR. TIMOTHY HURLEY DIED SUDDENLY ON SUNDAY MORNING

Was the Father of Real Estate Business in Peterboro—Developed Entire Suburb.

The death occurred suddenly on Sunday morning, September 22nd, of Mr. Timothy Hurley, an old and highly respected citizen of Peterborough. Although his health had been uncertain during the past month, he carried on his business without interruption. On Sunday he arose and was preparing to attend the 10.30 mass at St. Peter's Cathedral. Before he had completed dressing, however, he was stricken with a heart attack and died in a short time. Rev. Father Phelan was called immediately and administered the last sacrament.

The late Mr. Hurley was born near Norwood in December, 1837. In early life he engaged in the mercantile business in Hastings, and later removed to Peterborough in 1884. He established the first real estate agency in this city and was actually the father of the real estate business as it is conducted here to-day. He was convinced of the possibilities of Peterborough's development and kept a constant faith in its future. As an evidence of his enterprise, he early saw the advantages of advertising, and in the columns of the Examiner his announcements had a fixed place, an attractive form, and doubtless a wide appeal. In the opening of suburban real estate Mr. Hurley was the pioneer in this city, and on the south-western border of the city is a large section which he purchased and developed. His name became attached to this suburb, which has been known as "Hurleyville." In his real estate transactions, Mr. Hurley appealed particularly to the workingman, and it may be assumed with certainty that his advertisements urging thrift and the ownership of property influenced many a citizen in obtaining a home. Throughout the city many pieces of property changed ownership through Mr. Hurley's salesmanship, and in his years of business he gained and retained a high reputation for honest dealing and general integrity.

Mr. Hurley is survived by his wife, one son, Rev. A. E. Hurley, who is at present in Rome, Italy, and two daughters, Mrs. E. J. McCarthy and Miss Lillian, both of this city. The deceased was a member of the Total Abstinence Society and of the C.M.B.A.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from his late residence, 282 Hunter street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Peter's cemetery.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

Review of Operations on Canadian Fighting Front

Week Past Has Been One of Active Watchfulness Marked by Numerous Raids.

(By J. W. B. Livesay—Canadian Press)

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES IN FRANCE, Sept 23.—The week on the Canadian front has been one of active watchfulness, marked by continued patrols and raids on both sides of the Canal Du Nord, which lends itself to this type of warfare. One post has been taken and retaken no fewer than four times, and the operations have netted us a number of prisoners and a machine gun, even German raids resulting in prisoners to us. Shelling has been continuous with gas predominating in the German strafing. Aerial activity, both by plane and balloon, has been uninterrupted. Several German planes and balloons have fallen to our pilots. Our artillery has dominated the situation frequently, neutralizing German batteries and causing many fires, as well as destroying observation posts and bridges, of which there are many in this district. There is an evident intention on the part of the enemy to hold the east side of the Canal to the end, as one of the remaining strong lines in their possession. The importance of the breach made in the Hindenburg line is commented on by a well-known German critic as one of the disasters of the war and as being ominously significant.

A LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Plans Have Been Drawn Up and Will Be Published in Book Form

(Special to Examiner.)

Amsterdam, September 23. — The Vossiche Zeitung prints a plan for a league of nations drawn up by Mathias Erzberger, leader of the German Centrist party. It will shortly be published in book form. In his plan, Erzberger declared a league of nations is the only way to peace. Erzberger invited criticism and practical counter proposals.

Spanish Influenza Reaches Canada

Dread Disease Claims Five Victims at Niagara Camp.

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Spanish influenza has claimed five victims, who died in the Polish infantry camp at Niagara, and there are 168 soldiers suffering from this disease there at present. The Canadian camp has not yet been attacked, although there are many cases of severe colds there. Quebec despatches to-day tell of the closing and quarantining of the College of Victoriaville on account of influenza there, two of the teaching staff and one student having succumbed. Nine sailors on ships in the port of Quebec have died during the last few days of this disease.

The objective of the Knights of Columbus in Peterborough for the Army Hut Fund has been fixed at $6,000. Yesterday afternoon a preliminary meeting was largely attended, and reflected an enthusiasm that ensures the success of the local campaign. Already the Minstrel Club has raised $200, and they expect to double that contribution this week by shows in Lindsay, Cobourg and a return performance in Peterborough. In the Peterborough district all the outlying communities have concluded their work. The results have been wholly gratifying. Cobourg, for instance, increased their total of $200 last year to $1,000.

One week from to-night a public meeting will be held in the Opera House. One of the speakers will be Mr. J. P. Dunne, of Ogdensburg, N.Y. Other announcements will be made during the week as soon as the details are arranged.

WILL SET A NEW PRICE FOR PAPER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

OTTAWA, Sept. 23.—Announcement that he would make a new order setting the price of newsprint paper which would be retroactive to July 1st and that a separate price for the Fort Frances Mills, would be set, possibly as high as eighty dollars per ton, was made to-day by Commissioner R. A. Pringle. Newspaper publishers were not represented and their letters published recently setting forth their views, was characterized by the paper manufacturers counsel as impudent and audacious.

PRESENTATION TO MR. A. A. GIBBON

IS LEAVING F. R. J. MACPHERSON COMPANY TO TAKE A POSITION IN MONTREAL

After the close of the day's work last Saturday, the firm of Messrs. F. R. J. MacPherson together with the employees gathered together to present a signet ring and address to Mr A. A. Gibbon, their efficient bookkeeper who is leaving shortly to take up a position in Montreal.

Mr. A. A. Gibbon,

Dear Sir,—On the occasion of your leaving our employ to take another position in Montreal we, your employers and fellow employees desire to express to you our warm personal respect and to acknowledge the kindly feeling which has characterized all our relations with you during the past four years, while acting as our bookkeeper.

Your estimable qualities have been shown in many ways and the fidelity with which you have discharged your duties have served to form an attachment which will not be easily separated.

We ask you to accept this signet ring as a mark of our esteem with the hope that it may often remind you of the pleasant days you spent in Peterborough.

Please convey to Mrs. Gibbon our best wishes for her and your future happiness and prosperity.

SPEAK GERMAN BUT BLESS WILSON.

Sandusky, Ohio, Sept. 21. — Speaking in German, nearly 200 ministers and elders attending the 37th annual session of the Central Synod of the Reformed Church of the United States here, bestowed blessings on President Wilson and prayed for 'a speedy victory for the allies." The session was in German, because many of the aged clergymen knew no other language.

ARMAND LAVERGNE APPEALS

French Lawyer Declares Justice Duff Has no Right to Annul Exemptions.

Quebec, Sept. 21.—Claiming that Justice Duff has no authority to annul the exemptions of draftees without their individual cases being heard before the regular appeals tribunals, Armand Lavergne, K. C., applied before Justice Dorion for an injunction against the local registrar, the provost marshal of the military police, and the local militia officials to prevent them from holding Alfred Guilbault, of Charlesbourg, who has been arrested under the Military Service Act, after Justice Duff had annulled the initial exemption obtained at the regular exemption board.

The case was adjourned till September 26th.

It was a dull day in the trenches and a bunch of Tommies had gathered and the talk turned on a big boche who had been captured the night before. "He was scared stiff," said one Tommy. "Did he run?" asked another. "Run!" replied the first one. "Why, if that boche had just one feather in his hand he'd a' flew—Scarnton Times.

AMERICANS TURN PINE FOREST INTO BIG SUPPLY DEPOT

GIEVRES, Central France, Sep-21. — To-day a forest, to-morrow a building, the next day a workshop.

This is the way the astonished French people described how the Americans suddenly have constructed a huge establishment here, turning what was a pine forest into warehouses and then turning these into vast and busy centres for the huge mass of army supplies on the way to the front.

Gievres is a sort of half way point, midway between the coast and the ring line, and is the central supply depot of the intermediate zone. Here things are sorted and a ranged as they come pell mell from the ocean ports in the vast miscellaneous mass—just out of the holds of steamers—food, clothing, guns, barbed wire, medicine, carrier pigeons, refrigerated beef, rolling kitchens, and all the conglomeration of supplies needed by a million men. Everyt ing must be in order before it goes forward to the advance zone where the fighting is going on, and this is where the order is brought out of the seemnig chaos in this tidal wave of army goods sweeping in from America.

The Gievres depot has been laid in an elongated diamond shape, and compared to a baseball diamond, it is seven miles from the home plate to second base, and two miles across from first to third base. Within this enormous diamond are eighty huge warehouses, and scores of other buildings, some of them of unprecedented magnitude. One of these is a refrigerating plant, rivalling those in the Chicago meat district, which holds more than ten million pounds of frozen beef — enough to feed one million men for 20 days.

"I'd rather drive than eat!" exclaimed the motor fan. "But what does our wife say about it?" "Oh, she'd rater ride than cook; so we get along fine."—Milestones.

'I don't believe when old Dodger died a single soul regretted him." "Oh yes, I know one man who did. He was the one who married Dodger's widow."—Baltimore American

ENGLISH BRIDES CUT OUT CANADIAN GIRLS

1,000 MARRY A WEEK

Prominent women throughout the Dominion feel keenly on the question of Canadian soldiers marrying overseas. In their opinion it is a vital problem and one which should be dealt with by our Government at once.

"It is most unfair to our Canadian girls," said Mrs. E. A. Stevens, president of the Provincial Women's Christian Union, and the matter is one which the women of Canada should bring to the attention of our Good Government League, and thus draw it forcibly to the attention of the Canadian Government, whose duty it is to look after the young womanhood of this Dominion.

As a result of the fact that the British Government is playing the role of a matchmaking mamma and has clubs and organizations for the purpose of encouraging matrimony among the colonials, the success of their scheme is apparent in the statement attributed to Sir Edward Kemp that "Canadian soldiers overseas are marrying English girls at the rate of one thousand a month."

Poor Outlook For Canadians.

'This means after the war that Canada is to be flooded with thousands of young English brides, while the Canadian women will be forced to work in the offices, shops and factories for the remainder of their lives.

"The women of Canada have made their sacrifice without a murmur in letting their young men go overseas. Many of them will never come back, and it is my opinion that those who are left should be encouraged to marry the girls at home.

"Now that the tide has turned in favour of the allies and the Americans are pouring into the field of battle, I feel that the question of giving our young men who have seen service since the beginning of the war an opportunity to return to Canada on a short furlough should be favourably considered.

Question of Propinquity.

"Propinquity has a great deal to do with the marriage question. Thousands of our young men went overseas when they were at an age when they did not think of marriage, and they have become marriageable abroad. They get leave to England, but not to Canada, and on visits to England after the hardships of the field they are particularly susceptible to woman influence and the charm of domestic life."

"This," declared a prominent business man, "should be taken into consideration by our Government, who should endeavour as far as possible to renew home ties. In the small town of Orillia there have been over 100 young men, the flower of the country, who have given their lives for their country. If 100 more marry in England it is going to be a hard proposition for our young women to face. This town is only cited as an example of what dozens of other Ontario towns are suffering at the present time. The point at issue is this: Are the Canadian girls who have encouraged their men to go and have borne the brunt of battle so bravely to be allowed to suffer?"

"It is a very serious question and one which should be dealt with by the Government, not by women," said Lady Falconer, president of the Y.W.C.A. "It is something which could not be avoided in the past, as it would have been most unpatriotic to ask our young men to come home when they were so badly needed."

In the opinion of Mrs. A. E. Gooderham, president of the National Council of the I.O.D.E., it is a question of individual rights. "As long as our men marry young women belonging to our own Empire, I cannot see that it makes much difference," she said. "I would approve, however, of our first contingent men getting furlough if he Government deems it feasible."

GRAIN MARKET

Ontario grain crops are moving out very slowly, except in the Essex and Kent Counties. There have been heavy deliveries from the latter points, until oats began to ease off a little in prices. Deliveries of Western oats, however, are still very light and the local market for both oats and barley is again quite firm. Corn markets are weak. The wheat flour situation is getting easier, Ontario flour quoting 10c. lower.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2, $2.21 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.14 1-2, not including tax, in store, Fort William.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.31; No. 3 winter, $2.37; No. 2 spring, $2.26; No. 3 spring, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 76c. to 78c.; No. 3, 75 to 77c., according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, new crop, $1.06 to $1.10.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Ontario Flour — War quality, $10.75, Toronto-Montreal, $10.75, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $41.40; bran, $36.40; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay— Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $19 to $20; No. 2 mixed, $17 to $18 per ton; straw, car lots, $9 to $9.50.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday, 308 cars, with 6,046 cattlke, 281 calves, 997 hogs, and 3,051 sheep and lambs.

With the heaviest run of cattle offering this season the market opened yesterday with a good active demand for choice butcher, but rather slow on the large run of common stuff. Later, the trade quickened a little and cattle were moving to the scales quite freely. On the whole it was a very fair steady market, considering the big supply. Among the choice stuff there was no hesitation, and prices held good and strong, one extra fancy load selling at $16 by Dunn and Levack. Several other loads sold from $14 to $15.25. The common rough butcher was barely steady, from $9 to $9.75.

Calves were easier and 50c. lower.

Hogs steady at $19.50, fed.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

Food Board Flashes

Canada is full of feminine bargain hunters. Every city and town and village has some of them. Their bargain hunting usually consists of pursuit of the vagaries of Madame La Mode.

Any day in the week you can see Expectant Feminity crowding around a bargin counter laden with shoes or waists or other fluffy ruffles. It doesn't matter how early they have to get up to be first in the game.

But when it comes to ordering meat and groceries—well, that is a different proposition altogether. The very women who rush so madly after clothes will sit at home and telephone for their meat.

If the same interest were exhibited in grocery as in clothes ads. and the same enthusiasm were expended in chasing around town for the lowest rates, homes would be more economically and better run.

NOT LOOKING IT.

He draws a salary of $10,000 a year. Think of it. And he doesn't look as if he had sense enough to come in out of the rain.

True. But it helps considerably sometimes for a man to look that way and be quite the opposite. He can fool a lot of people.

PACKED BUTTER KEEPS

Seed Corn Situation Is Critical—Select Own Seed Now.

Select Ears From Field for Height, Strength, Leafiness and Earliness.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE first point to observe in the packing of butter, in order to have it keep well for winter use is to have good butter. The best butter for packing is usually made in the months of June and September. It is preferably made from comparatively sweet cream which has been pasteurized. However, on the farm pasteurization is not commonly followed. Hence the butter should be made when the weather is comparatively cool and the cream should be churned before it becomes very sour—in fact, the sweeter the cream the more likely it is to produce good keeping quality in the butter, so long as there is sufficient acid in the cream to give good churning results.

The cream should be churned in the usual way, except that the butter may be washed once with brine, which is made by dissolving salt in water, instead of using water at both washings. Salt at the usual rate—but not over one ounce of salt per pound of butter, because salt does not preserve butter as is commonly supposed, except in a minor degree in unpasteurized cream butter. It is a mistake, however, to add so much salt that the fine flavor of the butter is covered up.

Having worked the butter as usual, pack it firmly into crocks, tubs or boxes. If unparaffined wooden packages are used, these should be soaked several days in salt water to prevent "woody" flavor in the butter. A better plan is to coat the inside of the tub or box with hot wax, then line with heavy parchment paper, before packing the butter. Glazed crocks which are clean, need no lining.

When the package is full, preferably all from one churning, smooth the top of the butter, cover with parchment paper or a clean cotton cloth, then the heavy brown paper over the top and place in a cool cellar or in cold storage. Sometimes salt paste is put on top of the cloth or paper and this is kept moist by sprinkling on water from time to time. This excludes the air and helps to keep the butter.

We recommend packing the butter in solid form which is to be kept for some time, rather than holding the butter in prints, even though these may be submerged in brine.—Prof. F. Dea, O. A. College, Guelph.

HAY FEVER PLANTS.

Sufferers Count Ragweed and Goldenrod as Enemies.

Victims of hay fever look upon this season with no especial favor. It is not quite yet the time of year when their sufferings become acute, but the time draws near, and the indications point to an abundant crop of goldenrod and ragweed. It seems that most persons who have hay fever charge the goldenrod with being the author of their miseries, and it is this serious accusation which perhaps has so long withheld from the goldenrod the honor of being designated as the national flower.

Another and a newer school of students and philosophers now seek to clear the goldenrod of the charges made against it and are laying the blame for hay fever on the ragweed, a plant which is much more common in the neighborhood of Washington and very likely in all other neighborhoods, than the goldenrod. The president of the Hay Fever Preventive Association has said that the chief cause of hay fever, and especially that variety of the malady known as "Fall hay fever," is the pollen of two varieties of ragweed. The pollen of the spikelike flower of this weed is yellowish in color and almost as light as smoke or fine dust. It is so abundant that during the stage of pollination one's clothing will be stained yellow by walking through a patch of it, or only brushing against a well-developed plant.

While the pollen of the ragweed is extremely light and very easily wind-borne, the pollen of the goldenrod is heavy and tenacious. It would seem to be the opinion of experts on this matter that hay fever victims are not affected by the dust of goldenrod unless they place their nostrils close to the flower.

The two guilty varieties of ragweed are well known around Washington. The more common of them is that which is called the wormwood ragweed, because of its resemblance to common wormwood. It bears tiny white flowers and its leaves are so finely and deeply cleft that from this fact it is called "ragweed." It grows anywhere and everywhere, though it prefers the sides of a dusty road and neglected fields. The other variety is called the "great ragweed," or the "giant ragweed," because it is usually much larger than the first-named variety. Its leaves are three-lobed and are not cleft, cut and slashed so deeply as are those of the commoner ragweed. Under very favorable conditions this weed will grow to a height of twelve feet. It bears insignificant flowers and prefers low, moist ground.

Canadian Trade.

Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, has completed his work in London in connection with shipping and trade matters. His visit has been of primary importance to the development of the Canadian shipbuilding industry. Next January, Mr. Ballantyne says, the first large Canadian Government cargo steamers will be in commission, working in conjunction with the Canadian Government railway system. The cargo boats will be fitted with cold storage facilities for the conveyance of meat, fish, and chilled rooms for fruit and dairy products. All boats will be under Canadian registry, and the rates will be controlled by the Government.

While in England the Minister secured the release of a number of coal and ore carrying vessels for the Canadian trade to keep the steel industries in operation. He expects the Canadian Government will place a mill in operation next spring. He also investigated the possibility of a development of the Canadian fish trade in Britain. Lack of cold storage facilities here is the greatest drawback to the frozen fish trade.

Fires In the Arctic.

Fully two months ahead of their usual time for migration, vast flocks of wild ducks are passing southward over Dawson. At times the Yukon river is black with the birds. Forest fires north toward the Arctic Circle or some strange action of nature, it is believed, is probably responsible for the early flight. Many of the ducklings are hardly able to fly.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Had Him Right.

A negro in one of the stevedore regiments at a base port in France saw an officer approaching him while patrolling his beat on sentry duty whereat he drew himself up stiffly and gave a flourishing salute, saying: "Good morning, general." "But I'm not a general," replied the smiling officer. "Beg pardon, colonel," said the darky. "But I'm not a colonel," protested the captain. "'Scuse me again, major," came back the dusky sentinel. "Look here, man, I'm only a captain," was the officer's reply. "Well, sah! I knew you was one of de face cards ob de pack, anyway," said Rastus, with a confiding grin.

Crave Clemency for Thief.

Petitions are being circulated at St. Catharines asking for a commutation of the sentence of three years' imprisonment imposed in the case of James E. Lawrence, convicted of stealing $15,000 from the Government by padding payrolls while paymaster of the Welland Canal. The petition-circulators are making a bad mistake by stating that the convicting judge urges the exercise of clemency, which he emphatically denies.

OUR CASUALTIES

The Price That the Dominion Paid for Freedom.

Up to the end of June the total casualties suffered by the Canadians since the beginning of the war are 159,084, made up as follows:

Killed in action	27,040
Died of wounds	9,280
Wounded	113,007
Died of disease	2,257
Prisoners of war	2,774
Presumed dead	4,342
Missing	384
Total	159,084

By periods the casualties are (in approximate figures) as follows:

From beginning of war to Dec. 31, 1915	14,500
Calendar year 1916	56,500
Calendar year 1917	74,500
To end of July, 1918	15,000

The casualties suffered in the principal battles in which the Canadian Corps took part are:

Second battle of Ypres (St. Julien), April, 1915, approximately	6,000
Vimy Ridge, April, 1917	13,461
Lens fighting, June, 1917	10,134
Hill 70, August, 1917	10,086
Passchendaele, Nov., 1917	24,530

The Department does not seem to have available individually the casualties suffered in the principal fights of 1916, St. Eloi (crater fighting of spring), Zillebeke, and Mount Sorrel in June, and the Somme from September 15 until November.

The Teutonic Plotters.

That Teuton conspirators planned, soon after this country's entrance into the war, to use German reservists to invade Canada and Mexico, is indicated in the seized correspondence of Fr. Frederick August Richard von Strensch, officials of the U. S. Department of Justice declared recently. Von Strensch when arrested recently was described by the officials as a former protege of Bismarck. He was also a relative of the German Emperor.

The objects of the proposed invasions, according to the authorities, were to hamper the despatch of Canadian troops abroad and to join armed Mexicans for the purpose of making an attack upon the United States.

Federal officials believe that Alexandra Varda, better known as the Countess von Scheele, was the author of letters signed "I," which were found in the belongings of Von Strensch. The woman was arrested shortly after Von Strensch's apprehension. In these letters were sentences indicating that between November, 1915, and April, 1917, plots were in existence for 25,000 German reservists to cross from Buffalo to Bridgeburg, Ont., and for 100,000 Germans to enter Mexico at unnamed points along the Rio Grande.

The seized correspondence also disclosed that a German assuming a Russian alias and disguise had entered the employ of the Curtiss Company. This spy is now being watched by Federal officials.

Select Seed Corn Now.

Unless every precaution is taken this autumn the supply of good seed corn of the desirable varieties will be inadequate for the requirements of 1919. The autumn of 1917 saw the corn crop harvested with an excess of moisture. Wet cold weather followed, during which time the corn did not cure, consequently, when the very cold weather of December set in the corn was frozen and germination was reduced to a very low percentage. This situation which caused the agricultural authorities of North America so much anxiety during the winter and spring of 1918, and which was described by them as "a national calamity," is not yet averted. The problem which that committee had to face was one of supplying North America with seed which would give a fair germination. To secure this seed was no easy task and recourse was made to districts in the United States hundreds of miles to the south of Ontario which produce large, late maturing varieties. In bringing this seed into the country there was little expectation that it would produce much grain but it was hoped it would produce fodder. The situation in Ontario was so acute that an embargo was placed on the seed grown in Kent and Essex counties prohibiting the exportation from those counties to other districts in Ontario. Some seed of fair germination was available but not sufficient for all their local needs, and as those counties located in southern and western Ontario furnish the chief source of seed for the remainder of the province it was felt that such action was justified in order to conserve those varieties for seed purposes which had proven themselves adapted to Ontario conditions.

There was never a time in Ontario's history when it was more necessary to take every precaution in the selection of seed corn than at the present time. The most satisfactory method of seed selection is that of selecting in the field. The grower can go up and down his rows and select those ears which are early, well developed and possess all the varietal characteristics. When selecting in the field the grower has before him the standing plant. He can select from those plants which possess the height, strength, leafiness and earliness desired. When once the desired type is established in the grower's mind good progress can be made in selecting the ears. This method offers many advantages over that of selecting from the shock or from the crib. The crib is the least desirable, in that it offers only husked ears to select from. With the shock, when husking, the grower has the wilted or matured stalks, while the field selection has everything in its favor, the whole plant and its environment which may mean normal or abnormal conditions for development. — Dr. C. A. Zavitz, O. A. College, Guelph.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The New Call

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Earl Worden was not a gypsy. His hair was too near the shade of hemp and the color of his eyes too closely resembled that of the ocean. Again, he had three freckles, one on the left side of his neck, one on his chin and the other near the tip of his nose. They were faint freckles, but they and the hair and the eyes would belie any assumption that he belonged to the tribes of swarthy nomads.

Nevertheless, Earl and gypsies had one pronounced trait in common. It was the wanderlust. He had traveled on five of the seven seas; he had killed crocodiles on the Amazon, kangaroos in Australia and mosquitoes in New Jersey. He had eaten salmon in Portland, Ore., rice in Tokyo, and prunes in France, as well as in Brooklyn. He was a nomad.

After seeing all the sights offered by 14 countries some strange whim of fate guided him to Gemport, a town in the state of Washington that the map makers forgot, and he took a job in the First, Second, Third, and only national or any other kind of bank to be found there. A whole year he spent at the desk, and he actually had begun to have that settled sensation, when along came a letter from Edward Stevens. The letter was postmarked Wawason, Alaska, and it had to do with nuggets and a sure-pay venture. If it had been from anyone else, Earl would have been exceedingly skeptical, but Stevens had been his companion in several adventurous rambles into strange climes, and his good intentions and veracity were not to be questioned.

The letter revived the longing to roam. It caused the old call of adventure to echo and re-echo through Earl's mind. It was an irresistible call, which had only been lying dormant during the last year and was not silenced forever as he had come to suppose. So he prepared to respond.

There was only one drawback. The drawback was Elsie Webb, a diminutive, dark-eyed, attractive piece of humanity employed in the bank. Until the receipt of the letter Earl had considered her an inspiration; but now she was in the way to his answering the call of adventure. He was fond of her to such an extent that he had asked her to marry him only two weeks previously—and she had consented; but that was before this letter came offering him riches and red-blooded life in Alaska. It suddenly dawned on him that he had made a mistake. He could see now that he was in no financial condition to be married. The money he had saved was scarcely enough for the proverbial rainy day; while this letter from Stevens offered an opportunity to obtain a fortune and pave the way to luxury.

So he told her his intentions the night after he received the summons from the north. He broached the subject as carefully as possible and with as much consideration for her feelings as he could muster—which wasn't saying much. She merely bit her lip and flickered her eyelashes and said:

"All right, Earl. You know best. I would not stand in the way of your success for the world. We will consider the engagement at an end."

He left her home in a rather dazed condition. She had taken the matter very sensibly, he told himself, and yet he felt sure that she cared more than she showed. He could have felt pretty downcast himself, only he dared not permit it. The old call was sounding and he must answer.

It was early in the evening and some late workers were just journeying homeward. One of them, a sturdy young man with a healthy face and steadfast eye, carrying a dinner-pail, stopped Earl and asked for a match to light his briar pipe.

"Thanks," said the laborer, as he puffed contentedly after Earl had furnished the article sought. "Nice evening."

The laborer walked off briskly.

But he must not let such thoughts intrude. They might deter him from his chosen course. So he thrust them aside and the next day drew all his savings from the bank and resigned his job.

Two weeks later he stepped off a boat at Sitka and clasped the hand of his old pal, a robust, weather-beaten man of thirty, clad in fur-fringed clothes. Earl was escorted to a hotel, where he was outfitted in apparel appropriate to a journey inland.

"It's a regular bonanza—a sure thing," said Stevens, as they sat in the lobby discussing the proposed venture. "All we gotta do is to get the coin. There's another young fellow in town that I'd have taken in if I couldn't 'a landed you. His name is John Pierce, an' he's a regular scout, but o' course I'd rather take my old chum; an' two besides myself in the crowd is one unnecessary. It's goin' to be a tough trip, too, let me tell you. I've got twelve huskies but I doubt if six of them will live to reach the end o' the trip. Real adventure, ol' top, right out of the wilds, an' a new kind to you. Better'n workin' in any little ol' bank, eh, ol' man?"

While they were talking Earl noticed a tall man carrying a cane and dressed in exceptionally good clothes for this city of non-pretending, rough-going, big-hearted folk. The stranger walked up to the desk and asked the clerk for a key. When he turned around to mount the stairs his face was in plain view, and Earl saw that it was sallow, with a fixed expression of cynicism and lines of dissipation.

"We'll start for the mainland day after tomorrow," announced Stevens, discarding his half-smoked cigar. "An' we've got a whole lot to attend to tomorrow, so we'd better get to bed."

They climbed the stairs to their room, which contained two beds. Earl was tired and he lost no time about getting under the covers. There was little conversation, but before settling himself for the night Earl inquired casually:

"Say, who was that prosperous, sickly looking person that walked into the hotel and got a key from the clerk while we were talking downstairs?"

Stevens pondered a moment before replying:

"Oh, yes, I know who you mean. I didn't recollect at first who it was you referred to, but I remember seeing Caldwell Hurst come in during our palaver. Yep, that was Caldwell Hurst an' he's just as prosperous as he looks. But he squanders his cash like it was water, mostly for booze. He's got plenty of it, 'cause he struck it rich three years ago; but they say he lost his girl back in the States while he was hunting gold in the Klondike, an' he's been tryin' to drown his sorrow ever since. He hasn't any home 'cept this hotel and the saloons."

Earl turned over and closed his eyes. Into his mind flashed a picture of a contented laborer, puffing placidly at a pipe, a dinner-pail on his arm, hurrying home to a loving wife and cheerful fireplace. Earl was drifting to sleep when he heard Stevens remark philosophically:

"He'd better have kept the girl and enjoyed peace of mind than to have all the wealth of all the kingdoms of the earth. You can bet if I had a reg'lar girl who cared for me I wouldn't be chasin' nuggets. Not me."

"Good night!" said Earl.

Back in Gemport a dark-eyed girl tossed restlessly in bed, her brain racked by a fitful fever that would not permit sleep to come. At last she got out of bed and went to the window, which faced the north. The aurora borealis was flittering phantomlike across the sky, presenting to her mind's eye a picture of icebergs heaving and tossing, surging back and forth, as restless as her own soul.

A cool breeze swept in through the window and enveloped her in a chill, but she did not notice it. Standing there, with her eyes fixed on the arch of oscillating ghost-columns of light, she stretched out her arms to the north and issued a silent, soul-inspired call to the man she loved.

Up where those phantom armies moved, the man heard the call. While he slept his lips formed the name, "Elsie," and a smile wreathed his face. Her picture formed in his mind, but it lingered only a moment. Then his thoughts ran rampant, and a dream fantasy caught him and whisked him about like a chip in a whirlpool. He gripped something, he knew not what, and succeeded in steadying himself. He found that he was in a theater watching a screen play, in which a laborer with a dinner-pail and a tall, expensively-garbed man, carrying a cane on his arm and a sardonic expression on his face, were the leading characters. The play ended when the laborer saddled and bridled Caldwell Hurst and rode the latter toward a deep canyon, applying a whip mercilessly. At the edge of the precipice the laborer suddenly leaped from his mount and steadied himself on the brink, while the spender galloped into space and dropped into the abyss.

Early in the morning Earl and his friend dressed and went down to the lobby.

"I want to buy a briar pipe and some tobacco," said Earl.

Stevens took an expensive cigar and both lighted from the same match. Earl drew slowly on the pipe, thinking hard.

"Say, Ed," he finally remarked, "is that John Pierce where you can reach him?"

"Why, yes," he replied, arching his eyebrows. "Why?"

"Well, it's this way," said Earl deliberately, "you'd better see him and take him with you. I thought the spirit of adventure was still alive in me, but I was mistaken. I've got enough money to take me back to Washington, and I'm going to be a piker for the first time in my life and get passage on the first boat."

Swan in Fighting Mood.

Through summer and autumn as he sails with full arched wings on the bosom of the water among his own kind or smaller fowl, the swan seems the embodiment of power and peaceful domination, but there are few greater tyrants when passion sways him in the spring. His cygnets of yester-year are scattered in his jealous rage. With outspread wings and neck proudly arched, he bears down on every potential rival. No Apples for Australia.

That the Australian embargo will prevent the importation by Australia of any apples from British Columbia this year is the word contained in a cable received by the Department of Trade and Commerce from D. H. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Melbourne. Mailed advices from Mr. Ross, just received, explain that in a recent interview the Commonwealth Minister of Commerce expressed a desire to maintain the established trading connections between Canada and Australia, but the Minister held out but little prospect of the embargo being lifted during 1918. Mr. Ross says that up to the time of writing not a single case of Australian apples had been exported, apart from a contract made with the Imperial authorities for 1,800 tons of evaporated apples.

That Is the Question.

A Calgary lady has brought suit against that corporation for damages allegedly done a fashionable walking dress through tar oozing from the pavement. The defence naturally raises the question how a fashionable walking dress could come in contact with the pavement.

SUMMER COMPLIANT

CAUSES MANY DEATHS AMONG INFANTS

If every mother would keep on hand, during the hot season, a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, she would be saved a great deal of anxiety and her baby a great deal of pain.

Hundreds of infants are carried off annually through neglect of this simple precaution. There is no remedy so safe and effectual for the cramps and pains in the stomach, cholera infantum, the diarrhoea of teething children, and none which has saved so many babies' lives during the past seventy-two years it has been on the market.

Mrs. C. W. Cooper, Collingwood, Ont., writes: "When my little boy was four months old he had a very bad attack of summer complaint. Nothing seemed to do him any good that was prescribed by the doctor. He got steadily worse until we thought we would lose him. One day a friend, with children of his own, asked me if I had ever used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I at once got a bottle, but with no hopes of it doing any good, as so much else had failed, but to my surprise and wonder, I soon, saw a change in baby, much to my great relief, and we soon had him well again. I now keep it in the house all the time, and when the children show any signs of diarrhoea it never fails to check the attack."

There are many substitutes for "Dr. Fowler's" on the market. Don't accept any of them. Get the genuine put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price, 35c.

And it is not alone the health of the soldier that is important, for this is watched and guarded as never before. But there is the health of the people at home, who are manufacturing and sending forward the supplies which make it possible to continue the fight.

Men and women have never in the world's history carried such mental and physical burdens as they do to-day.

From Ministers of State, Commissioners, Manufacturers, all the way through the enormous staffs of men and women workers, there are problems to be solved and schedules to be lived up to that mean enormous anxiety and strain on the nervous system.

It is under these conditions that many resort to the use of narcotics to produce sleep or stimulants to whip up the tired nerves. In either case the temporary help is obtained at an enormous expense to the nervous system.

The only rational treatment is that which goes to build up new nerve cells and new nerve force, and supreme in this class is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Most people know about this food cure, but all do not realize that it has revolutionized the treatment of diseases of the nerves by the new idea of supplying to the blood the elements which go to the creation of nervous energy and vigor.

The most common indications of nervous exhaustion are inability to sleep and rest, failure of digestion and loss of appetite, nervousness and irritability. You arise tired in the mornings, and are easily annoyed over little things. You put off the duties of the day because you lack the energy to take hold and clean them up.

It is evident that you must have help to overcome this condition, and there is nothing so sure to befriend you as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

For your protection the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of the genuine Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

DR. DeVAN'S FRENCH PILLS A reliable Regulating PILL for Women. $5 a box or three for $10, sent at all Drug Stores, or mailed to any address on receipt of price. THE SCOBELL DRUG CO., St. Catharines, Ontario.

PHOSPHONOL FOR MEN. Restores Vim and Vitality; for Nerves and Brain; increases "grey matter"; a Tonic—will build you up. $5 a box, or two for $9, at drug stores, or by mail on receipt of price. THE SCOBELL DRUG CO., St. Catharines Ontario.

TELL YOUR WIFE CORNS LIFT OFF

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift corns or calluses off with fingers

Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying, or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing and wearing torturous plasters. Yes! Corns lift out and callus peel off as if by magic.

A small bottle of freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be so loose that it lifts off.

Freezone dries instantly. It doesn't eat out the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating the surrounding skin. Women should keep a tiny bottle handy on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The New Call

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Earl Worden was not a gypsy. His hair was too near the shade of hemp and the color of his eyes too closely resembled that of the ocean. Again, he had three freckles, one on the left side of his neck, one on his chin and the other near the tip of his nose. They were faint freckles, but they and the hair and the eyes would belie any assumption that he belonged to the tribes of swarthy nomads.

Nevertheless, Earl and gypsies had one pronounced trait in common. It was the wanderlust. He had traveled on five of the seven seas; he had killed crocodiles on the Amazon, kangaroos in Australia and mosquitoes in New Jersey. He had eaten salmon in Portland, Ore., rice in Tokyo, and prunes in France, as well as in Brooklyn. He was a nomad.

After seeing all the sights offered by 14 countries some strange whim of fate guided him to Gemport, a town in the state of Washington that the map makers forgot, and he took a job in the First, Second, Third, and only national or any other kind of bank to be found there. A whole year he spent at the desk, and he actually had begun to have that settled sensation, when along came a letter from Edward Stevens. The letter was postmarked Wawason, Alaska, and it had to do with nuggets and a sure-pay venture. If it had been from anyone else, Earl would have been exceedingly skeptical, but Stevens had been his companion in several adventurous rambles into strange climes, and his good intentions and veracity were not to be questioned.

The letter revived the longing to roam. It caused the old call of adventure to echo and re-echo through Earl's mind. It was an irresistible call, which had only been lying dormant during the last year and was not silenced forever as he had come to suppose. So he prepared to respond.

There was only one drawback. The drawback was Elsie Webb, a diminutive, dark-eyed, attractive piece of humanity employed in the bank. Until the receipt of the letter Earl had considered her an inspiration; but now she was in the way to his answering the call of adventure. He was fond of her to such an extent that he had asked her to marry him only two weeks previously—and she had consented; but that was before this letter came offering him riches and red-blooded life in Alaska. It suddenly dawned on him that he had made a mistake. He could see now that he was in no financial condition to be married. The money he had saved was scarcely enough for the proverbial rainy day; while this letter from Stevens offered an opportunity to obtain a fortune and pave the way to luxury.

So he told her his intentions the night after he received the summons from the north. He broached the subject as carefully as possible and with as much consideration for her feelings as he could muster—which wasn't saying much. She merely bit her lip and flickered her eyelashes and said:

"All right, Earl. You know best. I would not stand in the way of your success for the world. We will consider the engagement at an end."

He left her home in a rather dazed condition. She had taken the matter very sensibly, he told himself, and yet he felt sure that she cared more than she showed. He could have felt pretty downcast himself, only he dared not permit it. The old call was sounding and he must answer.

It was early in the evening and some late workers were just journeying homeward. One of them, a sturdy young man with a healthy face and steadfast eye, carrying a dinner-pail, stopped Earl and asked for a match to light his briar pipe.

"Thanks," said the laborer, as he puffed contentedly after Earl had furnished the article sought. "Nice evening."

The laborer walked off briskly.

But he must not let such thoughts intrude. They might deter him from his chosen course. So he thrust them aside and the next day drew all his savings from the bank and resigned his job.

Two weeks later he stepped off a boat at Sitka and clasped the hand of his old pal, a robust, weather-beaten man of thirty, clad in fur-fringed clothes. Earl was escorted to a hotel, where he was outfitted in apparel appropriate to a journey inland.

"It's a regular bonanza—a sure thing," said Stevens, as they sat in the lobby discussing the proposed venture. "All we gotta do is to get the coin. There's another young fellow in town that I'd have taken if I couldn't 'a landed you. His name is John Pierce, an' he's a regular scout, but o' course I'd rather take my old chum; an' two besides myself in the crowd is one unnecessary. It's goin' to be a tough trip, too, let me tell you. I've got twelve huskies but I doubt if six of them will live to reach the end o' the trip. Real adventure, ol' top, right out of the wilds, an' a new kind to you. Better'n workin' in any little ol' bank, eh, ol' man?"

While they were talking Earl noticed a tall man carrying a cane and dressed in exceptionally good clothes for this city of non-pretending, rough-going, big-hearted folk. The stranger walked up to the desk and asked the clerk for a key. When he turned around to mount the stairs his face was in plain view, and Earl saw that it was sallow, with a fixed expression of cynicism and lines of dissipation.

"We'll start for the mainland day after tomorrow," announced Stevens, discarding his half-smoked cigar. "An' we've got a whole lot to attend to tomorrow, so we'd better get to bed."

They climbed the stairs to their room, which contained two beds. Earl was tired and he lost no time about getting under the covers. There was little conversation, but before settling himself for the night Earl inquired casually:

"Say, who was that prosperous, sickly looking person that walked into the hotel and got a key from the clerk while we were talking downstairs?"

Stevens pondered a moment before replying:

"Oh, yes, I know who you mean. I didn't recollect at first who it was you referred to, but I remember seeing Caldwell Hurst come in during our palaver. Yep, that was Caldwell Hurst an' he's just as prosperous as he looks. But he squanders his cash like it was water, mostly for booze. He's got plenty of it, 'cause he struck it rich three years ago; but they say he lost his girl back in the States while he was hunting gold in the Klondike, an' he's been tryin' to drown his sorrow ever since. He hasn't any home 'cept this hotel and the saloons."

Earl turned over and closed his eyes. Into his mind flashed a picture of a contented laborer, puffing placidly at a pipe, a dinner-pail on his arm, hurrying home to a loving wife and cheerful fireplace. Earl was drifting to sleep when he heard Stevens remark philosophically:

"He'd better have kept the girl and enjoyed peace of mind than to have all the wealth of all the kingdoms of the earth. You can bet if I had a reg'lar girl who cared for me I wouldn't be chasin' nuggets. Not me."

"Good night!" said Earl.

Back in Gemport a dark-eyed girl tossed restlessly in bed, her brain racked by a fitful fever that would not permit sleep to come. At last she got out of bed and went to the window, which faced the north. The aurora borealis was flittering phantomlike across the sky, presenting to her mind's eye a picture of icebergs heaving and tossing, surging back and forth, as restless as her own soul.

A cool breeze swept in through the window and enveloped her in a draft, but she did not notice it. Standing there, with her eyes fixed on the arch of oscillating ghost-columns of light, she stretched out her arms to the north and issued a silent, soul-inspired call to the man she loved.

Up where those phantom armies moved, the man heard the call. While he slept his lips formed the name, "Elsie," and a smile wreathed his face. Her picture formed in his mind, but it lingered only a moment. Then his thoughts ran rampant, and a dream fantasy caught him and whisked him about like a chip in a whirlpool. He gripped something, he knew not what, and succeeded in steadying himself. He found that he was in a theater watching a screen play, in which a laborer with a dinner-pail and a tall, expensively-garbed man, carrying a cane on his arm and a sardonic expression on his face, were the leading characters. The play ended when the laborer saddled and bridled Caldwell Hurst and rode the latter toward a deep canyon, applying a whip mercilessly. At the edge of the precipice the laborer suddenly leaped from his mount and steadied himself on the brink, while the spender galloped into space and dropped into the abyss.

Early in the morning Earl and his friend dressed and went down to the lobby.

"I want to buy a briar pipe and some tobacco," said Earl.

Stevens took an expensive cigar and both lighted from the same match. Earl drew slowly on the pipe, thinking hard.

"Say, Ed," he finally remarked, "Is that John Pierce where you can reach him?"

"Why, yes," he replied, arching his eyebrows. "Why?"

"Well, it's this way," said Earl deliberately, "you'd better see him and take him with you. I thought the spirit of adventure was still alive in me, but I was mistaken. I've got enough money to take me back to Washington, and I'm going to be a piker for the first time in my life and get passage on the first boat."

Keeping up with the Joneses

One great bar to the practice of thrift to-day is the tendency to let others set for us our standards of living.

MRS. Jones appears on the street in a new gown and at once her neighbour vows she'll have one like it. Or if a new motor car is delivered to a certain home, a nearby family, not to be handicapped in the social race, plan to discard their old car for a new one. And so it goes from one thing to another—a ceaseless, senseless competition which often ends in debts, distress and disaster.

Such silly rivalry is bad enough indeed in normal periods. It is positively unpatriotic in times like these when the country needs all available labor and material and every available dollar with which to carry on the war.

It is perhaps difficult for us to appreciate that the purchase of things we do not really need may be the direct cause of loss of life on the firing lines.

But you can't escape the fact, no matter how unpleasant the thought, that millions of individual selfish demands at home may prolong the war by causing a shortage of the very things essential to our success at the front. For the money we spend in satisfying these desires represents equipment, clothing, shot and shell that are so urgently needed for our boys in France.

Remember that when you are tempted to spend foolishly in an effort to "keep up with the Joneses."

WORKERS IN WARTIME

INTERESTING DECISION GIVEN BY A WESTERN JUDGE.

He Makes It Apparent That In the Eyes of the Law Civilians Have Just as Great a Part to Play In Winning the War as Soldiers, and That They Must Not Shirk Their Responsibilities.

IN the Crow's Nest Pass and Southern Alberta coal mining districts where the mines are being operated under the direction of the Director of Coal Operations, appointed by the Dominion Government, the question has been raised as to whether miners eligible for military service under the Military Service Act, 1917, should be exempted from such service, in view of the urgent need for greater coal production. In the cases of some 36 miners whose claims for exemption were disallowed by the local tribunal at Fernie, appeals were made to the Appeal Tribunal by the United Mine Workers of America, and His Honor Judge Thompson rendered a judgment in re James L. Hunter et al, which reads as follows:

"This case, with thirty-five others, are appeals made by the United Mine Workers of America on behalf of men of military age whose claims have been disallowed by the local tribunal at Fernie.

"Each case will be dealt with individually on its merits and on the principles which I am stating in this general judgment. In each case this general judgment is made part of the individual one.

"In making any decisions upon the claims of these appellants, I cannot consider what they promise to do in the future; I can only judge their future conduct by their past performance.

"The country has been at war for nearly four years; for months the Military Service Act has been discussed in the House of Commons and in the press, and for months the Act has been in force. Both this winter and last we read statements made by Ministers of the Crown and from many other sources that increased production of coal was essential to the welfare of the country. If a man has not shown that he has been spurred on to greater production by the request of his country, it is not likely he would willingly obey the demand of his country.

"These appellants must understand they are not soldiers. And where exemption is granted to them it is so granted because the court is of the opinion they are of greater value to the nation by remaining coal miners than by becoming soldiers. And the only way they can continue to be of greater value as coal miners than as soldiers is by producing coal.

"I repeat my statement: men to whom exemption is granted are in the position of soldiers and they must work as steadily and continuously as though they had donned khaki. To my mind they should esteem it an honor and privilege to be in the position where they are called upon to help their country by using extra efforts for the production of a commodity so essential as coal; and they should carry on their duties here with the same willingness and the same cheerfulness that their brothers and friends have shown when they went to the front.

"It must be understood that in granting exemption I am endeavoring on the one hand to protect the interests of the worker. He cannot be bound down to any one particular employment in the mine or to work for any one particular employer. That would be placing him too much in the power of his employer. I can understand, also, that there may be many reasons why a man will be unable to work continuously every working day. There may be sickness, some accident may happen in the mine whereby the man is unable to work; therefore, I would endeavor to frame rules to cover these conditions.

"On the other hand, there must be no mal-lingering, no holidays other than specified, no letting up on the production of coal, but rather a speeding up on the part of these appellants. If it can be shown by the military authorities at any time that any man is not following the rules I am establishing, that man must understand that his exemption ceases and he will at once become liable for military duty."

The following typical "rules" indicates the judge's view of the responsibility of civilians. They are taken from the long list stated by him:

"Any person ceasing to work for more than twenty-four hours will be deemed to be not continuously employed, unless he can show some just cause or reason for his non-employment. This prohibition does not apply to recognized holidays and the holding of funerals. A lay-off of twenty-four hours without just cause or reason being shown shall not occur more than once a month.

"Where a stoppage of work is occasioned by some cause beyond the workman's power to prevent, for example, accident, gaseous condition of the mine, shortage of material, or any other reason whatsoever, a certificate must be obtained from the manager of the mine where the workman is engaged, and upon demand by the military or civil authorities, must be produced and filed in the office of the Chief of Provincial Police at Fernie.

"In the event of a strike or cessation of work by workmen other than exempted men whereby the latter are prevented from working, exemption shall cease, subject, however, to the provisions in rules 9 and 10. This may seem a harsh ruling, but it must be remembered that this appeal has been made by the United Mine Workers of America, and it will be the duty of the officials of the Brotherhood to see that no such strikes or cessations of work occur."

NEW AERIAL MONSTERS

AIRSHIPS BEING MADE TO FIGHT THE HUN.

"Winged Tanks" of Mysterious Design Are Said to Be Among the Wonders That May Be Seen In One of the Great Airplane Factories of the Dominion — Allies Should Hold Their Supremacy In the Air.

IF the man on the street were asked how many aeroplanes had been built in Canada since the spring of 1917, when aeroplane building began in this country, he might guess as high as 300, says a writer in the Vancouver Sun. Half a dozen or a dozen machines sailing in the air above a training camp looks like quite a flock to the everyday citizen on the ground. But to mention a flotilla of a hundred or five hundred taxes his credulity to believe there are that many machines in Canada.

Yet it is a fact that since the latter part of 1917 nearly three thousand airplanes have been built in Canada and all of these are in use in Canadian training, except a few which were sent to the winter training camp at Fort Worth, Texas, and left there.

Last year the Imperial Government asked the Munitions Board of Canada to establish a plant for building airplanes. The Board with characteristic thoroughness went at the job and before long a good many million dollars, directed by the best organizing ability available, were put to work.

The magic of money and brains combined resulted in the establishment of a great plant that covers acres of ground and the floor space of which would make a good-sized farm. In forty-five days after the first sod was turned the wheels were moving and many hundreds of men were working on the first batch of airplanes. Since that time machines have been coming out in a steady stream at the rate of 300 a month.

In British Columbia over sixty logging camps and many saw mills are cutting airplane timber and lumber.

The writer enjoyed a personally conducted tour of the airplane factory recently and was shown many wonderful things, many being a story which one's fingers fairly tingle to put on paper, but which cannot be made public yet.

Any sort of well organized industrial plant is interesting, but a factory where airplanes are made is invested with a romance which attaches to the most romantic engine of war which has been developed in the present struggle.

Starting with the wood workers, the writer was shown the lumber as it comes from the mills of the faraway British Columbia coast. This lumber looks like white pine, but it has the resiliency of elm, the toughness of hickory and lightness and color of pine.

The giant trees, known as Silver or Sitka spruce, from which it is cut, are from 6 to 12 feet in diameter, and they raise their plumed heads 300 feet into the soft Pacific airs straight as an arrow. A tree eight feet in diameter was a seedling when Columbus discovered American. A 12-foot veteran was several hundred years old before Capt. Vancouver sailed up the Gulf of Georgia, and discovered its habitat. And to-day they are yielding up their great trunks that freedom may be preserved on the earth and that the Hun shall not dominate and desecrate the beautiful land from which they have sprung.

In the airplane factory are piles of lumber in sheds and kilns and in freight cars on sidings carefully selected from the great trunks of those trees. At the mills where the logs are rough-sawed, about 30 per cent. of the log is selected for re-selection. Every plank is rigidly inspected. A knot as big as a needle where some ancient twig became submerged in the trunk's growth will condemn a plank for airplane construction. Every board must be absolutely clear of checks or knots.

If the end of the plank shows less than five annual rings it indicates that during a period of its life the tree grew rapidly and consequently the grain will be coarse and unreliable, and the plank will go into the discard. The slower the growth the finer and more dense will be the grain.

Then, none of the outside or sapwood of the log is suitable for this purpose, neither may the heart of the log be used. So that when the sawyer has taken what he needs according to his rule, two-thirds of the log will find its way to storage pile, some to go as lumber for ordinary uses, some to be ground into pulp at the paper mills of the Pacific coast.

At the factory the lumber comes under a still more rigid inspection and selection. It comes in pieces from two to four inches thick, and from four to eight inches wide and up to sixteen feet in length. Of course, planks are cut at the coast mills up to forty and fifty feet long, but all the long stuff is shipped to England for the wing beams of battle and scout planes.

From the lumber at the factory only perfect pieces are selected for the wing beams. A piece not suitable for wing beams may contain shorter pieces for braces and the cross beams and standards. There is, therefore, very little waste at the factory.

As yet only instructional machines are built in Canada, but after the war it is very probable that commercial machines will be turned out, for there is little doubt that the airplane will become almost as common as the motor car for many purposes.

"Will it be possible after the war for a man to operate a machine with say the average mechanical knowledge required to drive a motor car?" the writer asked the manager.

"There is no reason why such a machine cannot be built and it is quite safe to say that such machines will be on the market. Machines for commercial use will be much simpler and less expensive than war planes," he continued, "because they will not be subject to the tremendous strains put on war planes in the manoeuvring of fighting. The control of a machine is very simple," he added.

"Are the engines self starters?" he was asked.

"No," he said, "if the engine stops in midair there is only one thing to do, and that is to volplane to a landing. Usually the engine is shut off before landing anyway. But the stoppage of the engine in midair involves no great risk if the driver knows how to control his machine," the manager concluded.

One interesting phase of airplane building is the inspection, which every machine and every part must undergo by inspectors of the Imperial Government. Every brass screw, every bolt is counted and checked. Every little detail of construction is noted and passed upon. Even a slight roughness in the finish must be rectified.

The writer saw a very wonderful thing in the airplane factory, but the censor would probably delete any detailed reference to it. Nothing like it to-day is on the earth, nor in the waters, nor in the air. There are seven tons of retribution to the Hun in its composition, and when it takes the air it will be as though an ocean liner had suddenly left its own element and, on the wings of the morning, had descended upon the enemy. Those who first gaze upon this monster may readily imagine that a city block has taken to the air. But all this chronicler can further say about it is, "Wait and see." It is being built for one of the Allies, and many more such machines are under construction in various parts of the continent and, for aught the writer knows, in Europe as well. One thing the building of that war engine in a Canadian factory proves and that is that anything which can be built in any airplane factory in the world can be built in Canada.

Enlists at 53; Says He's 39.

The July American Magazine has an article about "Foghorn" Macdonald who enlisted as a private in the Canadian forces at 53 and is now a major at 57. The author of the article says:

"By canoe for thirty-one days through the wilderness, by an old tub of a leaky steamboat, by whatever means of travel he could find, including his own feet, he made his way back to Winnipeg, only to find that the troops had left. All right! A machine gun company was being formed and he applied for that.

"The recruiting officer was a friend of his, had helped celebrate Foghorn's fifty-third birthday the previous January. But when in making out the papers he came to the question: 'How old are you?' and Foghorn whipped out, 'Thirty-nine!' he never batted an eyelash.

"Before his official cronies at Ottawa knew it, Macdonald was on his way to England—a private at fifty-three! Two years later he was a major; the only man in the forces of the Allies, who has risen from the ranks to that grade in the present war."

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRTWAIST.

If you would have an original and becoming collar on your new waist by all means choose No. 8882. The collar is the most interesting feature because it is quite different, and it may be made in either of two styles. As shown in the figure the collar is cut in long points which are slipped through two slashes in each side of the front, making a very attractive effect if the collar is of a contrasting color. If preferred the collar may be cut in two short points, as shown in the small view. The fronts of the waist are gathered at the shoulders. The long sleeves are gathered into deep cuffs which match the collar.

The lady's shirtwaist pattern No. 8882 is cut in four sizes—36 to 42 inches bust measure. The 36 inch size requires 1¾ yards 36 inch or 1¾ yards 40 inch, with ⅝ yard 30 inch contrasting material.

DISTRIBUTED IRON CROSSES

Kaiser Addresses the Austrian Officers at Briey While Visiting the Front.

HUN PLATITUDES

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 24. — The Kaiser, addressing Austrian officers at Briey, while visiting the Alsace Lorraine front on Sunday, expressed his confidence that they would give the Americans "the right answer, at the right moment."

"You have come to fight our battles, as good comrades," he said. "You know, perhaps, that we have heavy fighting before us. You know who are before you. The Americans have promised France that they would give her Alsace Lorraine, which France cannot alone conquer.

"The Americans also wish to add big deeds to their big words. With the help of my troops, you will give them the right answer, at the right moment."

Potato Market is Firmer This Week

There is a tendency to tilt the potato market to new price levels under the reports of a light crop in this and neighbouring districts. It is too early yet to estimate this season's crop, but the experience of many war gardeners has been decidedly disappointing. One of them nursed a couple of lots in the south end in the hope that he would produce the quantity he needed for winter, with a surplus for seed, but this morning he gave Mr. John Williams, of North Monaghan, an order for five bags of Cobblers.

The present price is reaching toward $2.25, and the trend of the market may be gauged by the fact that gardeners are not eager to dispose of their stocks. They are not refusing to supply the demand, but they are likewise not rushing their crop to market. The forehanded citizens are buying now, remembering the experience of nearly two years ago, and of the inactivity of the Food Controller.

They reported the submarine had a straight bow, carried two 6-inch guns and four smaller guns shipped on the bridge as well as on the conning tower.

BRITISH FORCES OCCUPY THE IMPORTANT SEAPORT OF ACRE IN PALESTINE

Allenby's Troops Are Now Reported Twenty-Two Miles Northeast of Nazareth—Town of Doiran Captured by the Allies on the Macedonia Front—Serbians Have Captured Vast Quantites of Stores.

NEWS FROM THE WESTERN FRONT

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, September 24.—British forces have occupied the important seaport of Acre, in Palestine, it was announced to-day. The British have also occupied Haifa.

Acre is on the Mediterranean, 22 miles northeast of Nazareth, where British cavalry was last reported. It is a terminal of the railway running from Dera to the coast. It has a population of about ten thousand.

Acre is famous for the sieges it has sustained. It was captured by the Crusaders in 1104, recaptured by the Saracens in 1187, and again captured by the Crusaders under Richard the Lionhearted, in 1191. The Saracens again took it in 1291.

In 1799 Napoleon attempted to capture Acre but retreated after a siege of two months. It was taken by Ibrahim Pasha in 1832 and was bombarded by the combined British and Austrian fleets in 1840.

East of the Jordan the Turks are withdrawing towards Amman on the Hedjz railway. Australian, New Zealand, Jewish, and other troops are pursuing the enemy and have reached Es-Salt, fifteen miles northwest of Amman.

This afternoon's advices indicate that the British are continuing their advances in Palestine. Cavalry has occupied Malan. Official advices say Turk prisoners will exceed the twenty-five thousand already counted.

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, September 24.—The City of Demascus, the ancient town which stands at the head of the Arabian Desert and toward which the few railways in Palestine head from the coast of the Mediterranean, is the key to the entire military situation in Palestine and Mesopotamia, according to Professor Richard Gottheil, head of the Oriental Department at Columbia University, and formerly a member of the Faculty of the American School of Archeology at Jerusalem. Discussing the advance of General Sir Edmund Allenby's forces up the Valley of the Jordan in which the Turkish forces opposing the British have practically been wiped out, Professor Gottheil to-day told the United Press.

BRITISH TROOPS HAVE CAPTURED IMPORTANT TOWN OF DOIRAN ON THE SOUTHERN SHORE OF LAKE DOIRAN

LONDON, September 24.—British troops have captured the important town of Doiran on the southern shore of Lake Doiran, in Macedonia, according to despatches received here to-day.

LONDON, September 24.—(Official)—The Serbian troops continue to cross the River Vardar northeast of Monastir and are in contact with the Bulgarians, says the Serbian official statement of Monday. The Bulgarians are burning villages and stores of material. The Serbians, however, have captured great quantities of material.

Around Prilep the Serbians are on the Gradsko-Prilep road, to the northeast, while to the southeast they have reached the steep Massif of the Drenska Mountain range.

BRITISH FORCES ARE PRESSING IN ON ST. QUENTIN AND HAVE IMPROVED POSITIONS ON CAMBRAI FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON (Official), September 24.—British forces are pressing in on St. Quentin, directly from the west, to-day's report from Field Marshal Haig shows. He reports fighting taking place to the British advantage and announces progress by the attacking forces in the region east of Vermand.

On the front to the west of Cambrai, in the region north of Moeuvres, British positions have been improved. In the Arras-Lens sector the Germans tried to drive the British from new positions the latter had won southeast of Gavrelle. The enemy was completely repulsed, the British retaining their line intact. In Flanders, British troops succeeded in pushing forward and occupying portion of the old British front line southeast of Voormezeele, below Ypres.

THE BRITISH OFFICIAL STATEMENT READS.

Fighting is taking place to our advantage in the sector east of Vermand, where we are reported to be making progress. A local attack made by the enemy yesterday north of Little Priel Farm (opposite Le Catelet), was successfully repulsed leaving prisoners in our hands. During the night the enemy attacked our new positions southeast of Gavrelle supporting the assault with heavy artillery barrage. The attack was completely repulsed, our line remaining intact. We improved our position slightly north of Moeuvres, and by a successful minor operation carried out during the night, regained a portion of the old British front line southeast of Voormezeele. Hostile raiding parties were driven off last night west of Bellenglise, (north of St. Quentin), and east of Neuve Chapelle. The enemy raided one of our posts south of the Scarpe River.

ARTILLERY WAS ACTIVE LAST NIGHT ON FRENCH FRONT NO INFANTRY ACTION REPORTED IN TODAY'S DESPATCHES

PARIS (Official), September 24.—The artillery was active last night on the French front below St. Quentin and between the Ailette and the Aisne, but no infantry action is reported in to-day's War Office statement.

THE FRENCH OFFICIAL STATEMENT READS

In the course of the night there was marked activity by artillery in the region of St. Quentin and between the Ailette and the Aisne. In the Champagne two raids upon German trenches in the region of Perthes and in the direction of Butte Du Mesnil resulted in the taking of forty prisoners by the French.

THE ITALIAN TROOPS ON THE MACEDONIA FRONT HAVE ADVANCED TEN MILES SINCE YESTERDAY, SAY DESPATCHES

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, September 24.—Tanks were used in the Serbian offensive in Macedonia, the Echo De Paris says to-day.

The mountainous region in which the Allied drive is being carried out is by far the most difficult terrain in which tanks have attempted to operate. The going is so bad generally that cavalry cannot be used effectively.

Italian troops operating on the left flank of the British and Greeks in the Vardar Valley, have advanced ten miles since yesterday, according to a despatch from the Salonika front to-day.

The Serbians alone have taken 12,000 prisoners and 140 guns so far, it is reported.

GERMANS LOST HEAVILY IN COUNTER ATTACK.

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press Service.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, September 24.—Noon —The Germans, attempting to retake two posts east of Epephy to-day, lost 200 prisoners and 21 machine guns, besides leaving a hundred dead within the British lines.

Further north five fresh German divisions, including one of Alpine troops have arrived since Saturday. Two of the divisions are entirely fresh. Captured enemy documents show that the ground taken by the British was intended as an essential part of the Hindenburg defence system which their troops were ordered to hold regardless of the cost.

PREPARING GERMAN PUBLIC FOR ANOTHER RETREAT.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, September 24.—The Americans have completed their artillery concentration on the St. Mihiel front, and new attacks may be expected, declares General Ardenne, writing in the Berlin Tageblatt. Ardenne also states that the Germans probably will abandon St. Quentin shortly.

FRENCH AND SERBIAN ARMIES ARE MAKING RAPID PROGRESS

PARIS, September 24.—"The success achieved by the Allies in Macedonia is taking the character of a great victory," declares last night's War Office report on operations in Macedonia. "The French and Serbian armies are making rapid progress in the centre toward the middle Vardar Valley, and are advancing on the whole front of 150 kilometres between Monastir and Lake Doiran. The enemy is in precipitate retreat, and is being pursued vigorously by all the Allied contingents.

"Northeast of Monastir the line of Mogila, Kanatlarts and Kalyani has been reached. Further north Serbian troops are marching toward Prilep, and have reached the Vardar from Gradsko to Demirkapu. They have thrown some elements across the river to the left bank.

"In the lower Vardar Valley Allied forces have passed the line of Koynsko and Zurinchel, on the right bank of the river. They have also taken Guevgueli, and all of the first enemy positions as far as Lake Doiran.

"Enemy rearguards are being relentlessly pursued. Upon the roads in the region of Monastir, Kichevo, and Prilep enemy columns are retreating in indescribable disorder, and are bombarded without respite by Allied aviators. A number of villages and depots are in flames. Prisoners, cannon and enormous quantities of material, which it is impossible to estimate, has fallen into our hands. We have, in particular, captured on the Vardar Valley railroad, locomotives, three complete trains and two pieces of long-range artillery mounted on trucks. In many places demoralised Bulgarian units have thrown away their arms. Our progress continues over the whole front of attack."

Trench Warfare is Again Resumed on Western Front

MAY MAKE STAND

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 24.—The British front seems about to become the scene of trench warfare again.

If the British succeed in their general advance it will reflect greater credit than any of their remarkable successes in the past several weeks. They are now fairly up against the Hindenburg line from St. Quentin to beyond Cambrai, and while the line itself is pierced on the front before Cambrai, there is yet such a wilderness of defences barring their path as only the methodically, patient, machine-like Huns are capable of constructing.

These mazes are from a mile to two miles deep. Part of the way there is a canal seventy feet wide, and probably fifty feet deep in some places, with deep spread trenches before and behind it.

Line Is Uncertain.

If this machine-like barricade could save him, Von Hindenburg should feel safe, but the Germans unquestionably regard the situation nervously, with their first line from Havrincourt to Moeuvres cracked, and with the Australians perced on a ridge where the German outpost system lies between Bellicourt and Bellenglise. In the latter strip the Germans still retain an enormous advantage, however, as the dry bed of the canal stretches for three miles there.

But recent demonstrations of what tanks and instantaneous fuse shells are able to do ,to ordinary defences argue against the impregnability of any lines.

The Germans in this section have the opportunity to resume their favourite warfare, and may hope to revitalize, or rather rediscipline, their demoralized forces into making a stand.

Widow's Claim Comes First

JUDGMENT GIVEN IN CONNECTION WITH ESTATE OF A PETERBORO MAN.

At the time of the death of F. J. Daly, Peterboro ,the estate was valued at about $100,000. But it included the Pacific Hotel at North Bay, which since the inauguration of the Ontario Temperance Act, gives only a very small proportion of its former income. Many legacies were left and an annuity of $1500 was left to the widow, but on account of the reduction in the income from the hotel the total of the estate is not sufficient to pay the widow's annuity, and the executors now ask the court as to whether the widow's annuity is to be paid in preference to other legacies, and if they can use the corpus of principal of the estate to pay her annuity.

Mr. Justice Rose declares: 1. That the widow's annuity, including arrears, is a first charge upon the net come of the residuary estate 2, that it is inexpedient to answer at the present time the other questions submitted. Costs of all parties to be paid out of income. D. W. Dumble, K.C., appeared for the legatees; D. O'Connell, for the executors, and V. J. McElderry for the widow.

REPORTED MISSING, NOW SAFE.

Mr. Fred Barrette, 75 Park street, received a telegram from Ottawa this morning informing him that his son, Private Fred Barrette, who was reported missing a short time ago, is now reported safe and with his unit.

Premier Endorses K. of C. Hut Fund

Premier Borden has endorsed the Knights of Columbus appeal for the Army Hut Fund in the following letter to the chairman of the Ottawa committee:

"I have already made a contribution to the fund raised in Halifax by the Knights of Columbus for the same purpose, but the cause which you are supporting is so worthy that I gladly send on additional contribution to the fund here."

WAR SUMMARY

With their centre broken by the onslaught of French, Serbian and Italian armies, with the British and the Greeks sweeping over the strongest defences in the Lake Doiran region and with their railroad communications virtually destroyed, the Bulgarian, Austro-Hungarian and German armies on the Macedonian front have begun a retreat which seems to threaten disaster. Over a front of over 90 miles the Teutonic allies are streaming back in disorder, which is said to be indescribable. There is every reason to believe that the Turks in Palestine are in a position similar to that in which the Teutonic forces in Macedonia find themselves. Advancing British, French and Arab forces appear to have enveloped a large portion of the Sultan's armies.

Lakefield Soldier Reported Wounded

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 24.—Mrs. W. Chappell received the news yesterday that her husband, Pte. Walter Chappell, has been admitted to hospital with a gun shot wound in his left leg and a fracture. Pte Chappell was a member of C. Co. of the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to another battalion and sent to France two years ago.

ALLIES HOLD WHIP HAND

The Most Colossal Battle of All Time is Now Raging—A Grand Finale.

THE MAJOR EFFORT

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms).

PARIS, Sept. 24. — The most colossal battle of all times is now raging, the battle line stretching from New York to the other side of the Jordan.

Perhaps the intensity is varying, but it will not stop until the Boches are beaten everyweher.

The Allies hold the whip hand and big events seem brewing in the comparatively near future. Still every allied officer and man to-day is most emphatic that there never was a time when the Allies needed more to keep their eyes wide open, and never more needed to be strong than now.

The Big Theme.

Critics disagree on minor points, but are in accord regarding the big theme, namely, that the decisive moment is approaching. They do not mean that this will be to-morrow, nor next week, nor next month, but certainly in 1919 they can see the allied victory, providing the Allies do not spare their utmost effort afloat and ashore, fighters and civilians alike.

A Grand Finale.

Indications point towards a grand finale. The Americans, French and British are pinching the Prussians tighter and tighter against the Hindenburg wall, with mightier efforts in perspective; the U-boats are defeated on the sea; General March announcing that one and three quarters millions of Americans are now in France and Italy.

But the real field of Armageddon is in Northern France, where the titantic armies are opposed for the final get-away.

The Bulgarian debacle is big in possibilities, and the rout of the Turks may have important repercussions elsewhere but the fate of the Allies will be decided between New York and Switzerland—first by keeping the seas clear and teeming, and last by cracking the Hindenburg line and marching on Berlin.

The front is all one from New York to the Jordan, but the war ultimately will be won or lost in France.

THE WEATHER

A bright and sun-shining day has been so rare for some weeks that when Sol does show his face it is worthy of remark. During the present month there has been rain on 17 days, and threatening weather on three other days. The remaining days were bright and clear. The total rainfall is close to five inches. This prolonged rainy weather has been largely confined to older Ontario and has not extened to the south or west of the Great Lakes.—W. P.

ALLENBY'S SUCCESS.

The extent of the crushing victory General Allenby's British forces have inflicted on the Turkish army in Palestine can hardly be realized. In two days' fighting his forces have covered the remarkable distance of fifty miles, which establishes a new record for the great war. By admirable plans, perfectly carried out General Allenby completely shattered the Turkish army, and by skilful use of his cavalry, turned the defeat into an utter rout. The triumph for British arms in Palestine may be followed in the estimation of H. W. T. Mason, war expert for the United Press, by a major campaign having as its ultimate objective the capture of Constantinople. Mr. Mason, who is not given to unreasonable optimism in his war reviews, points out that the way is now open for the capture of Damascus by General Allenby's forces, after which will follow a junction with the British army in Mesopotamia. Aleppo, the junction point of the Constantinople railway, with the Bagdad and Damascus lines, would be the next objective, and its capture and the taking of the nearby port of Alexandretta would make an attack on Constantinople a possibility.

A feature of General Allenby's campaign is the varied composition of the army under his command. It is a grouping of the forces of almost the entire Empire. Indian troops, South Africans, Egyptians, Australians, New Zealanders and forces from all parts of the British Isles.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN TRAITOR

In the river of innocent blood that the Bolsheviki have set flowing there are mingled at last some guilty drops. They come from the veins of General Soukhomlinoff, the master traitor, the Minister of War who brought to nothing the Russian invasion of Austria-Hungary in 1915, who sent Russian soldiers to fight artillery with their bare hands and caused them to be massacred by hundreds of thousands. Soukhomlinoff was tried for high treason under the Kerensky Government—the first man in Russian history who ever faced a jury on that charge—and was convicted. But the law did not permit capital punishment for his offense. He was sentenced to the extreme penalty, hard labor for life.

That was on Sept. 26, 1917. On Sept. 8, 1918, almost a year later, the Bolsheviki, perhaps in some pause in their slaughter of the innocent, remembered this guilty man, reached into his prison and dragged him out, court-martialed him, and shot him. The news has just reached America. It is not impossible that but for his crimes the war might have been over before the date when America was to enter it; for if the Grand Duke Nicholas had been supported as he expected, he could have put Austria-Hungary out of action. Soukhomlinoff let him get so far into Hungary that a retreat would be disastrous, and then deprived him of arms, ammunition, and supplies. One of the greatest stories of the war is that of how Nicholas extricated this betrayed and disarmed force, though in doing it he had to give up an immense amount of Russian territory.

But the story of Soukhomlinoff's treason goes back farther than that, goes back years before the war. All that time he was in the service of Germany, and was busy stripping the frontier of means of defense, busy weakening the army, busy making true reports of its condition to Germany and false reports to the Czar. Before the war began his treason was well known to the leaders of the liberal elements in Russia, who made herculean efforts to get the story of it to the Czar. But the misguided and dull-witted prince, as one of the witnesses at the trial said, "saw everything through the eyes of Soukhomlinoff."

It was as far back as 1908 that the Duma first suspected Soukhomlinoff's treason, so President Guchkoff of the Third Duma testified. In that year the reports of all the Russian military attaches convinced them of the German and Austrian preparations for war, and they began their unavailing attempts to counteract Soukhomlinoff's treason. It may have been Soukhomlinoff who actually determined the date of the war; for just before the Potsdam conference of July 5, 1914, which planned the German invasion of the world, Soukhomlinoff's report of the condition of the Russian army and its plans for the future was sent to Berlin; and it is probable that the conditions he revealed were what decided the conspirators to wait no longer.

Soukhomlinoff, who thus betrayed not only Russia but the world, did it all for money. The treason was grandiose, but the man was contemptible. Benedict Arnold was a traitor to revenge an injury, Talleyrand to save his skin, Monk for ambition, but Soukhomlinoff betrayed his country, just as Lenine and Trotzky have betrayed it, for cash down. The world is too busy to note him much just now, but history will have a great deal to say about him.—New York Times.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN DRESS.

There is much food for thought in the letter published below from Mr. Frederick Paul, managing editor of Toronto Saturday Night. The subject of extravagance in dress which has been touched upon in these columns on several occasions in spite of the risk of being involved in an long and heated argument, has a direct connection with the government's campaign to promote thrift in Canada. Mr. Paul's letter is one that should be pondered over by every woman reader. There may be things in it that will make her angry, but there is at the same time some good common sense talk. Canadians are being asked to eliminate extravagance and to save to the limit. In the face of what the managing editor of Saturday Night says, are not many women failing to meet the test?

Says Mr. Paul:

Toronto, Sept. 23rd, 1918

The Editor, The Examiner,

Peterborough, Ont.:

Dear Sir,—I note in a recent number of the "Review" a letter signed "A Working Girl," criticising yours as well as "Saturday Night's," attitude respecting the wastefulness of woman's dress. This writer instead of arguing to the point which was, why a woman earning $725 per annum must needs put half this amount on her back, attempts to refute the facts. This estimate was given by a woman, at what was to all intents and purposes, a judicial hearing, as the amount necessary upon which to live and dress, and was complete in every detail. There was not even an intimation by me that $725 per annum was an average wage among women. "A Working Girl" has either wilfully or stupidly read into my editorial, statements which it did not contain. The point was and still is, what absurdity, what folly, for a woman to put half her annual earnings on her back, no matter whether it be $431.60 or any other sum, and no matter whether she lives in Peterborough or Toronto. I have personal knowledge of women's wage, or perhaps I had better say salary earners, as they would tip the scale of considerably upward of a $1,000, annually, who are spending more than fifty per cent. of their entire incomes for fashionable clothes, and they have argued with me that it is necessary if they are not to look "simply like frights." These women do not even wear out their shoes. They are cast aside for no better reason than that they have become unfashionable, and shoes selling at $15 per pair. They must needs drop a perfectly good wool sweater, which should never have been purchased, owing to wool scarcity, for a more fashionable one of the silk variety. And so on ad lib.

Now, most of these women probably anticipate marriage at some time, and probably to men of moderate means. Can they expect a man to pass over say one-quarter of his salary that they may continue to bedeck themselves like so many gay butterflies? If a man ever had a valid excuse for remaining single he has it in this day and generation.

I have a case in mind of what it is possible for a young girl to do in the way of accumulating a little something for a rainy day and still be happy with none of the "colourless existence" that "Working Girl" talks of, and which makes it necessary for her to argue for piling her wages on her back. This girl in question came out from an English orphanage four years ago without even owning the clothes she stood in. She began by repaying out of a modest wage the money which had been advanced by a relative for her steamship passage and expenses. She then began paying a certain small sum per annum into the Government's annuity, a sum sufficient in the aggregate to give her an annual pension of $100 from age fifty to the end of her days, with no chance of anyone being able to swindle her out. When the war saving certificate scheme was launched from Ottawa she had sufficient money in the bank to purchase one of the fifty dollar denomination. With later accumulations she bought another of the $25 denomination. When the last victory loan was launched she subscribed for a $50 bond and this is now paid up. In the interval that girl has been as well dressed as she desired, and personally I would not have cause to blush at being seen with her in any public gathering. When this young woman marries, as she no doubt will when the right "boy" comes along, she will be able to do her full share in furnishing "the nest" and moreover she will have a little annual income all her own.

Contrast this young girl's future state of mind with that of those who must have new expensive shoes and hats to counteract a "drab existence." It chills one to the bone to think that over ninety per cent. of the people live in old age dependent upon others and die paupers, but one of the chief reasons is apparent enough to even the casual observer.

Your truly,
FREDERICK PAUL.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"It is time to listen to reason," says a Bulgarian paper. The time to listen to reason, however, was several years ago.

The Bulgars and Turks are out to establish new running records. The Turks seem to have the edge judging by their sprint in Palestine.

General Allenby's report on the successful operations in Palestine, is one of the most modest communications in the history of the war.

Brantford raised $48,000 for the Sailors Fund. Compared with this amount the showing made in Peterboro is not a matter for undue pride.

AN ELOQUENT SUGGESTION

(Washington Star.)

Anyone who finds time hanging heavily on a gasolineless Sunday might try going to church.

THOSE CAREELESS BRATS

(Kansas City Star)

The Kaiser, observers say, has aged greatly and has the appearance of a man bearing great sorrow. That probably is from fear for the safety of his six sons, any one of whom is likely to fall over the west bank into the Rhine at any moment.

THE ISHMAEL OF NATIONS

(London Morning Post)

If there is one thing clearer than another it is that America has determined that it does not sort with her honour ever again to make overtures to Germany, or accord with the dignity of a great nation to use threats which will not be carried into execution. There was a moment when Germany could have made terms with America That moment has passed. Senator Lodge declared on Friday that the only peace America will make with Germany will be a "dictated" peace. The prospect may, and in fact does, perturb others beside Germans; but then, like the Germans, they fail to understand that America can be ruthless.

IT SHARPENS HIS TEETH

When our enemies attack they will bite granite," boasts a German paper. Well, granite seems to be old man Foch's favorite breakfast food.

FASHION NOTE

(Florida Times-Union)

Whole-souled men will be wearing half-soled shoes this winter unless salaries go up or shoes come down.

THE CRIMINAL STATE

(Buffalo Courier)

Unfortunately there can be no penitentiary for a criminal state. But Germany can be sequestered—within her own borders. She can be supplied with enough to sustain the life of her people and to provide them with clothing and shelter. But she can be prohibited from other intercourse.

As a fine for Germany's depredations, such of her existing funds as are not absolutely necessary to her existence, with all of he colonies and outside properties, may be turned over to those she has most injured, in partial compensation for the same.

This sentence should be for a sufficient time—say not less than twenty five years or more than fifty years—as given for individual criminal acts of magnitude and dependent on good behavior. With it should go, of course the taking away of all arms or the right to make the same

Roosevelt on the Pacifism of Henry Ford

DETROIT, Sept. 24.—Politics is practically suspended for the period of the war are anything but stagnant in Michigan. The ball began with President Wilson's naming of Henry Ford as his candidate for the senate. Now the Democratic Senate has precipitated a pretty row by undertaking to conduct an "investigation" into the expenditures of Truman H. Newberry, who received the Republican nomination for the Senate in the recent primaries. The Senate action has called forth a biting attack on Henry Ford by Theodore Roosevelt.

"This Senate, which comes to an end on March 4 next," says Mr. Roosevelt, "has the same and only the same right to investigate the election conduct of candidates for the senate which comes into existence on March 4 that it has to investigate the campaign conduct of any other candidate for office.

"If the men backing the proposal are acting in good faith, they will investigate Mr. Ford's record on the following points in order to determine his fitness to represent patriotic Americans at this time. This will find out how much money he spent on the peace ship and on his nerve-racking expensive newspaper advertising campaign against preparedness and against our standing up for Belgium's rights and against our taking action about Germany's sinking the Lusitania and her other assaults on us, and in favor of the McLemore resolution.

"This was part of the great pacifist campaign of which another part, as our government investigations show, was financed by the German authorities through their control of the various pacifist societies in the country.

"The investigation should include Mr. Ford's contributions to the last presidential campaign and the names of the candidates he supported for his politics seem to have been purely personal and pacifist.

"Moreover, the investigation should include a full examination of the justification of Mr. Ford's aiding and abetting his son Edsel in escaping the draft and staying at home when the great majority of young Americans of his age are eagerly striving for places of honour and peril at the front.

"Mr. Ford is an enormously wealthy man. Mr. Newberry is not. Mr. Newberry himself at once entered the military service of the United States. Two sons have wives and children, but they immediately entered the service striving eagerly to get to the front. Mr. Edsel Ford waited until he was drafted, then fought hard for an exemption which the local board disallowed. He succeeded, however, in escaping service and is at home."

THIRTY-ONE PERSONS KILLED IN WRECK.

Express Train Headed for Vienna Collided.

Canadian Press.

London, Sept. 24 — Thirty one persons were killed when an express train from Berlin for Vienna collided with another train at Dresden station. Fifty-nine persons were injured.

"Years ago,—just like everybody else—I would delay and delay and delay. And in the end I was disappointed. We can't be perfect all at once; so I did not arrive at the conclusion that it was wisest to purchase all garments at beginning of seasons until I had had a good dose of disappointments.

"It isn't so much a question of getting what you wan't later, because I know I can always find what I want here. But the point is this—Now you will have greater choice, smart style when it is new and it will cost you no more.

Distinctiveness As Applied to the Millinery at This Store

The word "Distinctiveness" makes you think of all that is different; becoming; correct.
So when we apply this word to the hats designed in our own workrooms and those being received daily from New York, please remember that the designers of these hats are artists. That the quality of distinction is so essential that no hat may pass out of their hands until it combines all three features of difference, becomingness and fashion.
One is fully assured of "Distinctiveness" when their hat is selected from our showing of new Fall millinery.

This Week's Sale of Child's Hats will Create Unusual Activity

A showing of little hats that embodies all that is new and correct and reflects clearly the superior style features in these smart little hat shapes just come to hand. There are hats of every variety and kind and almost every combination of coloring. Prices start at 95c and end at $3.75.

Every Woman Will Be Interested to Learn that Our Complete Collection of Dresses at $18.00 is Now Ready for Choosing

One woman after purchasing yesterday made the following remark: "I really came in just to look at the new styles. I hadn't the slightest intentions of purchasing. But who can resist such pretty dresses. And they are so smart and good-fitting and the price is certainly very moderate. I had intended paying several dollars more."
There are several styles to choose from, have various trimming features and made of serge, satin and velvet. Brand and button trimming; however, there are a number of dresses in entirely new designs and which show striking trimming contrasts. One of the models has a very unusual idea in a pocket. You can expect to find many other equally as interesting models.

Flannelette Gown Sale, $1.50

A women's tucked and yoked gown with wide full skirt and every seam over-sewn. You will be pleased with the quality and the smartly trimmed appearance of it. All sizes.

Slipper Soles 35c and 50c

For gifts or for home use no footwear is as cosy as a crochet slipper. By looking away ahead we have practically all sizes at last year's prices.

Chamoisette Gloves $1.00

Splendid fitting women's gloves in black or white, all sizes with two domes and self corded backs. Very smart appearing glove noted for washing and wear.

The Popular Silk Skirts in a Showing at $7.25 to $15.00

These have been in the store only four days and have already created the utmost interest. The skirts are in striking colors and designs, splendid tailoring and smart lines. Most of them plaited; narrow widths and in correct lengths. Many of the models are not over a yard and a quarter wide at the hem; others have large box plaits and these are naturally fuller in appearance. Subdued effects are included.
Inasmuch as these skirts are destined to be first of the new fashions, we would suggest very strongly that you examine them and make selection while broad choice is allowed.

Knitted Touques and Gloves 50c

In almost every color made of pure wool which is saying a great deal in these days of scarce wools. All sizes. Toques are 50c and so are the gloves.

Very Smart Neckwear 90c

We pay particular attention to those accessories so needed to brighten up your fall suit or dress. Stocks were never so varied or complete and the price is unusually moderate.

Boys' Union Vests, 50c.

Made in a close elastic rib quality in all sizes with buttoned front and long sleeves to keep out the winter's cold. They are a snap but there are only a few left.

THE NEW COATS, in Unusual and Striking Styles, at Costs That are Very Moderate

With the news gaining ground that desirable coating materials would be taken over entirely by the Government, we at first thought that prices would be extremely high. As a matter of fact, it has turned out that there is enough for all; in consequence of which prices for coats are nat much greated than heretofore.. Prices from

$19.50 TO $49.00

The Children's Coats Are In Styles Like Mother's

If it is for a girl of eight or ten or one thirteen or fourteen years of age, you will find a great resemblance in the style of coats developed for adults.
A particularly important feature of the new Fall styles of children's coats is that they are made along practical lines and while, as we have mentioned, styles are exceedingly appealing, you will find the coats designed to afford good wear, yet using little material.
Plaited effects along various lines are probably the most conspicuous style feature. This, in connection with buttons used for trimming form the basis of many a model that will certainly appeal to the young miss.

Prices range from $7.50 to $18.00

$3.50 Cashmere Sweaters, $2:00

34c Huck Towels, 4 for $1.00

A splendid bedroom or bathroom towel. Size 28 x 38, in good quality huck either in linen or cotton. We were indeed fortunate in snapping up such a bargain at old time prices.

$1.75 Corsets, $1.20

All sizes in a new style fall corset, just received. Made in different models so you'll have no trouble about fit, and the quality of the cloth and the way its boned and finished will charm you at once.

Women's Combination. $3.00

Of a heavy quality of union wool, guaranteed both as to fit and wear. You will like its style. It has round neck and long sleeves, and drawers, and it has that soft velvety finish of a well-woven knitted garment. All sizes.

New Song Book Will be Used in Peterboro Campaign

Evangelistic Campaign Will Open in Peterboro on Sunday Next—Mr. and Mrs. Dixon Will Have Charge of the Musical Portion of the Services.

As arrangements progress for the Evangelistic Campaign which is to open in Peterborough next Sunday and be continued throughout the month of October, it appears more and more apparent that it is going to make a deep impression throughout the city. Rev. Dr. I. E. Honeywell, the Evangelist, sends word that his party is about complete. There will be four in the party besides Dr. Honeywell, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon will have charge of the musical portion of the services, Mr. Dixon acting as choir leader and his wife pianist. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dixon have had wide experience in this work. They will come almost directly from San Francisco and reach Peterborough by next Friday. In the evening they will conduct the first choir rehearsal in Brock street rink. The musical committee is endeavouring to have a choir of several hundred, all of whom if possible are urged to attend this rehearsal next Friday night. It will start sharp at eight o'clock.

The work among the women of the city will be largely in the hands of Mrs. Russell, a member of the staff of the Extension Work Department of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. Dr. Honeywell describes Mrs. Russell as being a cultured, refined, talented woman. Mr. Russell has been in charge of this class of work in large cities such as St. Louis, in the United States. Her husband was the president of a southern railroad before his death. She also expected to arrive in the city next Friday. As yet Dr. Honeywell has not definitely secured his assistant for the men's work but expects to do so shortly.

A Special Feature.

A special feature of the Peterborough campaign will be a song book that will be used in Canada for the first time. Although Dr. Honeywell has conducted large evangelistic campaigns in the great cities of the United States as well as in smaller places, for many years this is the first time, although he is a Canadian, that he has undertaken similar meetings in Canada. He has arranged therefore to have a special song book printed by the Rodheaver Publishing Co., of Chicago. It will include the songs which have proved the most successful in the Billy Sunday campaigns, as well as a number that have been included especially for the benefit of Canadian audiences.

Dr. Honeywell, who has recently completed a big campaign in Chicago, has been resting lately preparatory to the Peterborough campaign. He reached Toronto last week and conducted services yesterday in a Toronto church. This week he will visit his aged father who is living in Ottawa. The fact that Dr. Honeywell is a Canadian makes him all the more interested in this, his opening Canadian campaign. The first mass meeting, it is expected will be held next Sunday night in the Brock street rink. It is possible that an afternoon service will be held, but announcements as to this will be made later.

Applications for Coal Exceed 500, Fuel Commission Will Be Formally Appointed To-night

Special Meeting of the Council Has Been Called by Mayor Duncan—Prospect May Not Be So Serious as Casual Survey of Applications Indicates.

MOST HOMES SUPPLIED

This afternoon Miss Edgar reported 750 applications for coal received up to the present.

More than 500 applications for coal have been received at Ald. Edgar's office on Simcoe street from citizens who used the coupons in the local papers, thereby signifying that they had not yet received any coal. Yesterday's mail swelled Saturday's applications from the hundred mark to over four hundred, and this morning brought a new bundle which, it was stated, would raise the total close to six hundred. Each letter is numbered in the order in which it arrives at the office. The names of the applicants are then entered in a ledger in numerical rotation, and the list will be transferred to the new Fuel Commission. With that step completed, the easiest part of the work of obtaining coal for these anxious citizens is ended, and the Commission steps into the line from which the dealers are more than willing to retire.

Council Meeting To-night.

Mayor Duncan has called a special meeting of the Council to-night for the purpose of formally investing the Commission with all the authority the Fuel Controller has limited. Messrs. Alex. Murray, Walter Stocker and Joseph Wearing are evidently undaunted by the difficulties which it has been predicted will hedge their efforts. They have separately notified the Council that they are willing to undertake the troublesome task that is wrapped up in the office that brought nothing but numerous and sharp criticisms to Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Edgar who preceded them. The fact that they are prepared to assume the hitherto thankless position is an evidence of the earnestness with which they undertake the work. The chief obstacle in the past to the successful regulation of the distribution of coal, successful to the point of satisfying everybody, has been the lack of authority which, it was said, prevented both Ald. Dobbin and Ald. Edgar from interfering in the retailers affairs to the desired end of designating the delivery of coal.

The new Commission will be empowered to begin work to-morrow, if it is convenient to them, and obviously their first duty will be to determine the authority given them by the Fuel Controller.

May Not Be Serious.

Mayor Duncan remarked this morning that he had not expected to find so many citizens without coal, but in considering the conditions that have developed this year he expressed the hope that the outlook would not be so serious as the first impressions might suggest. Supposing that there are 4,000 homes in the city, it is evident that 3,500 of them are provided with coal. Hence, the problem resolves itself into supplying the remaining 500. Most of these citizens might be able to pass through the winter in comfortative comfort with three tons, thus reducing a first requirement of 1,500 tons.

Manifestly, if the Commission is to be responsible to the consumers they must be accorded the fullest cooperation by the dealers. In other words these 500 citizens should receive the first consideration from the Commission and retailers working in harmony. The man on the street demands the end of the business as usual idea if the work of the Commission is to escape the inefficacy of the past and receive only the reproaches of the citizens.

Occasionally a man declines a nomination for office—if there is no chance for his election.

CHOIR WILL NOT REHEARSE TO-NIGHT.

Owing to unforeseen circumstances there will not be a rehearsal of the Union Choir to-night (Tuesday), as was anticipated, but will every member do their utmost to be present on Friday evening at the Brock Street Rink at 8 o'clock sharp, when Dr. Honeywell's chorus leader will be present to conduct the rehearsal.

Says He Helped to Kill Russian Monk

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Sept. 24. — Claiming to be one of five men who shot and killed Gregory Rasputin, the Russian monk and "power behind the Russian throne," Dr. Stanislaus De Lazevert, formerly a colonel in the Russian army, arrived here on a British liner. Lazevert said the other four assailants, all of whom are now dead, were Grand Duke Dimitri Pavlowski; another Grand Duke whom he declined to name; M. Touchotone, Captain of the Guard, and M. Pourischkcoatch.

Dr. De Lazevert, who said he came to America to see President Wilson in connection with the Siberian situation, declared he had not been permitted to tell his story in the past, but added that he would tell it fully after his visit to Washington.

According to his statement, the monk, concerning whose slaying, many stories have been told, was killed by the five men from Dr De Lazevert's automobile. The shooting took place just outside the palace of Grand Duke Paviowski, he said.

After the assassination, Dr. De Lazevert added, a price was put on his head, and he and his wife fled from Russia, leaving behind with relatives their three-months-old boy.

The assassination of Rasputin, who was declared to have exercised a great influence upon the late Emperor Nicholas through the Empress Alexandra Alix, was first reported in July, 1914. At that time it was said that a woman had stabbed him. A number of stories were circulated later as to the manner of the monk's death, in which the names of a number of aristocrats were involved.

"THE MILLION DOLLAR DOLL"

The Playgrounds in Peterboro

Small Children Were Regular Attendants.

Very many small children were regular attendants under the care of two fully qualified Supervisors. The day's programme included games, story-telling period and industrial work. Industrial work covered Red Cross sewing (gauze handkerchiefs), Red Cross knitting (wash cloths), basket and cross stitch. This work is a valuable training of eye and hand and is a step towards a permanent interest in practical handicraft.

Swimming Pool.

The boys were taken by their Supervisor to the Y. M. C. A. swimming pool twice a week where the "Y" Secretary took charge of them. The girls were taken to a private property on the river for some time, but no suitable swimming place for the boys or girls exists in the south end of the city.

Mothers were always welcome on the grounds. Those who came expressed confidence in the Supervisor and appreciation of the care and the training given the children.

It was found very difficult to get swings, etc., repaired this year, owing to the shortage of labour and lack of funds prevented the purchase of new equipment.

No Contest in North Oxford

John A. Calder, Liberal, Elected by Acclamation to Legislature.

Woodstock, September 23. — North Oxford has escaped the throes of a political contest. This afternoon Mr. John A. Calder, Liberal, of East Nissouri, was elected by acclamation to represent this constituency in the Provincial Legislature, succeeding Hon. Newton W. Rowell, who represented this riding until he entered the Federal Government last fall. Mr. Calder is a native of East Nissouri township, where he has for many years been a successful farmer. As the nominee of the Liberal party he received his election by acclamation because of the agreement between the Prime Minister, Mr. Hearst, and the Opposition leader, Mr. Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., not to force contests during the period of the war.

To-day's nomination proceedings were the quietest in the history of this riding, only a small gathering being present in the city hall when the returning officer, Mr. E. L. Sutherland, declared Mr. Calder elected. The election of Mr. Calder also marks another notable change, in that he is the first farmer sent to Queen's Park to represent this constituency. That agriculturists are taking a greater interest in the affairs of the State was also shown by the fact that nearly all of those at the nomination meeting were farmers. No previous member for North Oxford was ever sent to the Legislature by acclamation. In former years this riding witnessed some of the hottest fights in the province.

Voice of The People

Sir,—Wouldn't it be a fine, warm-hearted thing for the Y.M.C.A. directors to say to the women and children of this town, "We know you cannot afford to keep your houses pleasant and comfortable this winter, so we hope that you, especially the wives and children of those who gave up all to defend their country, will consider the great warm Y.M.C.A. building your club-house during the winter months. It will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. We will do all we can to make you happy during these distressful times. Our young men and boys will put themselves at your service and be only too happy to do so, remembering that they can serve God and show their faith and humanheartedness in no better way. We cannot bear to enjoy these good things when we, remembering the anxious faces of the mothers left at home, and the pinched little faces of the children suffering from the bitter cold of winter while we sit by the warm fire and thank God that we are not as other people."

Let a great wave of kindly and patriotic emotion stir us all at this time. Think how delighted and grateful our men at the front would be.

READER.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—Allow me to correct an error in your otherwise excellent report of the meeting of the Local Council of Women, held last Thursday afternoon.

I was reported to have said that "with the only source of revenue, the collection of rags and waste paper, two playgrounds had been kept up," which was quite erroneous. The playgrounds are not kept up by the L. C. W., but are under the control of and are financed by the Peterborough Playgrounds Association.

There is in the L.C.W. a "committee on supervised playgrounds and social centres," working along the same lines at present and assisting the association personally as workers on its committees, and financially with any funds which it may be able to raise.

It was the activities of this committee that were being reported, and there was no reference to the cost of the upkeep of the playgrounds, which as yet is quite unknown to me. It may readily be understood, however, that the sum mentioned, $190, would be entirely inadequate for the purpose.

Hoping that this may serve to rectify a mistake which might be offensive to the Financial Committee of the Playgrounds Association.

I remain, respectfully yours,

Annie E. Mowat,

Convener of the Committee on Supervised Playgrounds and Social Centres of the L.C.W.

MURDER AND SUICIDE IN SASKATCHEWAN

POLICE ONLY NOTIFIED TEN DAYS AFTER TRAGEDY.

Canadian Press.

REGINA, Sask., Sept. 24. — Christian Dressler of Berecina, Sask., shot his wife dead, then killed himself in front of his young children in their garden. Their bodies were buried by the neighbours and police were not notified until ten days after the tragedy.

A New Charge Was Preferred

An entirely new phase in the case against the three alleged pickpockets who were apprehended at the Peterborough Exhibition this year was unearthed this morning when Louis Connor, the eldest of the trio, was charged with entering Canada after being deported from this country. Mr. D. Reynolds, of the Immigration Department, Ottawa, was present to substantiate the charges. The charge of carrying morphine and other drugs contrary to the Drug Act was also pressed. Mr. F. D. Kerr, the prisoners' counsel, asked for a remand until to-morrow, as he was not prepared to make his defence on the new charges. To all charges the prisoners pleaded not guilty. The charge of stealing or picking pockets has not, as yet, been preferred by the police. The three men are still being held on the charge of vagrancy.

Peterboro is Free of Spanish Influenza Says Local Doctors

There is a Certain Amount of Ordinary Influenza and Mumps—Twelve Safeguards Used in the American Army.

"Spanish influenza" has not yet reached the city, according to the leading doctors, most of whom were called upon this morning. Not one case has been reported yet, but Dr. A. Moir states there is a certain amount of the ordinary brand of influenza.

Mumps Prevalent.

Dr. C. H. Amys, M.H.O., said that he had not had a case of the supposed epidemic reported so far, but that mumps are more or less prevalent in the city, and in some cases those in charge are deliberately breaking the law by not reporting a case. This neglect to comply with the by-law is a serious offence, as mumps must be reported and quarantined for several weeks. Cases of mumps at the city schools have been found and sent home by the school nurse.

Twelve Safeguards.

1. Avoid needless crowding; influenza is a crowd disease.
2. Smother your coughs and sneezes; others do not want the germs which you would throw away.
3. Your nose, not your mouth, was made to breathe through. Get the habit.
4. Remember the three C's — A clean mouth, a clean skin and clean clothes.
5. Try to keep cool when you walk and warm when you ride and sleep.
6. Open the windows always at home at night; at the office when practicable.
7. Food will win the war if you give it a chance; help by choosing and chewing your food well.
8. Your fate may be in your own hands; wash your hands before eating.
9. Don't let the waste products of digestion accumulate; drink a glass or two of water on getting up.
10. Don't use a napkin, towel, spoon, fork, glass or cup which has been used by another person and not washed.
11. Avoid tight clothes, tight shoes, tight gloves; seek to make nature your ally and not your prisoner.
12. When the air is pure breathe all of it you can; breathe freely.

These same rules are approved by General Gorgas, Surgeon-General of the American Army, for the practice of the U.S. forces.

The Symptoms.

The name Spanish influenza was bestowed in the belief that the disease started in Spain, but there is apparently no authority for this. No part of Europe, civilized or barbarian, has been exempt. Fortunately the outbreak in England and among the Allied troops on the continent is now on the wane.

"The symptoms are described practically always in about the same terms: sudden onset with chills, severe headache, pains in the back and elsewhere, general malaise, flushed face, some soreness of the throat and fever of from 101 deg. to 104 deg. F., with a rather slow pulse. Usually crisis has occurred after two or three days, with rapid and complete recovery. In many cases there has been a harsh cough with a scanty sputum; occasionally more severe bronchitis and even bronchopneumonia have developed; but among the young and healthy there seems to have been no serious consequences, and no definite statements are made as to the death-rate, which in any event thus far has been very low. Gastro-intestinal disturbances have not been observed.

The Treatment.

"The treatment remains symptomatic—rest in bed, free movement of the bowels, and light diet are the most important measures.

"No doubt the spread of the infection, whatever it is, would be limited considerably if the dangers of droplet infection were recognized more widely and guarded against."

LOVE AND THE DOCTOR BEAT MILITARY POLICE

How an Interned Westerner Wooed and Won a Dutch Bride Told by a Former Peterboro Boy.

This is one of a series of articles by a former Peterborough soldier, who was a prisoner in Germany, but later released and interned in Holland, about conditions among the men interned in the latter country, many of whom are Canadians.

(By John C. Hogan.)

The Hague.— A military policeman is the most hated individual and possibly the most necessary in any military camp. He is the barbed wire of The Hague, and he is spoken of in language previously used to describe the devout Hun.

You will find him at the end of our promenade limit. His eyes watch all the places where Tommy must not be seen. Once he puts his five fingers on your shoulder, entitles you to kiss your friends good-bye for at least a month. Rumours, however, declare that behind those solemn masks lives as strong a sense of sport and fair play as one can wish for. But a Western Canadian corporal doubts it.

Finding life as a bachelor somewhat boring he searched The Hague for someone to make up a Darby and Joan setting for his "Little Grey Home in the West." He failed. The order that the British Government would pay no separation allowances to wives of foreign birth, only spurred on this gallant.

Chases and Finds Love.

He bought a bicycle and chased love through the environs of the pretty capital. Finally he stopped for a glass of water at a pretty house several kilometers from here. She gave him a cup of tea. They were all charming people and opened their home to him. A few days ago the society column of a Dutch newspaper told the story, at least gave a hint in announcing the engagement.

The British News copied it. Did a jealous military policeman read the announcement?

"What are you doing out of bounds?" asked a red-cap the day after the announcement was made.

A somewhat confused reply did not satisfy the policeman, so on the following morning the engaged corporal was sentenced to one month at Urk and warned to pack his kit.

The Scots' Little Game.

Sympathy was broadcast. The corporal was a splendid fellow and the young lady ideal. But the westerner was a Scot. He had ridden every fence and ditch and was not going to fall at the last hurdle to please a red-cap. He remembered that all men under sentence must be medically fit before proceeding to Urk.

A Dutch doctor looked at him with a smile.

"I am in no condition to go to Urk," he told the physician. "I am suffering from palpitation of the heart."

The medical man read the name and thought a moment. He adjusted the stethoscope with a peculiar smile and told the Westerner to take quick short breaths.

His Terrible Complaint.

"You smoke too much," said the doctor, "and your heart is a trifle weak. You must go to bed early and take things pretty easy for a bit. Are you married?"

"Not yet—in a month," replied the patient.

"Ah, so," the doctor laughed. "Congratulations."

"What luck, Scotty?" they shouted.

"It seems to me I've met that doctor some place before," he said. "I'm off with a bad heart."

The next moment a sergeant major rushed into the hallway to restore order.

Quick, Painless Way To Remove Hairy Growths

(Helps to Beauty.)

Here is a simple, unfailing way to rid the skin of objectionable hairs: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to cover the hairy surface, apply and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This is quite harmless, but to avoid disappointment be sure to get the delatone in an original package.

Corn omelet adds another delicious dish to the list that can nbe made with corn.

Prizewinners in Garden Club of the Peterboro Y.M.C.A.

The Y. M. C. A. Boy's Garden Club of 1918 wound up its business today with the Presentation of the Prizes The results of the work of the Club however are not all shown yet. Many of the fellows gained a wealth of experience from their work and some have a large amount of surplus produce for sale.

Alex. Elliott has worked hard and has proved himself a real live president and booster for the Club. His garden was the best and his exhibit at the Exhibition grounds showed something of the results of his work. He has also a large quantity of 1st class onions and citrons for sale.

Tom Stinson was a splendid success as a vice-president and assisted Alex. in his work. Tom's garden ranked second in the Best Kept Garden Contest

Fred Ash was kept busy with the pen at the various meetings and has some fine records to account for his work as Secretary.

As treasurer Homer Boriand did his bit.

No mention need be made of the work of the Prize list committee consisting of Ted Outram, Cliff. Ash and Bob Breyfogle, as the splendid list of Prizes below speaks for them.

On Thursday night last week the Garden Club held a Corn Roast in the Boys' Parlor of the Y.M.C.A. when the Prize Winners were announced. Since the prizes have almost all been distributed. Some of the fellows upon receiving their prize money have immediately turned it into the Y.M. C. A. Treasury to renew there memberships for another year.

Through the kind co-operation of several men who have stood by the Garden Club of last year and this year the following competitions were arranged

THE BARRIE COMPETITION

Last year Mr. Thos. Barrie offered $25.00 to be divided into three prizes To the boys producing the most vegetables, fold value, marked prices to govern competition. This year these prizes were repeated.

Last year Mr. Jos. Wearing gave a prize of $5.00 for the greater production among the boys, this year he again placed this prize at the disposal of the Prize Committee.

THE BEST KEPT GARDEN COMPETITION.

The Prizes for the Best Kept Garden plot last year —1st. $3.00, 2nd. $2.00, 3rd $1.00, this year the Committee decided to link up Mr. Barrie's Prize with Mr. Wearing's and put both in the Best Kept Garden competition This was done as the boy that won the first prize in the Barrie Prize usually won first in the Best Kept Garden Competition So the first three prizes in the Best Kept Garden Competition are $12.00, $8.00 and $5.00 donated by Mr. Barrie, the next two $3.00 and $2.00 donated by Mr. Wearing and the remaining 5 of $1.00 $1.00, $1.00, 75c, 75, by Y. M. C. A.

AGRICULTURE SOCIETY PRIZES

Best Collection of 10 vegetables grown personally by the competitor. 1st. $5.00, 2nd. $4.00, 3rd. $3.00, 4th. $1.00.

Sweepstake Specials for the best all round exhibits in the Y.M.C.A. Boy's Garden Competition. number of entries, quality, general display and neatness, etc was considered in award ing prizes 1st $4.00 2nd $3.00 3rd $2.00 4th $1.00

THE OKE COMPETITION

Last year Mr. W. J. Oke donated a gold watch to the boy producing the best bushel of potatoes from seed supplied by him. This year Mr. Oke donated $10.00 to the boys producing the best bushel of potatoes to be divided as 1st $4.00, 2nd. $3.00, 3rd $2.00, 4th $1.00.

HOTEL FIRE IN WASHINGTON WILL BE INVESTIGATED

Vice-President Marshall and Family Had a Narrow Escape.

Canadian Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. — The police and fire officials to-day are investigating the origin of a fire which took place early this morning in the new Willard Hotel, which caused damage estimated at $100,000, and sent hundreds of guests, including Vice-President Marshall, and family, scurrying through the smoke filled corridors to the lobby and safety. Vice-President Marshall, senators, representatives and diplomats, with their families, were among the scantily clad guests who quickly reached the lobby by means of elevators and stairways. The Vice-President, who was aroused from his sleep by Mrs. Marshall, made his way out with her, their baby and nurse, down three flights of stairs. Many of the women were hysterical. The fire originated in a pantry off the main room but was checked before it had spread far. Most of the damage was to the furniture and drapery, and was caused by the smoke and water.

CEREAL COMPANY DOUBLING THEIR MILLING CAPACITY

New Plant is Rapidly Nearing Completion.

The Peterborough Cereal Company, under the direction of Mr. A. J. Meyers, engineer, are nearly doubling their milling capacity at the foot of Simcoe Street. The building, which is nearly completion, is a large red brick four-storey building, directly behind the present mill, and next to the railroad siding which enters the company's premises from the C.P.R. tracks along the river front

In addition, ten large concrete grain elevators are being built immediately in front of the new building. The foundations for four of them are being laid, while the other six elevators have reached the half-way stage. The company contemplates building four more elevators in the spring, making 14 elevators for this rapidly expanding company.

Choir Held a Corn Roast

The Affair Was a Great Success—Lakefield News.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 24.—On Saturday afternon the Sunday School choir of St. John's church held a corn roast in the Sunday School room. The party was to have been out of doors but the uncertain weather made it advisable to hold it inside. The affair was a great success and was under the direction of the leader, Rev. C. Spence.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

On Sunday evening a memorial service was held in the Presbyterian church for Corp. Roland Carter who was killed in action last May. A number of the returned soldiers attended to do honor to their dead comrade and the choir rendered special music. Rev P. J. Jull preached an eloquent sermon which brought home many of the great truths of the war especially that those who are fighting and dying in Europe are doing so for each and everyone of us.

Miss Alice Fisher of Lindsay, was a week end visitor in the village. She was the guest of her cousin, Miss Braden.

Opening Rally This Evening

THE BIGGEST EVENT OF THE YEAR AT THE Y.W.C.A.

In the Green Room of the Y.W. C. A. this evening the biggest event of the "Y" year will be held when the "opening rally" will permit the people to become acquainted. Reverend Mr. Mallott will conduct the opening exercises.

The convenors of committees will outline their plans for the winter season's work after which a musical programme contributed by Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton and Miss Eliott will be given.

During the social hour Edison records will be given with all the most attractive selections loaned by the Greene Music Company.

STUDENTS IN AGRICULTURE.

REGISTRATION IS LARGER THAN EXPECTED—GIRLS AND SOLDIERS IN.

GUELPH, Sept. 24.—When the Ontario Agricultural College opened up for the fall term there were nearly 150 students in attendance at the various classes, which is considerably more than was at first anticipated. The registration of first-year students has been larger than was looked for, and there are between 80 and 90 students in the freshman class. Included in the class are three young women who intend to take the full year's course in agriculture, and also several soldiers who are going into farming as a business. This is the first time that women have been allowed to enter the agricultural course at the college, and also the first time that returned soldiers have taken up the work of scientific farming.

Refrain From Luxuries

Restrict your buying to the plain necessities of life. There is a two-fold reason.

First, "you can't eat your cake and have it, too." If you waste any money on things that you can do without, you will have the less to lend to your country in this hour, when she needs every dollar we can save.

Secondly, to buy luxuries, just now is to hinder the country's war effort. Every time we buy them we are hampering our country.

If they are raw material, we are taking from the market something that is almost certainly needed in some branch of war industry. If they are manuiscturd articles, raw material, needed for war purposes, goes to their production.

Eliminate them. Live simply, sparingly, savingly, self-denyingly. The simple life is the splendid life to-day—the only patriotic life.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

First Punch Decided Two of Papke-Ketchel Bouts

And Each Fighter Scored Win Over the Other.

Billy Papke first mingled with Stanley Ketchel in Milwaukee on June 4, 1908. He lost that battle in the first round, although he stayed the full ten innings. The Illinois Thunderbolt had no sooner entered the ring than the boy from the West sent over his south paw in a terrific punch to the jaw, sending Billy sprawling on the ground. Billy, with a look of surprise in his face, promptly came up again, but the blow had deprived him of all his steam. He slam-banged his way through the remaining nine rounds, but his head was out of commission, and he scarcely knew what he was doing. That slugging match was decidedly Ketchel's bout, but the supporters of the Illinois boy declared he had lost on a fluke and clamored for another chance.

This time, Vernon Cal., was the scene of the battle, and September 7, 1908, was the date. This was Labor Day and a big crowd filled the arena. The middleweight title now clearly rested between Papke and Ketchel and the victor could rightly declare his right to it. Tens of thousands of dollars were wagered on the result. Papke was returned the winner by exactly the same methods that Ketchel had used in Milwaukee. The Illinois boy barely touched Stanley's glove and then sent a hard right to Ketchel's jaw. The "Michigan Assassin" went down like a log and the referee had counted seven before he struggled to his feet. Papke sent over another, and this time Jim Jeffries, who was acting as referee, counted nine before Ketchel was able to stagger up. As Papke had been defeated with the first blow in the first Ketchel-Papke battle, so was Ketchel now given a dose of his own medicine. Like one in a dream Stanley fought on, dogged and determined, smeared with blood and with one eye out of commission. In the twelfth round Jeffries put an end to the slaughter, and Papke became the recognized middleweight champion of the world. He did not long retain the title, for in the following November, at Colma, he was knocked out by Ketchel in the eleventh round.

For a fourth time they met, July 5, 1909, also at Colma, and Ketchel won in 20 rounds. Upon the death of Ketchel, Billy again laid claim to the title, but he had lost his oldtime form and could not come back

Comment on Saturday's Game

The Peterboro Team Is Given a High Rating.

The Toronto Star has the following comment on Saturday's game played here between the Riversides and Hillcrest:

It is a long time since Hillcrest stocked up against such classy pitching as that shown by Howard Kirn, the Peterborough right-hander. He had Hillcrest worried and held them to six hits. If he had received better support Hillcrest might have been playing yet. Kirn had a nice slow breaking curve which he stuck into Hillcrest, and had them guessing. Peterborough have a nifty team and is the best that has invaded Toronto since the 20th Century Club of Hamilton in 1916. If Kirn performs next Saturday at Broadview field like he did at Peterborough, then Hillcrest had better look out. Roy Cherritt, their 17-year-old second baseman, is a finished fielder, and one of the smartest ball players one would wish to see. "Mike" Sheehy, at short, the St. Michael's College boy, is another star, and "Mic" Murray at third shapes up well. Peterborough has a team that should not be overlooked. Murty, their left fielder, made one of the greatest catches ever seen when he speared Spanton's hot drive with his bare hand.

"Cannon Ball" Scott, of Hillcrest, made a real come-back on Saturday at Peterborough, when he held the champion Riversides to one single. A week ago Brown Brass clubbed him for 12 hits, but at Peterborough he showed his old-time form and his speed left the batters breathless. He had Peterborough hitless for six innings. The hit came in the 7th, and was a looping hit back of first base. Scott's performance was just one week late. Scott as a pitcher has a great future, because he is still practically undeveloped.

Hillcrests will have to brace up if they are figuring on staying in the Ontario series. At Peterborough on Saturday, they lacked the old life and pep, for which they are noted. The fight and dash was missing and there was too much fooling on the bench while the game was being played. Probably it was the train ride and the cold weather, but there was something missing on Saturday.

JESS WILLARD ARRIVES.

It has been announced that Jess Willard will join a Tank Battalion for overseas. The heavyweight champion has at last heard the call, and is going across. A good decision albeit somewhat tardy. The public have the notion that fighters, or at least one fighter, should pose at so much per pose, and farm when trouble threatened. He has seen the light.

The public seem to demand that everybody do something towards saving democracy. There is a great demand for production.

Help some farmer plough more land this fall than he ever did. It's a bit worth mentioning.

A BATTLE STORY FROM FRANCE

(By Captain R. F. W. Rees).

"Yes," said an officer of the London Regiment who was lying in bed with his head camouflaged in bandages, "we called it Happy Valley. I imagine the Boche had quite a different name for it."

"They fought stubbornly enough to hold it against us, and their losses must have been enormous. One attack they put up was so fierce and determined that we had to fall back for a time; but it was only a momentary check, and we soon recovered our position, and had them running like rabbits.

"They had a huge number of machine guns against us—as a matter of fact, it was a standing joke with our men that there was a machine gun to every Jerry. They had strong points scattered about all over the place. They took some scuppering, I can tell you—but it would have been a jolly sight worse if his morale had been anything like strong. Most of them put up their hands as soon as we got anywhere really near them, and they didn't even trouble to put their guns out of action; so we simply manned them and turned them on the other Germans who were running away. One of my lance-corporals took five guns off his own bat!

We collared something like five hundred prisoners, I think. I wasn't there at the end, when the count was taken. You see, there was a cunningly-sited strong-point holding up one flank of our attack, and it was my job to put it out of action. It was so situated that it was practically impossible to approach it under any sort of cover, so the job was a long one. I'd just discovered a fold in the ground that would keep up pretty safe for a hundred yards or so, and was getting along to it when something like a sledge-hammer hit me near the right temple, and I knew nothing more, until I came to at the field ambulance nine hours later. A bullet—a near thing, for if it had been just a fraction of an inch to the left I should not have come to at all!"

"The show in which I got mine," said a machine gun corps fellow, "was one of the cheeriest little fights you ever saw. The Emma Gees came into their own that day with a vengeance. Our first good target was a party of Boche pioneers, who were merrily demolishing one of our railway sidings. They were not expecting us; and you never saw such surprised Germans as they were when we opened fire. It didn't take the survivors long to Kamarad!

"After that we went for bigger game. Our luck was dead in. We engaged at eight hundred yards, a whizz-bang battery that was working fairly useful havoc on our troops, and we silenced it in about three minutes. Then we sent back word to our gunners, and they took a hand in the game and put that battery out of action for good and all. The Boche was abandoning his machine guns pretty freely, so from time to time we sent on skeleton teams to man them, and speeded the parting guest with some of his own .303.

"One of our section commanders had a brain wave pust then. He spotted a valley down which the retreating enemy would have to pass, and he enfiladed it with four guns, and sat down and waited. Sure enough, presently the valley began to fill up with Boches, who were in a very evident hurry. He waited until he thought there were sufficient present to commence operations on, and then he opened fire. It was an absolutely perfect surprise packet. Hundreds of them were killed—I almost said thousands, but you might think I was exaggerating. When at last they managed to get the valley clear, you can bet all you like that the right-of-way at that particular spot was especially Verboten!

"The arrangements were perfect. We had armourers' shops close up behind the firing line, and what repairs were necessary were carried out with a minimum of delay. That increased our effectiveness enormously.

"In our part of the line English and Australian airmen carried out a very pretty daylight raid on a Boche aerodrome. The surprise was perfect. They met with very little opposition because the enemy was absolutely demoralised, and was thinking of nothing but how to get away as quickly as possible. Bombs were dropped on all the hangars, and most of the machines were destroyed. All the ground defences were demolished. Our fellows flew very low, and made the best use of their machine guns. When they had finished with the aerodrome they still had an appetite for work, and so they turned their attentions to other things. A large body of cavalry saw them coming, and stood not upon the order of their going but turned tail and went at once, at full gallop. But a horse is not much good when you are trying to get away from a 'plane, and I should say that what was left of that cavalry wouldn't fetch much at a jumble sale!

"There was a staff car coming along the road, and one of our chaps chivvied it until it overturned in a ditch, and the German staff was the poorer of two of its officers. That started the traffic-baiting game. For half an hour the roads were swept by machine gun fire, transport was held up, trains brought to a stand-still, and the whole of the traffic was utterly disorganized and demoralized. The roads were blocked up with dead horses and overturned wagons. When our fellows had had enough of it they sailed peacefully home. It was one of the most daring and most successful air raids we have ever made—and we did not lose a single machine!

"Another smart bit of work was carried out by airmen and cavalry working together. The airmen located a train of Boche reinforcements, bombed it, and brought it to a standstill. Then the cavalry galloped along and rounded up the reinforcements in double quick time. We got the whole train load, and it was a pretty good haul, although they were a miserable lot.

"Yes, things are happening over there just now. Jerry is beginning to wish he'd never been born. We've got him on the run, and we're going to keep him running.

Canadian Losses Since August 8th

25,000 Names Reported to Record Branch at Ottawa.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.— The total of Canadian casualties reported to the Record Branch here since the Canadians entered the big offensive August 8th, is 25,000.

No analysis has yet been prepared of the casualties by classes, but it is estimated that approximately one-quarter of the total were killed or died of wounds, compared with the results achieved and the magnitude of the offensive the total of casualties is the lightest since the Canadians got into the heavy fighting in April of 1915.

PROGRAMME FOR THE REMAINDER OF THE WEEK.

Patrons of the Grand Opera House were delighted with the class of "movies' which comprised last evening's show. The feature film by J. Warren Kerrigan, the "Turn of the Card,' in seven reels, was a heart-gripping drama, which certainly enhanced the reputation of that great director, Kerrigan. The Pathe news, showing the latest events of the week, was also shown.

"Doughnuts," a screaming comedy, in two reels, by Billy West, was one of those that reminds you of that old adage, "Laugh and Grow Fat."

Bush and Bush, in their vaudeville act, were "exceedingly clever" with their magical mandolin and banjo accompanied by the whistling novelty, which won tremendous applause. The same performance is looked for this evening. Thursday and Friday those old favorites of moviedom will be at the Grand, Francis X. Bushman and Beverley Bayne featuring "With Neatness and Despatch." Henry Savage's "Have a Heart,' will be seen to-morrow evening, followed by "The Million Dollar Doll," Saturday evening.

SERMONS FOR MARRIED AND UNMARRIED MEN

The mission for men at St. Peter's Cathedral tonight will be only for married men and will be addressed by Rev. Father McLaughlin. The unmarried men will meet at St. Alphonsus Lyceum where the regular mission sermon will be preached by Rev. Father McBrearty. Both services begin at 7.30 o'clock. The mission masses are at 5 a.m. and 8 a.m.

WILL USE NITROGEN LAMPS

BRANTFORD, Sept. 23—The Brantford Hydro Board have decided upon lamps for the down-town street lighting, replacing the carbon lamps, which for maintenance and renewal have been found too expensive. It is claimed that there will be no diminuation in the lighting supplied the business section by the change. Winnipeg city has offered to purchase the old lights.

Begins Sixth Year as Bishop To-day

Bishop O'Brien is Remembered on Occasion of Fifth Anniversary.

Today is the fifth anniversary of the consecration of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. On account of the mission for men at the Cathedral, the occasion was not celebrated with the usual Pontifical High mass. This afternoon at 4 o'clock, however, the school children assembled at the Cathedral for benediction, Bishop O'Brien officiating. Monsignor Casey of Lindsay, and Rev. T. J. Sullivan of Port Hope, were visitors at the Bishop's residence today.

SHIPBUILDERS WANT INCREASE IN WAGES

Matter Has Been Submitted o the Government.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.— Pacific coast shipbuilders working on government contracts are seeking a revised schedule of prices from the Minister of Marine in view of increased wage rates allowed on the Pacific coast since the original contracts were entered into. The United States' Government has fixed wages for shipbuilding at Seattle and other points on the coast and these new rates are higher than the rates allowed at Vancouver, Victoria or other Canadian shipbuilding centres on the Pacific. To meet the new conditions and preserve the labour supply the Canadian builders claim they will also have to advance wages, and unless the government advances prices to the contractors accordingly, they say they will be building ships at a loss. The question is to be taken up at a conference here next week with the Hon. C. C. Ballantyne.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

FARM NOT WORKED DURING WHOLE SUMMER

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 24.—Charles Pope, aged fifty-two, who lives on a farm near Lorraine, was before Magistrate Greenwood, charged with being a loafer. The Chief of Police told the court he had visited Pope's farm of 70 or 80 acres and found that no work had been done all summer. The place was growing in weeds, no crops had been gathered, and no waggons or implements had been used. Pope claimed to have been working at his trade in Quebec last winter, but claimed to be physically incapacitated. He was given a week in which to put in medical evidence. Next Tuesday night Pope will be charged with not having registered on June 22. The penalty for non-registration is $10 a day for every day from registration day to the time of conviction.

MUST PAY THE PRICE

(New York Sun)

The hour of dawning victory will assuredly not be the one in which the blood-guilty conspirators of 1914 will be allowed to redeem themselves cheaply from the disaster to inflict up on the rest of the world. Peace they can have when they are ready for it; but they must pay the price—in full!

PICTURES OF NOTED GENERALS
The local Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire has secured a few copies of the originals of General Pershing and Marshal Joffre, which are at present in the Kent Drug Co. window. The copies are in colour, showing General Pershing in his field khaki and Marshal Joffre in picturesque red trousers, blue coat and the gold-braided cap. The originals are by Latove, of New York, a celebrated French artist, whose paintings of modern war leaders have earned the approbation of the art critics of the western hemisphere. The copies are not merely prints, but are a result of a new process known only by Latove. They "stand out" like oil paintings and would deceive the most practised eye. The originals were shown at the Toronto Exhibition and excited much comment. The copies are about eight inches high and four inches wide. The proceeds are in aid of the war work carried on by the I.O.D.E.

WEDDING BELLS

ANDERSON—ALLEN
A very pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, Sept. 11th, at St. Mary's Church Maple Creek, Sask., when Miss Veronica Irene Allen became the bride of Mr. Thomas K. Anderson of Tompkins, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father O. Hurst, of Maple Creek. The bride was dressed in white satin with an overdress of silk net trimmed with pearls and wore a tulle veil with wreath of orange blossoms. The bridal party took their wedding breakfast at Maple Creek and then motored to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Ralph Byrne where dinner was served to eighty guests and was followed by dancing. The bride and groom left for a short wedding trip and will be at home to their friends at Tompkins, Sask., after October 1st.

Hindenburg Rushes Up Fresh Shock Troops to Line Opposite Americans

Prisoners Say in Lorraine These Men Have Been Rested Up for the Attack—Settlers Trek Back to Towns U. S. Freed—German Officers Reprimanded Because Huns Are Not Destructive Enough on Retreat.

WITH THE CANADIAN ARMY IN LORRAINE, Sept 25.—Several prisoners from the Eighty-seventh German Division were captured last night by an American patrol west of Vandieres. This division had been in the line in the sector only a few days. It is one of the German crack divisions and was marched into this area from the quiet sector west of Rheims, where it had been resting.

The prisoners said the Eighty-seventh would have been sent opposite the Americans sooner but that it had been well shot to pieces on other fronts including that north of the Marne, during the German retreat, and had been compelled to await some replacements which had been long in coming.

Advancing Columns Thrown Into Panic

An American officer visited an observation post during the day, yesterday, and while he was there the observer saw a movement of troops on the crossroads, west of Moselle. The Germans were moving southward. The officer took charge of the situation by telephoning the artillery, which responded promptly. The gunners opened up on the crossroads just as two enemy squads had reached that point.

Through powerful glasses the officer saw the shot take effect, killing some of the enemy and wounding others. Great confusion followed and after the artillerymen had fired on the crossroads and the region near by for ten minutes, the troop movement towards the American lines ceased The crossroads were not used during the remainder of the day yesterday.

Continued rain, which transformed everything at the front into a bog, making the troop movements difficult and transport almost impossible, slowed down the activities today. There was scarcely a movement on the ground, not even a patrol movement being recorded.

Streaming Back to St. Mihiel Homes

Although it is only a week since the Franco-American forces delivered the St. Mihiel salient, with its more than one hundred and fifty miles, from possesssion of the enemy, a slender stream of old time inhabitants of the region already has begun to flow into the liberated territory.

The stream is a slender one, because the people who originally fled before the German advance have been gone for more than four years and many of them had formed new ties and associations, but every day sees several truck loads of peasants or of dwellers in the towns and villages of the southern section of the salient returning to search for their old homes.

There are, of course, many towns in the old salient, especially in the southerly portion which may never receive their original inhabitants again to any extent, while there are many others that cannot yet be reinhabited for military reasons. Well nigh countless villages are today leveled ruins, for they have stood in the path of the bombardment from both sides and hardly a wall of the one time houses in now standing. Still other places, notably St. Mihiel, are still habitable and to them the old dwellers are slowly working back, overjoyed at the deliverance of their home sites.

Machine Gun Nest Beneath Cross

In a cemetry near Limey, just within the German lines previous to the attack on Sept 12, American troops have discovered German machine gun nests beneath the concrete pedestal of a large cross. The Germans had dug in along the centre of the foundation and constructed machine gun positions at three places facing towards the French lines. The cemetery is on a hill commanding a view of the country to the south, and the Germans assumed that if an attack were made the cemetery would not be subjected to artillery fire.

When the Franco-American offensive started the Germans held the machine gun nests in the cemetery as long as possible, but were compelled to retreat in haste before they could use the guns. So hurried was the enemy retirement that several machine guns were found in the cemetery by the Americans. The cemetery was not hit by shells and the cross still stands.

Cemetery Filled With Iron Crosses

Speculation is rife in the American army as to what will be the disposition of the German graveyard found just northeast of St. Mihiel on the Vigneulles road and which through eloquent testimony to German regard and honor for their dead, may easily be considered offensive to the French.

The chief reason for this is that all the German graves have been surmounted by elaborate marble or granite headstones, bearing prominently, the Iron Cross and eulogistic inscriptions concerning the heroic deaths of the invaders. There are some thirty graves in all, and each of them has over it a large stone, except six, which have wooden crosses.

The cemetery is the burial place of members of the Thirteenth Royal Bavarian infantry regiment who were killed during their occupation of the St. Mihiel salient. It is quite as showy and pretentious as the other German cemeteries at the front. At the entrance is a huge cross which betokens the spot as "the hero cemetery of the Bavarian Thirteenth infantry regiment." A large stone lion on a high pedestal glares at all who approach.

The showiest monument is a huge slab, erected to the memory of Artilleryman Luitpold Schalter. It bears an Iron Cross five feet high.

Ordered to Outhun the Hun

German troops recently were ordered to be more methodical in the destruction of property in the regions evacuated by them. An order from the commander of the 108th infantry brigade to the rear guards dated Sept 3, says:

"A recent army order demands that we proceed in the future with more method and less haste in the destruction of indicated property. The divisions have already been notified that they will be held responsible for buildings not destroyed in their areas. In consequence all preparation should be made for firing (straw collected, &c.)

"Lieut. Krause with his platoon already has received special orders regarding the destruction of certain localities. He is to destroy the northern section of Commenchon, Ugny-le-Gay, Villequier-Aumont, Le Calsnel, Faillsuel, Freires-Faillsuel and the roads joining them with Mennessia, as well as the bridges on the roads west.

"All soldiers are bound to assist to the best of their ability in the execution of this mission. The rear guard battalions will select groups to complete the work of destruction. These detachments will not set fire to things until the right moment. It will be remembered that there are means to defile all wells. Mines must not be exploded too soon."

The villages mentioned in the above order are west of La Fere and are now held by the French. They were given up by the Germans in their retirement from Ham, early in September

Dominion Rubber System Belting Insures Maximum Service

Dominion Rubber System Belts are built to a scientific quality standard which insures the proper width, thickness and type of construction to efficiently serve a given purpose.

The layers of strong endless fabric are saturated and embedded in special rubber which gives a toughness that is practically indestructible.

Its rubber surfacing has a tested pulley grip greater than that of any other belt made, hence it allows minimum power leakage.

Where water, acids, oils, dust, grit, belt-shifters, etc., soon ruin ordinary belting, there is a type of Dominion Rubber System Belting that will withstand the severest punishment and eliminate many replacements and delays.

The largest users of belting in Canada have proved the value and efficiency of our belting in actual service and through the special free service of our belting experts, have cut costs and speeded up production.

This free technical service is yours to command whether you are a customer or not and it opens the door to the entire facilities of the largest rubber organization in Canada with a fifty year record for producing dependable products.

If your belting problems need emergency service, phone or wire our nearest branch.

Many Biblical Towns Are Being Freed by the British

Many Places Intimately Associated With Christ's Life Wrested From Turks—Nazareth is Taken—Nabulus and Samaria, From Which Drive Converged, are Ancient Towns.

General Allenbury's drive in Palestine has freed many towns and villages, famous in Biblical history from Turkish oppression. Among the more important places now in British hands is the little city of Nazareth, which is associated with the early years of Christ's life and it was here that some of the miracles which proclaimed him the Son of God were wrought.

Nazareth is the most ancient and historical Bibical town in the whole sector captured. Standing as it does on the declevity in a region of great picturesqueness, it is now free from Turk rule and its sanctity will be preserved. The city has a population of 11,000, the most of whom are Christians. Its principal edifice is the Latin convent with a richly decorated church The church is reputed to be on the site which was the scene of the annunciation and where the house of the Virgin stood Nazareth also looks down upon aNin,which is the modern Nein. It was at the latter village that the miracle of raising the widow's son was performed.

Near Samaritan Centre

Nabulus is the city from which Allenby's drive converged along the Nabulus-Jerusalem road, sweeping Turks into the arms of the British cavalry operating southwards from Jenin and Beisan. It is 33 miles almost due north of Jerusalem and is situated in a narrow smiling valley between Mounts Ebal and Gerizim. The leading industry is the making of soap in which large quantitites of olive oil is consumed. There is an active trade with Jaffa and the region east of the Jordan. Nabulus is the capital of a sanjak in the vilayet of Beirut and is the seat of a Greek bishop. The population is 25,000, but a small fraction of whom are Christians. The city is near the site of the ancient Shechem, in the pre-Christ times the centre of the Samaritans, and there is a quarter in the town inhabited by their descendants. In the first century A.D. the place received the name of Neapolis, whence the modern name is derived. Near the town is the so-called Jacob's well.

Near River Jordan

Beisan (Bethshean) is a small town near the Jordan River, 55 miles northeast of Jerusalem, and it was here, as in Jenin that the Turks were caught in the rear of the British cavalry, with annihilating results The town is famous for its acropolis, columns and excavated tombs.

Jenin (Ginaea), which was a Waterloo for the Turks is situated 17 miles northeast of Nabulus and has a population of about 1,300. Although small it is an educational centre of the district and has several imposing mosques and schools.

Estrallon (Jezreel) which is in the centre of territory freed by the British victories was the ancient battle-ground of Palestine. It was at Mount Gilboa, nearby, that Saul and his sons were killed in battle with the Philistines.

Samaria, (Hebrew Shomron), on the line now reached by the British, is an ancient city of Palestine, 38 miles north of Jerusalem. It was made the capital of the Kingdom of Israel in the early part of the ninth century B.C., and remained such until about 722 B.C., when the Assyrians took it and put an end to the kingdom. Shortly before the beginning of the Christian era, Samaria, which had been destroyed by John Hyrcanus, was rebuilt by Herod the Great, receiving the name of Sebaste. The village of Sebastyeh is on its site. Near the village are the interesting ruins of the ancient church of St. John.

COAL OUTPUT IS LOWERED

OBSERVANCE OF LABOR DAY ACROSS BORDER CHIEF CONTRIBUTORY CAUSE.

NEW YORK Sept. 23.—The Coal Age, in its weekly review of the coal situation, says:—

"As was to be expected, the observance of the Labor Day holiday throughout the mining regions cut into the productions of both anthracite and bituminous coal during the week ended September 7th. Bituminous output totalled 11,249,000 net tons for the week (5 1-3 days), while the anthracite shipments for the same period amounted to 1,617,579 net tons.

"It should be recorded, however, that the miners at quite a few operations made up for the holiday by working extra time the Saturday preceding and another fact which should be emphasized is that the percentage of absenteeism the day following the holiday was negligible. Appeals to the miners for more regular working time are undoubtedly having their effect.

"Bituminous coal output is now approximately 17,030,000 net tons behind schedule, and production for the rest of the coal year must be maintained at the rate of 2,041,000 net tons a day if the deficit is to be made up. The car supply is now excellent however, and the bituminous mines have everything in their favor for a drive on greater output. Anthracite production for the coal year to date is estimated at 45,645,597 net tons, which is an increase of 1,084,000 net tons over the same period of last year.

"Market conditions present no radical changes. The Fuel Administration has the distribution and allotment of all grades of coal well under control, and a determined effort is being made to supply the northwest before navigation on the lakes closes for the season. Dealers have many unfilled orders on their books, but the total quantity of coal delivered to domestic consumers to date is far greater than was true at this time last year. Conservation, diligently practised, will be necessary, however, to avert a fuel shortage this winter."

CREATE A LARGE CREDIT BY A SMALL DEPOSIT

When you take out a life insurance policy you are making the biggest bank deposit you ever made at one time. Did you ever put $5,000 through the receiving teller's window and say, "Credit that to my account?" Well, when you pay the first premium on a life insurance policy for that amount, you are really paying the first instalment on your new bank account. You have actually provided that entire sum—against the day that is coming to you some time—the one on which you will never get an extension of time. That is banking in a new sense and banking with common sense and foresight.

Why not arrange for this Deposit with the Sun Life Assurance Company, the largest Canadian Life Assurance Company—Assets exceed $89,000,000.

You Need More Than A Laxative

To correct constipation, all organs of digestion and elimination should be helped. Try NR and see how much better you feel.

NR Today—Keeps the Doctor Away

To live and be healthy, your body mechanism must properly digest your food, extract all the nourishment from it and promptly throw off the waste that is left. This is accomplished by the processes of digestion, assimilation and elimination—the work of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

The failure of any of the vital organs to do its work properly affects the action of all the others. A forced bowel movement does not help constipation; it only relieves for a few hours the condition that constipation brings about.

Now if you are used to taking so-called laxative pills, oil, purgatives and the like, you know mighty well you've got to be taking them all the time. Moreover, if you stick to any one laxative, you've got to be increasing the dose all the time. That can do you a lot of harm.

Stop dosing yourself with such things just long enough to give Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) a trial, and let the results show the difference. NR Tablets are not mere bowel movers, their purpose is to correct the condition that induces constipation and give you real, genuine, lasting benefit: to improve your digestion and assimilation, give you a good hearty appetite, regulate your liver and bowels, tone up kidney action and give your poison-clogged body a good cleaning out.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is not harsh; it is mild, easy, pleasant in action; no griping or pain ever follows its use; but it is thorough and sure.

By its action on the digestive organs it promotes assimilation, which means extraction of full nourishment from your food, and thereby gives you new strength, energy, better blood, better appetite. By toning, not stirring your lazy liver, NR sends bile into the intestines, improving intestinal digestion. Lastly, by gently encouraging more vigorous bowel and kidney action, NR drives poisonous impurities out of and cleans up your body.

Try Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and just see how much better you feel in every way. Get a 25c box today and take one each night for a week. You'll say you never felt better in your life. NR is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

You Who Throw Oil Upon Troubled Waters Are Helped As Much As Those Whose Misfortune You Seek to Lessen. Besides It's Fine, Says Fern Howard.

Two women were standing, one behind the other, at a ticket window of a suburban railroad office. One was purchasing a ticket. The second was searching in her purse for the amount of her fare, and restlessly awaiting her turn.

Suddenly she found the amount she wanted. She held it up within view of the girl inside the window, who was just beginning to count the change for the first woman's ticket.

"Here!" she cried impatiently, waving the money in the air, "I want a ticket for fiftieth street. And I don't want to miss my train."

She tossed the money under the ticket window and held out a nervous hand. "And hurry with the ticket," she commanded.

The girl inside the ticket window frowned irritably, made a mistake in counting the first woman's change, and began to count it again. It was the end of the day and she was tired.

The first woman observed and understood the girl's nervousness, and with a kind smile stepped back.

"I can't go until the train goes," she said kindly, "and there's plenty of time. I will wait."

"Thank you," said the girl inside the ticket window. "You are very kind."

The second woman apologized and hurried away. She had been guilty of conduct unbecoming a lady, and she knew it. She had been given her way, but she had also been given a lesson in good manners. The knowledge was not conducive to self-complacency and she had no desire to loiter upon the scene.

But a frail, tired, nervous girl had been helped through a trying moment. And all because a kind-hearted woman had acted up to the best in her nature. At slight cost to herself, she had shown kindness to one who was much in need of a kind word.

I watched this obliging woman, as she went her way with a smiling face, happy in having done a kind act. And I went my way, resolving to imitate her example whenever an opportunity arose.

For it is true that you who throw oil upon troubled waters are helped as much as those to whom you administer. Do you know the warm glow of happiness which follows an act of love? At twilight the mother fondles her rebellious child, knowing that he is not himself, in his tired state.

And you who are peacemakers are not only soothing the tired big-children of the world, but are, as well, developing in yourselves a loving, throbbing, mother-heart which will flood you with the joy of living.

GREAT SEA OF WHEAT

ONE OF THE FRUITS OF CONTROL OF THE SACRAMENTO'S FLOODS

A sea of wheat replacing a sea of water, twenty-thousand acres in one tract bringing forth the cereal of which Uncle Sam and his allies in the world war are in such great need, is a transformation accomplished on what was overflowed land, near Sacramento.

The huge tract formerly covered with the flood waters of the Sacramento and the American rivers lies in a fertile basin of some sixty-odd thousand acres, most of which has been reclaimed and turned to agriculture through the efforts to the Federal and State Government, at the cost of millions of dollars.

The reclamation of this land in permanent fashion was made possible by the progress of the Sacramento River flood control project, which, after indorsement by Congress and the California Legislature, is being steadily pushed to completion by the Federal authorities, the California Debris Commission, on one hand, and the State authorities, the Reclamation Board, on theother. The project eventually will cost about $42,000,000 and is designed to take care of the floods of the Sacramento River; these amount to five times as much as the river channel can carry. TThe inter-river channel can carry. The interflood control are so intermingled that it is necessary to adopt a plan which will provide for all three.

The partial completion of the big project, with its accompanying putting to use of the reclaimed land, indicates in a measure what the final results will be. This one great tract of 20,000 acres, a solid ocean of wheat, is one of the largest, if not the greatest, American fields grown to this grain.—Hartford Times.

INDIANS ROBBED CAPTAIN

NAPLES, Sept. 24.—A half-drowned, unconscious man rescued from the bay declares he is Captain Frantz Hamerlon, of New York, a member of the American mercantile marine. He says three East Indians boarded his launch off Marguellina, strangled and robbed him, then threw him overboard. The East Indians were arrested.

"TELL THEM I HAVE DONE MY DUTY"

Roddy Lemieux Sends Message to Mother He Had Done a Man's Part.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, formerly Postmaster-General in the Laurier Government, whose son "Roddy," was killed in action on the 29th of August last, has received from the chaplain of the regiment, Capt. J. J. Desjardins, a letter describing the son's last moments. The letter says in part:

"On the 28th inst. August Roddy went over the top, and was encouraging his men to the attack, when he was struck by a bullet in the abdomen. The surgeon declared the wound fatal. On the 29th the last rites of the church were administered, and his last words were 'Dites-leur que j'ai fait mon devoir' (tell them I did my duty). To the nurses he said 'Give Mother my love. Tell her I have done a man's part.'"

THE SUPPLY OF GAS AGAIN CAVE OUT

LIGHTS WENT OFF AT 10 P.M. THURSDAY.—GAS ON AGAIN AT 9 A. M. FRIDAY.

KINGSTON, Sept. 21.—Just before ten o'clock on Thursday night the gas lights in the city began to dwindle and within half an hour there was not even a smell of the illuminant. Shortage of gas was, of course, the reason for the discontinuance of the supply. The great demand for it, the restricted storage space resulting from the delay in the erection of a new tank and the limited facilities for production are the causes of the shortage. All Thursday night and up to nine o'clock on Friday morning a reserve supply of gas was built up which is expected to last for about a week. In the meantime every possible means of conservation must be taken.

WILL GET HER FILL.

Germany, Which Initiated Use of Poison Gas in War, Will Be Sorry.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—Prediction that Germany, which initiated the use of poison gas in warfare, "will have more than her fill of it in the next twelve months," was made in an address at the opening of the National Exposition of Chemical Industries here to-night by Charles N. Herty, chairman of the Advisory Committee. He declared that "the great army which we are now hurrying to Europe will be abundantly supplied."

The use of gas masks was demonstrated under the supervision of Major Breithut of the Chemical Wartare Service. Aniline dyes, for which the United States was largely dependent upon Germany until four years ago, were exhibited in many shades, as a result of the work of American chemists. Many other exhibits from all parts of this country and from Canada were also shown.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

28d-70 J. H. BURNHAM.

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

15,000,000 MEN

JUDGE LINDSAY SAYS U. S. SHOULD SUPPLY THIS NUMBER

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—If the United States had been able to send more men to Italy, Austria could have been put out of the war last summer, declared Judge Ben Lindsay of Denver, who described in an address here his recent visit to the fighting front.

Asserting that "nearly 1,000,000 sons of Britain have 'gone west' forever," he declared that "if we do our share as fully as Britain we will not stop until we have put in 15,000,000 men."

Twenty Thousand Firms Rely Upon Us

There is not much about our business to fire public imagination. Most people are unaware of our existence.

Yet if the manufacture of Dodge Transmission Machinery were to cease it would seriously hamper Canadian industry for a while, because Dodge Power Transmission Machinery is fundamental to our industrial life.

Whether it be a small print shop or a terminal elevator—a small laundry or a big flour mill—a little machine shop or a great munitions plant—some twenty thousand firms in all, depend upon us to some extent for their Power Transmission Equipment.

Think what it would mean to them if we stopped production.

By affecting them it would adversely react upon every wage earner in the country.

This responsibility is ever present with us. The thought of it has shaped and guided our policy for 32 years. We admit it has paid us, for to-day we rank among the largest manufacturers of Power Transmission Machinery. And it is a matter of industrial pride with us to stay in this position.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Strike of the John Kelly Local

By James Gardner Sanderson

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

Annie raised her hand menacingly, but the quick duck and upward fending swing of Johnny's arm failed to follow. Instead of this usual maneuver, her son caught the hand and held it, looking angrily and fearlessly into her eyes. Annie gasped in bewilderment and struggled weakly. The significance of the resistance became suddenly clear, and she cast herself into the low chair beside the window.

"Wurra!" she sobbed. "Wurra! Oh, Johnny! Oh, Johnny boy!"

She rocked her body to and fro, and the wails lost nothing in volume by reason of the apron over her head. Her son eyed her in disfavor.

"Aw, cut it out," he muttered uneasily. "I'm thirteen and big enough to be me own boss, I guess!"

"Kapin' company wid a cross-eyed girl in Oliver Street!" interjected Annie sharply.

"She ain't cross-eyed!"

"You'd ought to be glad of th' good home I've give ye since your father died. God have mercy on his sowl! It's not a'ther cross-eyed girls he'd be goin', neither," wailed Annie.

"She ain't cross-eyed!" snarled Johnny, stung by the repetition. "If I likes a girl I likes her, and it's not even me mother's business, understand?"

"Me wid my rheumatismatics! Many's th' time I've stood in th' snow earnin' a living to support you! If I was many th' mother, I'd bat you across th' face for talking back t' me," reproached Annie.

"You'd only bat me once, then," retorted Johnny stoutly.

Mrs. Kelly's grief broke forth afresh. Her son surveyed her sullenly and reached for his hat.

"I'm goin' out," he remarked.

Mrs. Kelly gave no sign of having heard.

"I'm goin' down to Oliver street," he added tauntingly.

Then Mrs. Kelly removed the apron. "You go down to Oliver street and you can stay there," she said, trembling.

"All right," replied Johnny. "I'll stay there! And you can be getting some one else to help sell your papers," he added shrilly. "I won't!"

The slam of the door closed the discussion, and Mrs. Kelly sat by the window alone. The fountain of tears evaporated swiftly in the heat of her gathering wrath.

"Shtruck, has he?" she muttered aloud to the silent room. "Readin' thim coal mine stories, it's like. And he'd be lavin' me f'r a red-headed hussy—th' divil sind her joy of him! All right, let 'm! I'll not take 'm back, not f'r Prisident O'Roosevelt and th' whole crowd of arbitraries. I know me business!"

With the final sentence Mrs. Kelly rose and set about her evening's work. The vigor with which she banged the iron fryin'-pan upon the table beside the kitchen sink spoke volumes for the earnestness of her resolve.

"Me wurrkin' me hands to th' bone an' him lettin' me! It's on a grating he can sleep this night," she said savagely, at the end of two hours of unassisted toil.

As she flounced from the kitchen, outraged motherhood caused her to lock the door viciously, and to indulge in the hope that the autumn night might be cold.

During all the following day Annie stood at her post in front of one of the newspaper buildings on Park Row. Annie had been selling papers at this particular stand for more than ten years, and in the crowds streaming to and from the bridge there were dozens whose days would not have been fully begun or ended without a cheery word and a hurried purchase as they paused before her. And usually as cheery a word had been tossed back to them. On, but one occasion—when Johnny, as a baby, lay very ill with diphtheria—could her customers recall such depression.

It chanced that one of the oldest, who remembered, and who now noticed Johnny's absence, made inquiries.

"Better arbitrate it," he said gravely. "Seems the only way to do business nowadays." Then he dashed around the corner for a trolley car.

Johnny remained obdurate, and in the tenement on Cherry Hill dust gathered for three days upon his bed. Mrs. Kelly ate desolate breakfasts and did all the work. At dusk on the third day she followed an insistent impulse and went for a little walk. Totally oblivious footsteps carried her stout and rotund figure down into Oliver street. She happened to notice the cross-eyed girl sitting on her doorstep in close and unabashed converse with a boy who was not Johnny. Shortly afterwards she returned home, and the haste with which she opened the door meant hope as plainly as the subsequent look in her old eyes meant disappointment. The room was still empty.

At the moment in which she plodded uneasily to her work on the next morning, Johnny crawled forlornly from a packing-box in a Thirty-first street area, and denounced upper Broadway vigorously. He was hungry and business was bad.

Towards four in the afternoon he shifted his bundle of unsold papers under his arm and despairingly caught on behind a truck that was rattling towards the Battery. As he swung off at the city hall his heart grew suddenly light, and he ran across the park in elation. At the foot of the city hall steps he sprang with a joyous whoop upon the back of an acquaintance who, in company with a group of other newsboys, was beguiling the tedium of the afternoon's slack hours by pitching pennies. The acquaintance leaped to his feet and mixed things until a policeman scattered the ring.

On native soil the lifeless insipidity of upper Broadway fell rapidly into the dim recesses of memory, and Johnny heaved a sigh of relief.

By six o'clock he had dodged guiltily into Park Row to get the extras, catching a glimpse, on his way, of his mother's back as she stood in her regular place and cried her wares. There was something about the lines of her figure which made Johnny uncomfortable, but he ducked behind the nearby Franklin statue and commenced business hurriedly.

From time to time he peeped around Ben Franklin. He noticed the tactics of the piratical outsiders as they boarded Annie's customers, and his blood boiled over. When restraint ceased to be a possibility, and while his mother's attention was engaged, he crept up behind the intruders and cuffed one of them soundly. The others fled, and it was noised swiftly abroad that Johnny had returned to his own.

Mrs. Kelly got the news at last, and an absurd wave of something shot from her ankles to the top of her head, leaving her trembling and weak, but happier than she had been for three days. A wisp of iron-gray hair falling over her eyes caught a drop that trickled down the side of her weather-beaten nose, and two customers each bore away a cent too much in change before she discovered its blinding influence.

When greater self-possession came she hastened asthmatically to a spot from which she might catch an occasional glimpse of Johnny. Because he looked dejected, her heart smote her, and she sent out newsgirl scouts to see how many papers he was getting rid of.

Johnny, after cuffing his mother's competitors, went back to the Franklin statue and tried to shout "Extra!" In an overwhelming rush of emotion his voice choked. He counted up his day's receipts, and drew his coat sleeve across his nose as he found that his profits amounted to but twenty-seven cents. The image of the half dollar which his mother had presented to him every night rose swimmingly before his eyes when he gazed miserably into space and thought of supper time.

"Hey, kid," he called to another newsboy in wistful bravado, "ask me mother if she's goin' t' lock me outer the house tonight."

"I don't want to ax her," replied the boy. "She might soak me. Dere's me sister talkin' to her; w'en dey breaks away I'll ax her to ax her."

Meanwhile Annie was grimly requesting the little newsgirl to ask her Johnny how long he intended to stay on strike.

"I don't want to ax him. He might swat me. I'll ax me brudder to ax him," said the girl.

The two negotiators met, and leaning on the subway fence, talked for a moment or two in whispers, while two pairs of eyes, old and young, watched them in anxious suspense.

"Sure!" said the little boy. "I'll bring up him an' you get Annie an' we'll make 'em shake. We'll be the arbitrators' commission, an' what settles strikes."

"Sure," echoed the little girl.

Annie furtively wiped away a tear upon her apron. Johnny surreptitiously fell back again upon his sleeve. Then mother and son shook hands.

"You fool you!" said Annie.

"As much as that?" asked Johnny, ducking and fending, as a matter of course, the swing of Annie's palm which followed.

Then they backed up to Annie's place beside the wall and threw their stocks together.

"D'ye need any Wall street Newses?" asked Johnny.

"D'ye want yer supper money?" asked Annie.

"Yeh," they answered in chorus; and at the cheerful note in their cries of "Extra!" a customer here and there in the hurrying crowd paused, looked backward, and smiled.

RECEIVING WAR CROSS

The patriotic spirit and devotion with which Canadian women have so far performed war-service work and made sacrifices has never been equalled in the history of any country. Mothers, wives and sisters support this burden with strength and fortitude. But those who are already miserable from the complaints and weaknesses which are so common to women, should take the right temperance tonic for the womanly system.

If a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings, by nervousness or dizzy spells, by headache or backache, "Favorite Prescription" should be taken. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores. Send to Dr. Pierce's Branch at Bridgeburg, Ont., for a 10c trial pkg. of tablets.

For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have been most satisfactory in liver and bowel troubles.

Windsor, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription made a new woman of me. For about six years I suffered with woman's trouble during which time I became all run-down, weak and nervous. I would have severe backaches and pains in my side. I doctored with the doctor but did not get cured of my ailment and was so bad that I could scarcely walk across the floor when I began taking the 'Prescription.' When I had taken two bottles I was much improved and four bottles completely cured me, and I have enjoyed better health than I ever did before taking this medicine. It is truly a wonderful medicine for women."—Mrs. Martha Mulcaster, 4 Albert St.

Polarine

FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL

"Makes a good car better"

For Crankshaft Bearings

EFFECTIVE lubrication of the crankshaft and the connecting rod bearings keeps down vibration. Unless these bearings are protected against excessive wear by a film of oil of correct body and lubricating quality, "play" soon develops.

KEEP BEARING WEAR DOWN AND CAR VALUE UP

The actual value of your car, whether in daily use or in the market for sale or exchange, is mainly a question of engine value. A car is no better than its engine. And engine upkeep is largely a matter of proper lubrication.

Polarine

has the right body to adequately lubricate every wearing part in your motor. It keeps your engine running smoothly with a wear-reducing film of oil that does not break down and run thin under the intense heat developed at high speed operation. It flows freely in low or high temperatures—insures full delivery of power the year round.

Polarine is made in two grades—Polarine and Polarine Heavy. It is supplied in one-half, one and four gallon sealed cans, also in 12½ gallon steel kegs, barrels and half-barrels. There are also Polarine oils and greases for effective transmission and differential lubrication.

In two years of the hardest sort of fighting the 54th Kootenay Battalion has lost but four men as prisoners-of-war, three of whom were wounded. It has never lost a trench, never sent in an S.O.S. for artillery or infantry assistance, and never failed to satisfy the orders of the high command.

Cocoanut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards:- Receipts yesterday, 60 cars, with 954 cattle, 95 calves, 389 hogs, and 1,401 sheep and lambs.

Business at the cattle market was comparatively quiet yesterday, following Monday's big opening. While there is quite a lot of held over stuff of the commonest quality in the yards, it is still a good market for anything of quality. There is a good demand for all classes, provided they have some quality. Good to choice butcher steers and heifers in steady demand at good prices. Choice heavy steers wanted. Good feeders and stockers in steady demand, and at steady prices but there is a lot of common stockers of poorest quality that is not wanted and hard to dispose of.

Hogs steady at $19.50, fed and watered.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S AND MISS' SET OF VESTS.

Dainty accessories are a vital part of the smart costume, and the vest or waistcoat stands in first place this season. It is worn under suits, usually in the style shown in Fig. 1. This style has no back, for it is simply intended to add a touch of color to a dark suit. It has a smart one-button closing, and is cut in two points at the lower edge. This vest has the fashionable shawl collar. No. 2 is an attractive addition to a sport costume, and it also serves as a slight protection, for it has a complete back and front. This type of vest is being made up in bright cretonnes, satin, flowered taffeta and other suitable materials to wear with white skirts.

The lady's and miss' set of vests No. 8879 is cut in six sizes—16, 18 years and 36, 40, 44 and 48 inches bust measure. Vest No. 1 requires ⅝ yard 36 inch material, with ⅜ yard 18 inch contrasting goods. Vest No. 2 requires ¾ yard 36 inch, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting material, and ⅛ yard 24 inch lining.

WOMEN IN 1813.

There is on the desk a book published and sold by Moses Thomas, Philadelphia bearing the date of 1813, which makes it 105 years old. There are many strange things in that book, which contains "Selections from Foreign Reviews and Magazines," all of which is claimed to be "the best thoughts of the ablest men of the age." There is an essay attacking a French authoress who was claiming an equality of intellect of the two sexes. The reviewer remarks: "Upon the whole, we do not think that a little learning is always a dangerous thing in a lady, so long as it has reference to her condition of life and the sphere of her duties."

That is as far as the world had got at that time in the education of women. About seventy years afterwards, when a woman became senior wrangler at Oxford, which is the highest honour in mathematics, there began a change of opinion concerning the quality of women's intellect.

It was maintained in the entire period by these "ablest men of the age," that the "female intellect" was entirely inferior to that of man, and that her physical structure made it impossible for her to comprehend the great questions, such as that of war. Since then a woman has written the greatest hymn of the world.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"BEST INVESTMENT I HAVE EVER MADE"

Contractor Wouldn't Take Five Hundred Dollars for Good Tanlac Did Him.

"I just want to say right now that I wouldn't take five hundred dollars for the good that first bottle of Tanlac did me, for I feel like it has given me a new lease on life," said C. E. Nelson, a contracting carpenter living at 7728 63rd Ave., Southeast, Portland, Ore., recently.

"About four months ago," he continued, "I lost my appetite, and my stomach got all out of order. What little I did manage to eat would sour and form gas, which would cramp and pain me until I could hardly stand it. Then my kidneys went back on me, and my back hurt so bad I couldn't find a comfortable position. They said I had rheumatism or 'lumbago,' then my right leg, below the knee, got to hurting me, and at times I couldn't stand on my feet or get up when down. I was constipated all the time and suffered a great deal with headache. Nobody knows how I really did suffer, because I just can't describe it, and as nothing seemed to do me any good I had become discouraged about my condition.

"I finally sent down and got a bottle of Tanlac, as I had read so much about it, and it was about the best investment I ever made. My appetite came bounding back after my first few doses, and by the time my second bottle was gone, my stomach trouble was almost gone, too. I am now eating any and everything I want and it don't hurt me the least bit, and my kidneys and back are greatly improved. At the time I started on Tanlac I had to use crutches in order to get about, but I don't need them now at all, and have thrown them aside. I have gained several pounds in weight, and can just feel myself getting stronger every day. I have gone back to work already, and, I never lose an opportunity to speak a good word for Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

500 MASS MEETINGS.

To Be Held at Points in Canada and the U. S.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Plans for 500 mass meetings in cities and towns of the United States and Canada during the coming year were formulated here by representatives of Presbyterians of the two countries who afterwards called on President Wilson and on Secretary Baker and Secretary Daniels and the heads of the fuel and food administrations to pledge their services.

For a "continental campaign of piety and patriotism," the country has been divided into 22 regions, where speakers selected under regional organizations will work in pairs.

JAPAN ISSUES PROCLAMATION

Tells Manchurians That She Has No Greedy Purpose Ahead.

HARBIN, Sept. 24.—A proclamation has been issued by the Japanese saying that only because of its friendly feeling for Russia and not a desire to gain, Japan wishes to help restore order here. The proclamation lays emphasis on the assertion that anyone, regardless of nationality, causing disorders will be severely punished.

It is believed the proclamation was issued because the population declines to accept notes carried by Japanese troops instead of Russian money.

2 Cakes Cuticura Soap and 3 Boxes Ointment

Heal Two Weeks Old Baby Of Skin Trouble.

"When about two weeks old my baby turned blue, and in a couple of days broke out in a rash. Then she turned sore around her ears and on the top of her head, and on her arms and legs. The skin was red and she scratched till she made it bleed. She could not sleep.

"I wrote for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It was a great relief, so I bought more, and I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment when she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. Alfred Ryan, 167A St. Martin St., Montreal, Que., August 10, 1917.

Ottawa Restaurants Reduce Portions but Prices Are Higher

Ottawa—Attorney-General Lucas, of Ontario, has been applied to by Dr. McFall, cost of living commissioner, to institute prosecutions against a number of Ottawa hotels and restaurants, where, according to evidence in the department's possession, exorbitant prices for food are charged. All the cases are in Ottawa, and the proceedings are in the nature of a test.

It was brought to the attention of the commissioner that "certain proprietors of public eating places were using the very laudable campaign for conservation of foodstuffs to enhance their profits at the expense of their patrons. Certain such parties boast quite freely that since conservation measures have been put into effect, they are making money as never before. They have decreased the size of the portions served and the extent of their service without correspondingly decreasing their charges.

A SAMPLE CASE.

Angus Gordon, manager of the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, made returns to the Minister of Labor under oath that on December 1, 1917, he served as one portion at the grill room in the said Chateau Laurier, 5 1-3 ounces of bacon, charging for the same 45 cents, and that on June 1, 1918, he served as one portion 4 ounces of bacon, charging for the same 50 cents.

A responsible employee of the Department of Labor purchased there on September 9, 1918, a portion of bacon, 1½ ounces, for which he was charged 50 cents.

Angus Gordon also made oath that the portion served of roast beef on December 1, 1917, was 8 ounces, for which he charged 65 cents, and the portion served on June 1, 1918, was 7 ounces, for which he charged 75 cents. A responsible employee of the Department of Labor purchased on September 9, 1918, a portion of roast beef, 4 1-2 ounces, for which he was charged 80 cents.

OTHER CHARGES

Other charges are made against Hamilton Brothers, who told the department they charge 40 cents for four ounces of bacon with toast, whereas investigation showed they charge 35 cents for 1 5-8 ounces of bacon alone.

Thomas Bardy of the New Idea restaurant, claimed to serve 8 ounces of roast beef or 6 ounces of roast pork for 35 cents. A department official at this restaurant paid 35 cents for 3 3-4 ounces of beef and 2½ ounces of pork.

At Bowles Lunch, where it was claimed 2 ounces of toast were served for 5 cents, the investigator got only 1½ ounces.

At Langdon's Lunch, where a return to the department set forth that 4 ounces of bacon with toast and potatoes are served for 35 cents, the departmental officer paid 25 cents for 1 1-4 ounces of bacon alone.

At the Boston Lunch 2 ounces of bacon were served, where 5 ounces is claimed to be the quantity.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughnes of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

DIES FROM INJURIES AT ROSS HOSPITAL.

LINDSAY, Sept. 23.—An accident, which was attended with fatal results, occurred at the Crushed Stone Limited plant at Kirkfield on Saturday, the victim being Patrick Miller, aged 18, of Victoria Road.

It appears that the young man attempted to get on the donkey engine which conveys the broken stone to the crusher, when he fell in front of it, the engine passing over both of his legs. Medical aid was at once summoned and the boy was taken to Lindsay, reaching the Ross Hospital on Saturday at midnight. He passed away on Sunday at one o'clock.

STOMACH TROUBLES ARE DUE TO ACIDITY

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy, Relief For Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache, and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full oppressive burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and, make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An antacid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

Italians Have Begun Advance in Albania in Preparation for Invasion of Bulgaria

The Allies Are Within About Three Miles of the Bulgarian Frontier on a Thirty-five Mile Front

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Italian troops have begun to advance in Albania, according to unofficial press reports received here to-day by way of Paris. The reported advance in Albania is timed to coincide with the apparent preparations for the invasion of Bulgaria. The Allies, according to latest advices, are within about three miles of the Bulgarian frontier on a front of about 35 miles, extending from the little village of Stroumitza, on the east bank of the Vardar in Serbia, to the vicinity of Malnitsa

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 25.—(Official.)—German troops last night made an effort to regain some of the valuable ground recently won from them by the French near the western end of Chemin-Des-Dames. They attacked in the region of the Moisy Farm in this area, but the effort was a failure.

The statement reads:

In the course of the night, artillery was active in the region of St. Quentin and between the Ailette and the Aisne. German attacks in the region of Moisy Farm were completely checked. On the Vesle front lively artillery fire was maintained. French troops repulsed German raiding parties in the Champaigne and in Lorraine and in the latter region carried out an incursion into the German lines.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—In Flanders last night a successful raid was carried out by the British in the neighbourhood of Wulverghem. In this and in other encounters, prisoners were taken, Field Marshal Haig's official report to-day announces. German troops last night counter-attacked the British lines above Cricourt north-west of St. Quentin, where advances have recently been scored by Field Marshal Haig's troops. The British commander announces that these attacks were repulsed.

Heavy losses were inflicted on the Germans, who delivered several attacks. British posts in the region to the east of Arras, near Sauchy-Cauchy, were also attacked, and here likewise the enemy was driven off. The process of closing in on St. Quentin was continued by the British, who made progress in the Cricourt neighbourhood and also in Selency region, west of St. Quentin. One thousand prisoners were captured in yesterday's operation, particularly around St. Quentin.

IN MACEDONIA.

LONDON, Sept. 25.— (Official.) — East of the Vardar river in Macedonia, the Germans and Bulgarians are falling back on Veles, twenty-five miles south-east of Uskub. Along the Prilep-Gradsko road the Serbians have captured 13 guns and a great number of ammunition waggons and other material.

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 25.—Fighting north of Selency, two miles west of St. Quentin, British troops during the night wrested from the Germans 1,000 yards of bitterly defended trenches. The enemy lost heavily. British patrols today were reported near the town. Five hundred prisoners were taken by the French in the St. Quentin sector yesterday.

MADAME GUERIN NOW IN TORONTO

In a letter to The Examiner Madame Guerin speaks of the success of her mission in Norwood. A French oryhan was adopted by Mrs. Maitland Grover of Norwood last August, and is now six years old. On Monday M. Guerin spoke to the children of Norwood High School and all promised to give up candies and chewing gum to help the little French orphans who have been left homeless by this war. The children of Norwood Public School have decided unanimously to pay for one year for a French orphan.

On the Woman's Page of the Toronto Globe, Madame Guerin speaks of "Peterborough's Kindness." The pupils of the local Collegiate will adopt a French orphan for a year and the public schools have also decided to help the Orphans. The Peterborough Women Teachers' Society have adopted a ittle girl for one year, and the Thursday Club has done the same.

July Peace Resolution

Socialists in Germany Favour its Adoption—Situation is Grave.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25.— Chancellor Von Hertling, addressing the Main committee of the Reichstag yesterday, declared that while the military situation is grave, there is no reason for the German people to feel despondent. Before the committee convened Socialists adopted a policy favouring the July peace resolution, restoration of Serbia and Montenegro, a public statement by the government regarding the restoration of Belgium, cancellation of the Brest-Litovsk treaty and, if necessary, autonomous government for Alsace-Lorraine. The Centrists voted to support Von Hertling.

UNFAVOURABLE IMPRESSION.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The speech of Count Von Hertling, the German Imperial Chancellor in the Reichstag Main committee, made an unfavourable impression upon the Reichstag members, the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Amsterdam reports. In Reichstag circles, the address is considered to have been unequal to the gravity of the situation.

The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says it hears authoritatively that if Count Von Hertling resumes, his Chancellor, Von Payer and Herr Fredberg, Vice-President of the Prussian Ministry of State, will also resign.

The K. of C. Campaign for Army Hut Fund pens in Peterborough on Monday Next, Sept. 30, to Continue During the Week.

The committee in charge of the K. of C. Army Hut Fund Campaign next week have every reason to feel grateful for the expressions of sympathy, endorsation and assistance which they are receiving on all sides these days. The energetic committee in charge headed by Dr. McNulty as chairman and J. R. Corkery as secretary treasurer have received many kind offers of assistance from all sides and especially from those well known aggressive workers on the Red Triangle Fund. Besides the fact that His Royal Highness the Duke of Devonshire, has kindly consented to act as Honorary Patron, Mr. M. J. Havey President of the Home Bank of Canada has also consented to act as Hon. Treasurer so there need be no fear but what all the funds will find their way into the proper channels. Letters of endorsation have also been received from Sir Robert Borden along with a substantial cheque, Sir Edward Kemp Minister of Militia and Maj. General Turner of the Canadian Forces; highly recommending the work of the Army Huts already in England and France and this should be more than an incentive to all to help. Again the Great War Veterans' Association of Ontario have voluntarily come forward with a strong endorsation of the work and calling upon all citizens to do all they can to help along such a meritorious work. Extensive advertising in the shape of cards, posters and newspaper space has been begun today as can be seen in another column and everything will be done by those in charge to keep the canvass always before the public. The regular canvass will be held here next week beginning Monday Sept 30th and continue until Saturday Oct 5th. The campaign will be officially opened by a mass meeting in the Grand Opera House on Monday evening the programme for which will probably be announced fully to-morrow. The crying need of these Army Huts and the amount of work already done by them to provide rest and recreation to all our Canadian soldiers irrespective of race or creed should appeal to all to give something big or small for the sake of those gallant lads who are braving everything to make things more pleasant for those of us at home.

Placed Guard Around Building

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sep. 25.— A number of French and British officers have taken refuge in the American consulate at Moscow, which is under the protection of Norway. The Bolsheviki government has placed a guard around the building and has demanded the surrender of officers and consulate officials.

Lockhart is Imprisoned

Grand Duke Michael Also Arrested by the Bolsheviki.

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 25.— British Consul Lockhart has been imprisoned in the Kremlin at Moscow, according to advices from Russian sources received here to-day. Red Guard troops are guarding the American Consulate there.

Grand Duke Michael was arrested by Bolsheviki on Sept 9, a despatch from Perm says.

Petrograd despatches declare Soviet forces have captured Uralsk. It is announced, however, that Soviet troops are retiring toward Kotlas.

Fire Prevention Day October 9th

According to the plans of the Ontario Fire Prevention League, Wednesday, October 9th, will be observed throughout the province as Fire Prevention Day. The League was organized at the Fire Chiefs' convention in August for the purpose of arousing the people to a realization of the huge losses this province sustains annually with the rest of Canada. Mr. George F. Lewis, deputy Fire Marshall, in a letter to the council, invited Peterboro's co-operation in this movement by which it is hoped the people may be educated in methods of preventing fires. The letter was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee, which will likely meet this week.

Agreement Accepted.

The agreement under which Mr. F. Barber is engaged as designing and construction engineer, was read in by-law form last night, and approved.

581,559 ENLISTED FOR OVERSEAS WORK

Recruiting figures just received from Ottawa show that since the beginning of the war there have been 581,559 volunteers for overseas service in the Dominion, and that the Toronto Military District leads with 126,772 which is slightly better than giving one-fifth of the whole Dominion. The two other Ontaro districts have also made very creditable showings, No. 1 Kingston, giving 48,236, and the London district giving 63,277. This shows that the Province of Ontario has given close to half the volunteers to date Second honors fall to District No. 10 which in the early part of the war represented the Province of Manitoba, but which has since been enlarged to take in part of Saskatchewan. This district gave 73,025. Since May 31, however, the local district has fallen away in the leadership, the Montreal district doing better, with 11,733 volunteers compared with 6,351 for the Toronto district.

Preparing to Oppose Her Whole Strength

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25.—"Germany is preparing to oppose her whole strength against the enemy," Foreign Minister Von Hintze declared in an address to the Main committee of the Reichstag, according to advices received here to-day. "Special attention must be drawn to events in Northern Russia."

Vice Chancellor Von Hayer, speaking in regard to the small eastern nations, said that Germany does not intend to promote dynastic interests there. In his recent speech, when he said Litovsk and Bucharest treaties could not be revised, he meant, he said, that as they were approved by other parties, they could not be altered without the latter's permission.

Bulgaria Out For Peace

(United Press.)
(By Raymond C. Clapper.)

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 25. — Bulgaria is setting the stage for a peace move through which the Allies may be able to block Germany's path to the east, Entente diplomats indicated here to-day.

INTERVIEW WITH FOCH

"We Have Passed Over the Cres and Are Now Going Down Hill," Said the Marshal.

THE ARMIES

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 25.—Marshal Foch, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies on the western front, who dislikes interviews and rarely grants one, received newspapermen to-day. Among those received was the correspondent of The Telegraph, who thus records the Marshal's brief utterances. It was made in an ejaculatory manner, with the use of hardly any verbs.

"The British army is better than ever. It fights better than ever. All of its losses have been made good, and it is a more splendid army than it has been before."

"The Americans are splendid and are wonderfully gallant in the field. Ten thousand fresh Americans are arriving at the front every day."

"The French army is the same good old army that it was in 1914. No more is to be said."

THE GENERAL SITUATION.

In discussing the general situation the Marshal said:

"The enemy is shaken up and down, but is still holding out. You must not think that we shall get to the Rhine immediately. We have passed over the crest and are now going down hill. If we gather impetus as we go, like a rolling ball, so much the better."

With a few cordial words the Marshal then dismissed his interviewers and resumed his work on his maps.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.— The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

"The Allied armies which have smashed the centre of the enemy lines in Macedonia, have now begun a turning movement which may bring about a general retreat over the entire front from the Adriatic to the Aegean Sea. Having captured Prilep and advanced far beyond the upper valley of the Vardar, Allied forces are reported to be spreading out like traps of a fan. On the right Serbian and French are moving toward the north-east and have reached points which appear to carry a distinct threat to the great Bulgarian stronghold of St. Rumitza. On the left the Serbians are moving rapidly toward the mountains that divide Serbia from Albania and may cut off the retreat of the enemy forces which were around the mountains, by the collapse of the line eastward from that city. St. Rumitza stands as the outpost of Bulgaria in Macedonia. It is a veritable fortress and is advantageously situated among the high hills.

LIBERTY LOAN CAMPAIGN WILL OPEN FRIDAY NEXT

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 25. — President Wilson will open the $6,000,000,000 Liberty Loan campaign in New York Friday night, it was officially stated to-day. He will speak at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Captured German guns and other war trophies will grace the public squares of cities and villages which win prizes in going over the line first during the forthcoming Liberty Loan.

Convention Was Held in Norwood

ALL I.O.D.E. CHAPTERS IN THE COUNTY REPRESENTED.

At Norwood yesterday afternoon a convention of all the Chapters in the county of the I.O.D.E. was held to give reports of the work done by each Chapter, and show how money had been raised. All the reports presented were decidedly encouraging and showed a progressive condition generally.

At the end of the meeting, which was presided over jointly by Mrs. Squires, regent of the Norwood Chapter, and Mrs. Birdsall, vice-regent, the visitors were entertained by the Norwood citizens in different homes, after which an open meeting was addressed by Mrs. Bruce, and Miss Constance Boulton.

Mrs. Cuffe entertained the visitors at her home after the open meeting.

POLITICAL CONFERENCE

Central Government to be Created for the Whole of Russia—Will Abrogate Treaty.

THE REPRESENTATIVES

(By Joseph Shaplen—United Press).

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—A great political conference, the purpose of which is the creating of a Central Government for the whole of Russia, is taking place at Ufa, according to a cable received by the Russian Embassy here, from the joint Siberian Government at Osk. The conference is attended by representatives of all political parties, including the Bolsheviki, and several hundred members of the constituent Assembly, the cable stated. Avksentieff, formerly Minister of Agriculture in Kerensky's Cabinet, and leader of the Social Revolutionists, is presiding. The Social Revolutionists are the dominating element. Officials at the Embassy expressed the hope that the conference would be able to agree to some definite plan of a united Government for Russia, a Government that would combine the respective regional Governments recently established in Eastern and Western Siberia and in the Archangel and Murmansk regions.

The first Act of such a Government, it was expected, would be the abrogation of the Brest-Litovsk Treaty, the official re-entrance of Russia into the war, and an agreement with the Allies for the restoration of the eastern front and the joint Russian and Allied prosecution of the war against Germany in the east.

FUNERAL OF LATE TIMOTHY HURLEY

A fitting testimony was shown by the residents of the city to the late Timothy Hurley whose funeral took place this morning from the Cathedral at 9 o'clock. Solemn Requiem Mass was held. The celebrant was Rev. Father Phelan, Deacon Rev. Father P. J. McGuire, Sub-Deacon Rev. Father McCauley In the Sanctuary were His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, Rev. Father Murray of St. Michael's College, Toronto, Father M. O'Brien, Father O'Gorman and Father Guiry.

His Lordship, the Bishop pronounced the last blessing after which he spoke briefly, eulogizing the Christian and gentlemanly character of the deceased. He referred to his wonderful example in the Total Abstinence Society, and that he had given a son to the Church, who was unfortunately unable to be with his father in his last illness. The full choir of the Cathedral attended. The pall bearers were:—Mr. B. Morrow, Mr. James Lynch, Mr. R. Sheehy, Mr. J. T. O'Connell, Mr. John Corkery, Sr. and Mr. J. C. Sullivan. The priests at the grave were Rev. Father Murray assisted by Rev. Father McGuire, Rev. Father McCauley, Rev. Father O'Gorman and Rev. Father Guiry.

C.G.E. Appeal This Morning

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—The Labour Appeal Board held its first hearing under its new chairman, Judge McLennan, this morning, and dealt with the appeal on the decision of the Conciliation Board appointed to decide the dispute between the Canadian General Electric and certain of its employees. The hearing was held strictly in camera, the press being excluded, and, at the close, the members maintained a remarkable reticence regarding the result of the deliberations. It may be stated, however, that they have not yet arrived at a decision as to the points of the original award which are in dispute, and that further consideration will be necessary.

Mr. John Cairns and Mr. Alex. Murray, representing the local machinists, went to Ottawa last night to attend the session of the Labour Appeal Board, at which the C. G. E. Company's objections to three clauses in the award of the Board of Conciliation were to be heard.

ALLIED OPERATIONS MAY SEPARATE THE BULGARIAN

PROPAGANDA FOR THE BRITISH TROOPS

Special to The Examiner:

THE HAGUE, Sept. 25.— Germany has begun to pepper the British lines with propaganda seeking to incite the nation against America, it has been learned here.

Aviators are dropping leaflets declaring that America has triumphed over Great Britain's overseas trade and shipping and urging the British to make peace with Germany "because only America is interested in the continuance of the war."

Strike in England

Drastic Government Action is Looked For—May Militarize Railways.

(Special to Examiner.)

London, Sept. 25. — Railway firemen in the north central manufacturing district, known as the "Black Country" went on strike to-day.

Thousands of munition workers and miners are stranded and unable to reach their work. Freight traffic has ceased entirely. The strike is spreading rapidly.

The government may militarize all the railways in Great Britain as the result of the strike in the South Wales district, it was reported to day.

The strike is extremely unpopular. Even the Radical press condemns it. Belief is expressed that the majority of citizens would support most drastic government action along the "work or fight" lines laid down by President Wilson.

Announcing the government's intention to use the military if necessary, Sir Albert Stanley, the president of the Board of Trade, said the "Government is fully alive to the situation and is determined to maintain the service to protect those remaining loyal to the country's interest in this great crisis."

The Government has directed the military and naval authorities to assist the railways in the transportation of munitions and supplies for the army and navy.

A LATER DESPATCH SAYS:

LONDON, Sept. 25. — Twenty-four hundred soldiers already have arrived in South Wales and are taking charge of the railways. A number of regiments have been sent to Cardiff.

ALLIED WAR LOAF ADOPTED BY CANADA

Twenty Per Cent. of Substitutes Must be Used With Wheat Flour.

OTTAWA, Sept. 24.—Canada has adopted the allied war loaf, 20 per cent. of substitutes must be used with wheat flour. Announcing this policy an official memorandum says:

"The Canada Food Board, after full consideration of the matter, has adopted the policy of the allied Food Controllers' resolution as far as wheat products are concerned, and will use the allied loaf. This means that 20 per cent. of substitutes must be used with wheat flour.

"The Government heartily approves this policy. While the crops in Europe and the United States have been, considering everything, excellent this year, and while there is a sufficiency of food in sight to meet our requirements for the next twelve months, nevertheless there is the greatest need for conservation, particularly in flour and wheat, for the purpose of creating a reserve sufficient against widespread unfavorable harvests or other unfavorable food conditions next year. The Government, therefore, hopes the people of Canada will heartily and loyally assist to this end by using in their households the amount of substitutes required under the regulation."

The Serbian Drive Along the M Macedonian Railway is Proceeding Slowly—A Flanking Movement.

LINE THREATENED

United Press.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 25. — The all operations in Serbia are threat ing to separate the Bulgarian arm operating in Western Macedo from the armies east of Var which are defending the Bulgar boundary.

The mountain passes to the nor west of Prilep are now coming wi in the allies sphere of activity. O the advance of the Serbians spre in this direction the hill barriers be imposed between the two Bulg ian armies, making direct commu cation impossible. Thereafter, if Bulgarians cling to western Ma donia, they will be in peril of an hilation. Their only way of possi escape will be into northern Ser and then through the difficult mou tain territory eastward.

Proceeding Slowly.

The Serbian drive along the m Macedonian railway towards Usk is proceeding slowly. Instead of co centrating all their power on drivi ahead along a single line, the all are now extending the re of th operations, probably for purpose preventing an exclusive Bulgari concentration for the defence of U kub, and its branch railway leadi to Sofia. British attacks in assoc tion with Greeks, which have resu ed in the capture of Doiran, are veloping a new threat against B garia from the south while the Se and French continue their operatio paralled with the Bulgars' weste boundary. Strong mountain defe es are between the Anglo-Greek ar ies and the Bulgarian frontier, b there is a possibility that these c be turned by a flanking moveme against the Bulgarian right wing. this operation were to succeed t important supply centre of Stroum za, inside the Bulgarian borde would be threatened. "I Long for the Things He Can't Give Me!"

This is what every struggling young man who marries a wealthy girl fears—fears that his wife will long for the things he can't afford to give her.

And in the case of Ruth and Brian Hackett, this was true: Ruth did crave luxuries and the things to which she had been accustomed.

Brian saw this. He knew that his wife was not satisfied with his humble home. And it cut deep. It took all the joy out of his heart.

"Then, Ruth's love was not the real thing!" you will say—for, we all know that real love can flourish in a hovel. But you are wrong: Ruth's love WAS the real thing. She proves that in the end. How?

CANADIAN CASUALTIES

"The Canadian losses, the lists of which are pouring in are staggering," says the Weekly Sun. The statement hardly seems justified by the facts and the tone of the Sun's article from which this extract is quoted seems to be unduly pessimistic. It is officially announced that the Canadian casualties from August 8th when General Currie's corps smashed the German positions in front of Amiens until the present total 25,000 of which about one fourth have been killed or died of wounds. This is about the same total as the Canadian losses at Passchendaele last November, when in three weeks 25,000 Canadians were put out of commission in the capture of a ridge position which had to be given up to the enemy without a fight when the German offensive penetrated the Flanders salient this spring.

The Canadian losses therefore in the major fighting since August 8th are no larger than those sustained in a three week's engagement last year while the results gained by the Canadian corps were immeasurably greater. Since August 8th the Canadians not only tore through the German lines in the Amiens fighting and rolled the enemy back for many miles but also struck a staggering blow east of Arras by which the Germans famous switch line was completely broken. In these two engagements the Canadians actually took over three times as many prisoners as there were Canadians killed besides taking an heavy toll of killed and wounded from the enemy.

Considering the results achieved and the nature of the fighting the Canadian losses are considered as comparatively light.

ALL HONOUR TO THEM!

The boys who were drafted under the military service act have been fighting in the front line. Some of them have been wounded. Some have "gone west" on that last long journey that leads out through the portals of earthly existence. All honour to them.

"He had served in France for two months" is becoming a commonplace phrase in the obituary notices printed regarding soldiers who have fallen. Usually it tells that the man who made the great sacrifice was called up under the conscription measure, and when his age is given, it will frequently be noticed that he was a mere boy, perhaps not out of his teens, and perhaps just past the age that indicates maturity. Most of the draftees are young men. They were below military age when war broke out. That they did not enlist as volunteers does not prove to reflect to their discredit. Once called into the service of their country they have met the test of training, of voyaging across the ocean, of fighting with the seasoned veterans of the Canadian forces, of doing their duty to the point of giving their lives. For each of these who has fallen, there is some home-fold robbed of a treasure, some door-stone that will never again be worn by the feet of a boy who played barefooted in the grasses a few short summers ago. A mother will sit silently and look at the picture of her "baby boy," for they never quite grow up to mothers, even though they become bearded men. The menfolk will not show their grief so much, perhaps, but it will be none the less severe. A father is supposed to make little show of grief; he knows that thousands of others have been bereft, but just the same he may have to choke back the sobs when he realizes that his line has now come to an end, that the only boy, the only boy he can hope to be the father of, is gone. His heir has passed on to claim another legacy. That legacy, one must reflect, is a badge of honour in the fight against disaster for the world. His boy went out to help fight the forest fire to help overmaster the rogue elephant that broke loose upon the world. That he perished must be written in letters of gall, yet just as death to many is inevitable, so to all is it inevitable that mother and father, son and brother, must be united when "we meet beyond the river where the surges cease to roll." The surges of war have rolled relentlessly for more than five years. Those of the new army who are now giving their lives deserve a place of honour in their country's roll. They fought a good fight. They emulated the record of those who stood as though for a lost cause in the early days of 1915. As victory dawns after a long night of suffering, these younger men go down taking the places of those war-worn crusaders who rushed forward when the call came, and proving that the country's stock is never found wanting when the need of Canadian manhood is sounded in the front line.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Are you ready for the Victory Loan Campaign?

Save money, save food, save gasoline. The Allies need all three.

The United States completed more ships in July and August than the number of American ships sunk by German subs since the war began.

By subscribing for the K. of C. Army Huts you will be helping every Peterboro soldier overseas.

Peterboro is only asked for $6,000 for the Army Huts. The objective should be easily passed next week.

Weekly Report by City Engineer Is Asked by Council

Beginning next Monday City Engineer Parsons will be required to furnish the chairman of the Board of Works with a weekly report of all the work performed in his department during the preceding week. These reports shall be provided each Monday.

The innovation in the Board of Works affairs was proposed by Ald. Edgar at the meeting of the Council last night. He had repeatedly asked for certain improvements to the drainage of Sherbrooke street but they had not been carried out, he said. The city engineers should keep the chairman of the Board of Works informed on the progress of all the work that was being carried out by that Department.

"Ald. Edgar has hit the nail on the head, and I have much pleasure in seconding his resolution," Ald. A. A. McIntyre stated. "When I was chairman of the Board I was never more disgusted with the way the work was carried out."

ASK FOR SEWER COST

Ald. Langford moved seconded by Ald. Saunders that Mr. Parsons be asked to present a statement of the cost of the Prince street sewer when it is completed to the last house connections. Several connections were unfinished because of the urgency of constructing the sewer to the King Edward school from Park street.

President of the Peterboro Milk Producers' Association Deals With Price of Milk

THE PRICE OF MILK.

Editor Examiner: — Kindly allow me space in your columns to state the case of the Milk Producers of Peterborough. When I have stated the facts I will leave it to the reasonable public to judge the case for themselves. To start, I presume the average person knows that it costs more to produce milk in the winter than in the summer.

As president, pro tem., of the Milk Producers' Association and owner of a large dairy herd for a number of years, I have watched the milk situation from year to year and find that the price paid to the producer by the milk distributors is not enough to cover the cost of producing it, let alone giving a profit.

Now, comparing the prices paid to the Producers in other localities, let us take Ottawa for instance. In Ottawa the producers receive 7 1-4c per quart and the consumer pays 11 cents—the cost of distribution being 3 3-4 cents.

In Lindsay the Producer gets $2.50 per hundred pounds and is guaranteed a raise on the price this winter. In Toronto the producers are paid $3.12 per hundred pounds or nearly 8 cents a quart, the consumer pays 14 cents.

Commission at Ottawa.

Last winter the Milk Producers of Toronto raised the price of milk, and the citizens protested so vigorously against the raise in price that the Mayor asked the Food Controller, Mr. Hanna, to appoint a Commission to go into the whole question of the cost of milk production. Hanna agreed to do this and appointed a Commission which sat for some time at Ottawa, taking evidence. Mr. Stonehouse, president of the Toronto Milk Producers' Association, who addressed the meeting recently held in the library, was the representative of the Milk Producers of Toronto, on that Commission. Mr. Stonehouse assured me that the Commission found that the price set by the Producers of Toronto, viz., $3.12 per hundred, or nearly 8 cents a quart, was only a fair price, in fact, Mr. Hanna stated if the Commission was to set a price it would not be less than that asked for by the Toronto Milk Producers.

Milk in Woodstock.

In Woodstock the milk producers found that they could not live on what they were receiving for their milk, and many of them had made up their minds to go out of the business. However, a meeting was called and they decided to "take the bull by the horns" and buy out all the milk vendors. This they did and formed a company with $50,000 capital and built and equipped a complete plant, with pasteurizing apparatus, cooling, bottling, refrigerating machines, etc. They pay the producers $2.50 per hundred, which is ten cents more than the City Dairy Company (a Toronto company) pays the producers there. The company has now been running for nearly two years. The price the consumer was paying when the company took over the business was 11 cents. The company reduced the price for the second year to 10 cents, which price they are now paying.

Official Records.

The Animal Division of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, issued a Bulletin last winter on the cost of milk production in Ontario. They found that taking in 25 farms, keeping on an average of 18 cows each, that the milk sold for 7 1-4 cents per quart, and that the profit per cow was only $8.23 per annum to the farmer — surely not an extravagant price.

The Experimental Station for the State of Minnesota issued a bulletin in which they took in three large districts in different parts of the State and they give the cost of producing milk at $2.46 per hundred pounds at the farm. It costs on an average 20 cents per 100 pounds to deliver it at the Dairy Station.

The Experimental Station of the State of Vermont also issued a bulletin (No. 209) taking in the year 1917, and took in almost the whole State, and they found that it cost $2.75 per hundred pounds at the farm to produce milk. The conditions in these States are similar to those in Ontario. The cost of feed and wages have gone up from ten to twenty per cent. since the above records were made.

Now, compare the price paid to the Milk Producers in the Peterborough district with the above statistics. The Peterboro Creamery pays $2.10 per hundred pounds, or about 5 1-4 cents delivered at the Creamery, or $1.90 per hundred pounds, or 4 3-4 cents per quart delivered at the farm. The Creamery Company charges the consumers 12 cents per quart and other distributors 11 cents per quart. Is it any wonder that the broker selling the stock for the new Creamery Company could state that it was expected that a dividend of twenty five per cent. would be paid to the stock holders. Will any business man say that the milk production business of Peterborough is in a healthy condition? You cannot produce milk any cheaper in this district than you can in the Toronto district which reaches over a radius of 100 miles from Toronto. There have been agents from Toronto offering to contract for all the milk they can obtain here and pay the Toronto price.

I would suggest that the Board of Trade or the City Council appoint a committee of business men to go into the question of the cost of milk production. The Council thought it of sufficient importance to appoint a committee to go into the question of the cost of coal. I hope that some one interested will take up this question which is of so vital importance to every householder; but let me add, that they do so in a proper spirit, and sign their own names to whatever they may state.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,
Yours truly,
Joseph O'Reilly,
President, pro tem.,
Peterborough Milk Producers' Association.

STANLEY BLEWETT WON IN LINDSAY.

Captured Shield for the Best Driving Horse.

Mr. Stanley Blewett of this city captured the J. W. Deyell shield for the best driving horse at the Lindsay Fair this year. As this is the second time he has captured the shield it becomes his for good.

Mr. Blewett was also a prizewinner at the Peterboro Exhibition with the same outfit.

Jimmy Wilde Wins Another Great Bout in English Ring

Flyweight Title Holder Conceded Weight to Opponent.

London exchanges which reached here yesterday tell of another remarkable triumph achieved by the noted British boxer, Jimmy Wilde, who in a match a few days ago with J. Conn on the Chelsea football ground conceded nearly two stones to an opponent at the top of his class and won in the twelfth round. At this point Conn was in such a helpless state that the referee very properly stopped the contest. The London Chronicle says:

"Wilde is undoubtedly the most wonderful little boxer the ring has known. In appearance he is like an under developed school boy of 18, a pale faced youth with frail arms and legs. But he has great width of shoulder and a striking power that no one realizes quite so well as an opponent. As he stood up to Conn, who weighed in at 8st. 13lb., his physical handicap seemed all too big to be overcome. From the first round, however, Wilde outboxed Conn and but for the latter's magnificent defence would have outclassed him. His speed was amazing; he carried the fight so quickly to his opponent that his own defence was a secondary matter.

"It was probably Conn's plan to bring Wilde down to his own level of skill by exhaustion, but except for a period in the ninth round the little Welshman never slackened and he struck at the rate of six blows to one. Indeed, Conn had not made an effort to win when he was beaten. Wilde made certain of winning with a right-handed blow to the jaw in the tenth round. Conn went down six times before the end of the round, being very severely punished, and only a man of splendid pluck would have carried on in the next. But he was incapable of making any response to Wilde's attack and the referee was kind to him in stopping the contest.

"Financially, the match was not the success expected. The attendance, including 2,000 wounded soldiers, was under rather than over 5,000.

Military News

The list of officers appointed to the Siberian Expeditionary Force is made up largely of Toronto and Ottawa officers. M. D. No. 3 is not represented on the headquarters staff, and while there were a number of volunteers no action appears to have been taken. Capts. Box and Connell of the C. A. M. C., have been mentioned, also Lieut. Ellis of the infantry.

LENGTH OF SERVICE

The attendance of the Department of Militia has been drawn to a rumor that the term of enlistment in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, Siberia, is longer than that required for service in other theatres of war. This is entirely incorrect. The engagement of men now enlisting in the Canadian Expeditionary Force in any theatre of war, be it in Canada, England, France or Siberia, is for the period of the war and demobilization thereafter.

SERGEANT'S CONCERT

The final sergeants' concert was given at the Barriefield camp Wednesday evening an proved a complete success. A progressive euchre game was also held and the prize winners were Sergt.-Major Plant, Sergt. Mullin, Sergt. Fairfaith, Sergt.-Major Dickenson and Sergt. Michael Moloughney. The last named secured the "booby" prize. The musical programme was an excellent one; Pte. W. Prevan-Monger was the accompanist. Sergt. Walker's tenor solos and the violin and piano selections given by Ptes. Pipe and Lamb, were very much appreciated. Major R. P. Watt, O.C., "D" Company, distributed the prizes.

Council Objects to Bell Telephone Co. Increasing Rates

The Council last night ratified the action of the Committee of the Whole Council in granting $2,000 to the Sailors' Relief Fund.

Ald. A. R. McIntyre complained that the Bell Telephone Company had raised the charge for a two-party line service from $18.00 to $20.00 without the consent of the Railway Board. The Council supported his protest against this procedure and a copy of the resolution which asserted that the increase was unnecessary will be sent to the Board urging their disapproval of the company's increase.

Rifles For Sale.

The Council has twenty-two rifles of the one time flourishing Home Guard. They have not increased in value during their long period of idleness while all the other rifles in the world were arrayed in battle. Alderman Saunders, as chairman of the Property Committee, wants to get rid of them, and the Council has instructed he and Mayor Duncan to sell them at whatever prices they will bring. There are a number of prospective buyers among the deer hunters, who are preparing for their annual hunt in November.

Patriotic Address, Rev. Harry Harrington, Omemee.

Solo—Mrs. (Rev.) H. Harrington.

Recitation,— Mr. Wm. Howden.

Recitation,—Mis saMrjory Johnston Lindsay.

Steaming hot corn was served followed by delicious apple and pumpkin pie, bread and butter and tea.

COUNTY COUNCILS EXAMINED BRIDGE

Representatives of the Counties of Peterborough and Victoria met in Bobcaygeon a few days ago and examined the South bridge which had been condemned. The join committee decided to have the Government engineer inspect the bridge, and carry out his instructions. Those present were Warden Hopkins, Messrs. C. D. Logan, R. W. Wilson, A. S. Brock, and J. R. McNeeley for Victoria, and Warden Anderson, Messrs. J. McIntosh, G. B. Nicholls, Jas. Ingram and E. M. Elliott for Peterborough.

PRESENTED WITH A BASKET OF ROSES.

Pupils of Convent Honour Bishop's Anniversary.

In honour of his fifth anniversary, the children of St. Mary's Convent yesterday presented His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien with a beautiful basket of roses. The presentation was made by little Miss Ruth Tracy.

His Lordship thanked the pupils, and expressed his pleasure at being amongst the little ones. The children sang several songs in conclusion.

THE SPOILERS.

Baseball went out, not in a cloud of glory, but in a miasma of distrust and regret. The world's series, probably the best technically ever staged, was spoiled by the greed of the players, and the avarice of the owners. The great game received a black eye from which it will be long in recovering. The game itself is fundamentally sound, but it is in bad now.

Folks are not tolerant as they formerly were. No, the bigger things overshadow them all.

They want every endeavour of every human directed to winning the war. You can help plough. If you can't, you can have your fall holidays on a farm, and release a man who can.

More production is demanded.

WHO IS THE FAST MAN FROM PETERBOROUGH?

At an enthusiastic meeting last night the Woodstock Junior Hockey Club was organized. The following officers were elected: Hon. President, Alex. Murray; First Vice-President, M. J. Brophy; Vice-President, Alex. Murray; First VicePresident, A. S. McGregor; Secretary-Treasurer, Harry Johnston; Assistant Secretary, H. E. Douglas; Manager, Geo. Childs. The meeting decided that the best coach available be secured to look after the handling of the players. The prospects for a fast junior team in Woodstock were never better. Last year's players are all available with the exception of Norman Douglas, and several good hockeyists are attending Woodstock College. One is a brother of "Bill" Carson, of last season's team, and another is a fast man from Peterborough. Over $1000 has been subscribed by the fans.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Exemption Appeals Heard To-day Before His Honour Judge Huycke

"I Have as Much Right to Go as Any Other Boy," Said Henry Finnie.

Judge Huycke heard a number of appeals for extension of exemption this morning from men in A and B category. Considering the urgent calls, domestic and on the farm, His Honour granted extensions in most cases

Given Time.

John Flood, Bridgenorth, said that he and his brother Harold had literally exchanged places and the brother had gone while John had his exemption limited. Three brothers are still at home. He was granted an extension of time as he is evidently needed at home until his little brothers grow up.

Not Particular.

Henry Reid, of Lang, had applied for extension of time to help on the farm and on a milk route. He isn't particular about going or staying. Considering the apparent urgent need of his services on the farm his case will let him remain until November.

A Re-examination.

Edmund Armstrong had been in C and was advanced to A category. He protested against his re-examination in Kingston. His only reason for wanting exemption is a shoulder which has been dislocated six times in a short time. He was given a chance to ask Major Cook for permission to be re-examined.

Willing To Go.

Stephen O'Toole, 114 Aylmer street, said that if his brother is given total exemption he is willing to go. Three of his brothers went, one was killed. Decision was withheld.

Granted Extension.

Percy Telford works at the Auburn Mills and is the only support of his widowed mother. His only brother is overseas. Otherwise he would be glad to go. He was given undefined extension.

Henry Finnie, 267 Sherbrooke street, appeared at the tribunal, but did not ask exemption. "I've as much right to go as any other boy he said." One brother is overseas, three are in Canada. His Honour congratulated him upon his spirit and gave him until November to give his employer and father time to fill his place.

Limited Extension.

Jordan Crough, Hall's Glen, appeared for his brother William who, he said, is almost too nervous to say anything. He asked three months' extension for his brother to follow up the farm work. He was given until November 15.

Limited Extension.

John McConkey, Lakefield, a B man, whose brother, Reginald, went overseas in July, appeared. He and his father work two farms. He was granted limited extension to farm.

Wanted Information.

Bert Lockington, a 'B' man, wanted information on when his class will be called. He did not want exemption unless his brother is called. One brother is a 33rd man. The Judge assured him he should have ample time to settle his affairs when he is called. November 1 was named as his extension.

Maurice O'Connor, Emmstmore, with his brother, works 2 large farms. His father is over 50 years of age. A large crop is not yet in. He was given an extension of time.

Three Brothers Overseas.

John B. Dyer, 424 Chamberlain street, a blacksmith employed by W. J. Kennedy, asked for exemption on domestic grounds. Two years ago he had enlisted but had been turned down. Three brothers are overseas and his father returned from France. His case will be considered.

Will Probably Go.

George Clements, Indian River, had two reasons for exemption, his farming and the probability of his young brother going. As his brother is single he thought he had a better chance to go than he, besides which he claims to shoulder the greater burden of the farm work. "You and your brother are not going to stay there," the Judge said. "One must go and it will probably be you."

Louis B. Connor Pleaded Guilty

Men Apprehended at Peterbor Fair Will Likely be Deported.

Louis B. Connor, alias King, alias Chase, pleaded guilty to entering Canada at Fort Frances on August 31 after he had been deported. The maximum penalty, namely, $100 and $10.10 costs, were imposed, in default of payment 3 months in jail. The prisoner will likely pay the fine. He will be taken in charge by the immigration authorities and deported.

Malley Hay and Frank Miller, who are also American citizens, were fined each $100 and $14.10 for having drugs in their possession. Another charge of entering Canada will be laid against them later and they will also likely be deported.

Lieut. McIntyre it is Feared Has Been Killed

A cablegram received from the London agents of the Matthews-Blackwell Company makes it appear certain that Lieut. Lorne H. McIntyre of the Royal Air Force, and son of Ald. Malcolm McIntyre, who has been missing for some time, has been killed in action, although his death has not yet been officially reported. A letter received by Ald. McIntyre from the major in command of his son's squadron, stated that Lieut. McIntyre and another aviator were sent out to destroy a German observation baloon. The two machines dived at the balloon and missed it the first time. Lieut. McIntyre's companion swooped down again and succeeded in destroying the balloon. On his return to his own hangar he reported that he had seen nothing more of Lieut. McIntyre after he had noticed him diving down to attack the balloon.

AUSTRIAN PEACE NOTE.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Sept. 25. — The Austrian peace note has been received at the Vatican, it is officially announced today.

Fuel Commission at Last Appointed by the Council

Will Get Into Harness as Soon as Mr. Murray Returns From Ottawa—Council Approves Extension of Sewer to Provide Connection for Mount St. Joseph—City Resells Strip of Babb's Lane.

TREES STILL IN DEMAND

The by-law appointing the city's new Fuel Commission was passed by the Council in the routine of business last night. Two of its members were present, Mr. Walter Stocker and Mr. Alexander Murray. Mr. Joseph Wearing, the third Commissioner, had a previous engagement which prevented him from attending the meeting.

Mayor Duncan thanked the Commissioners for their willingness to undertake this civic duty. Ald. Edgar would provide them with the instructional circulars received from the Fuel Controller's department and the information regarding the distribution of coal which had been collected in his office. Mayor Duncan also assured the Commission that they would receive all the support and assistance the Council could give them.

"I am very pleased to know that there are three citizens who will undertake this work without salary," His Worship concluded.

Mr. Murray's absence from the city for a few days will delay the preliminary preparations, including organization of the Commission until he returns.

Need Strip of Street.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill, representing Mrs. Elizabeth Davideon, asked the Council for the deed of a strip of land with a ten food frontage on Homewood avenue, extending along the west side of Babb's Lane. Some years ago the city bought a 25 foot strip off the property belonging to the late Wm. Davidson for the purpose of widening the Lane. Only fifteen feet were used because of the obstruction of the house owned by the late Mr. Babb. The remaining ten feet shuts off property on the Lane from a frontage, without which its value as real estate is greatly reduced. Mr. C. B. Adair occupies the corner part of the strip on Homewood avenue, which Mrs. Davidson agrees to give him without charge. It adjoins his property.

Ald. Dobbin moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the desired ten feet be sold to Mrs. Davidson at the price the city paid for it, $48 a foot. The strip extends from Homewood avenue to the Babb house.

Coal Chute For Mill.

The Campbell Milling Company was granted permission to instal a coal bin and chute on Dalhousie street, under the usual conditions. Only a corner of this bin will encroach under the street surface.

Hydrant Proposed.

The Utilities Commission are constructing a water main on Rogers street, south from Hazlitt street. Their suggestion that a hydrant be placed at the junction of these two streets was referred to the Fire, Water and Light committee.

Mr. Bagley's Porch.

Mr. J. Guise-Bagley has enclosed the entrance to his office on Water street with a "knock-down" porch that is built snugly about an abutting step. It was built to keep out the cold and for the praiseworthy purpose of saving coal. Mr. Bagley sought the Council's approval of his handiwork, and his letter was transmitted to the Board of Works.

Want Trees Removed.

J. B. Paquette's request for permission to remove four trees from Brock street and two from Downie street was referred to the Board of Works; so also was Mr. R. W. Reid's communication. Mr. Reid wishes to remove several trees from his property at the corner of Water and London streets.

Connection to Mount.

The clause in the report of the Board of Works, recommending "that the sewer on McDonnel street be extended from Cambridge street to the Monaghan road so that a connection to Mount St. Joseph could be made, and that permission be given to the Mount to be connected to it," the rental which the Mount should pay for the service to be settled later, called forth a question from Ald. Edgar.

The adoption of the report was moved by Ald. Weir, seconded by Ald. A. A. McIntyre.

"I am not opposed to Mount St. Joseph getting a sewer connection, or of anybody else who requires it getting a connection," he said. "We have had applications from citizens outside the city. Are we going to establish a precedent. We should be prepared to extend the same rights to all. If every person can get it, I am for the resolution with both hands; if not, I cannot support that clause."

Mayor Duncan— Mr. Hatton, who owns property on both sides of McDonnel street, does not want the sewer, but there are residents on Walnut street who would like to have the sewer, and it would be easier to go up that street.

Walnut street extends from Cambridge street to Monaghan road. Mayor Duncan stated that the proposed enlargement of the Bonner-Worth company would require the extension of the sewer on McDonnel street.

Replying to Ald. Edgar's inquiry with regard to the precedent he mentioned., Mayor Duncan said, "It's beyond me. I don't know what the aldermen think."

"I'm in favour of putting a sewer across Lansdowne street next year for the Fair grounds," the Mayor said.

Ald. Dobbin—That's for only three days in the year. We don't want sewers on Lansdowne street and others. We should take in a strip of 300 feet all around the city. That would meet such cases.

Ald. Edgar moved an amendment seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that the clause in the report be referred back to the Board of Works, and that Rev. C. J. Phelan be asked to meet the Board to discuss the annexation of Mount St. Joseph property to the city.

The amendment was defeated and the report adopted.

Mayor Duncan said that it was unlikely that the work would be done this year for the reason that the Board had as much planned as they could perform.

Ald. Langford, while supporting the motion, suggested that it might be well to consider the Walnut street route.

Dermatologist Gives Complexion Secret

"The great secret of keeping the face young is to keep off the dead cuticle," says Dr. J. Mortimer Mitchell. "It is well known that the surface skin is constantly dying, falling off in imperceptible particles, except in some diseased conditions, when the same appear like dandruff. But the particles do not all drop off immediately they die, being held for a while by the live skin.

"To have the dermatological surgeon peel off the entire outer skin at one time is a painful and expensive operation. The same result is obtained by applying ordinary mercolized wax, as you would cold cream, allowing this to remain on over night, then taking it off with warm water. One ounce usually suffices. The process is both painless and inexpensive. The wax, which is procurable at your drug store, hastens the natural shedding process. It gradually absorbs the dead and half-dead skin, revealing the new, healthy, youthful-looking skin underneath."

Amateur Gardeners Are Very Sore

The Results of Their Toil Being Garnered by Others.

Many of the amateur gardeners are becoming disheartened with the result of this year's operations. Last year the vegetables were harvested in very good shape, without any trouble from the small boy, who evidently sympathized with the efforts of the amateur a good deal more than he does this year.

One gardener who has given a very good deal of his time and labour in connection with the greater production campaign, and has splendid results if he will be able to garner the crop, dropped into the Examiner Office complaining that the small boy was getting away with his tomatoes, corn, apples and other garden stuff. Another has given the facts to the police and the district will be patrolled each evening. The boys evidently are advancing the Hallowe'en date and using the vegetables to throw at each other and at people's front doors.

If any of them are caught the work of the lots are found to make an example of them.

GROWING DEAF WITH HEAD NOISES? TRY THIS

If you are growing hard of hearing and fear Catarrhal Deafness or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who is threatened with Catarrhal Deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

PIECES OF SHELL HAVE BEEN REMOVED

Mrs. S. C. Dunsford, Lakefield, received official notice from Ottawa yesterday that her husband No. 98863 Bombardier W. C. Dunsford, who left here with the last draft of the 73rd Battery has been admitted to a Military Hospital, Colchester, Sept. 14th with gun shot wounds in both legs. Monday she received a letter from him stating that the pieces of shell had been taken out and he was doing nicely.

HE GAVE ALL

—his Mother, his Home!

OUT 'mid bursting shell and battle's roar; out in the awful abyss of a man-made hell; in a strange land, thousands of miles from home, a brave Canadian mother's son is, this minute, fighting, bleeding, dying—enduring all the agonies of this terrible conflict that the world may be free. There, amid the victorious cheers of our men, the maddening curses of a savage foe, the cries of the stricken and the wails of the dying, his mind goes back to Canada, to the land he loved so well; to a dear old mother's home, to the comforts he found there. He sees her bent in longing for her boy "Over There," and his heart aches to comfort her with a letter of good cheer. Hear him, in a voice with anguish filled, calling, pleading, praying to those for whom he fights, to furnish him with the comforts that they themselves would want.

We carry to YOU this plea from far across the sea, from your loved ones "Over There," that they may have a few of the comforts that YOU daily enjoy.

WHAT WILL YOU GIVE TO KEEP HIM SMILING?

TWENTY PROGRESSIVE YEARS

Friday, September 27th, 1898—was our first business day in Peterboro'. In a portion of store, number 385, we invited the Peterboro' public to inspect our offerings. Our stock was small, but our confidence for the future was strong. We had faith that the future would give us what we have to-day.

Year by year we have added store after store, and built to these stores enlargements, so that the business of to-day occupies five stores, each four stories high and basement. All five floors are completely filled with merchandise and the business bears the proud distinction of being the most rapid growing business in the province, outside of the much larger centres.

From a business of three departments we have grown to tweney-one, each department a store in itself, under capable management.

To mark these twenty years of growth, we propose holding a two-days' profit sharing sale with our customers. The department heads have been given instructions to put out, for two days only, marked specials at money saving prices. In addition the "Bargain Annex" will be open both days. Extra salespeople have been employed, and every detail to a most successful two-days ANNIVERSARY SALE has been worked out.

Sale—Friday and Saturday, two days only. Visit every department, they all contain sensational bargains –

Yours, for still greater business,

Last of the Cottage Prayer Meetings on Friday Night

All the Churches of the City Will Have Arranged to Close Their Evening Services Next Sunday in Time for Their Members to Attend Evangelistic Meeting.

The fact that after Billy Sunday, men who are familiar with the leading evangelists of the continent, state that Rev. I. E. Honeywell, who, next Sunday night is to open a month's series of evangelistic services in Peterborough, is the next greatest evangelist in America, is adding interest to the approaching campaign. For some years Dr. Honeywell was Rev. Mr. Sunday's chief assistant. While Dr. Honeywell, therefore, is fairly familiar with Mr. Sunday's methods and teachings the two men differ in practically every respect. Physically Mr. Sunday is wirey, while Dr. Honeywell is thick-set. He is a man of fine build, full of physical vigour, alert of movement and in this respect is like Billy Sunday in that he is athletic to the finger tips. One point about Dr. Honeywell's methods is that he is what is known as a "man's man." His ruggedness and spontaneity make a deep impression on men while his manliness and naturalness are fascinating. Those who attend his meetings are quick to notice his striking personality and to realize that he stands on his own individuality.

Sunday Night Meeting.

As Dr. Honeywell is accustomed to addressing audiences ranging from 3,000 to 8,000, and as the campaign in Peterborough is union in character and is being supported by almost all the Protestant churches in the city with a membership of approximately 5,000 the officers in charge of the local arrangements thought it well to engage the Brock Street Rink as being the building best adapted for such large services as are to be held. As nearly, if not all, the Protestant churches co-operating in the work have arranged to close their evening services next Sunday, so as to permit of their members attending the first meeting of the campaign, it is expected that Sunday night's meeting will be largely attended and that in this way Dr. Honeywell will get a wide introduction to the people of the city. The last of the cottage prayer meetings will be held on Friday night of this week, but it is possible that during the campaign a series of morning prayer meetings may be held in order that the Christian people of the city may have an opportunity of continuing in prayer for the success of the campaign.

A girl always likes to mention some highbrows who were to have attended her wedding, but at the last moment found it impossible to come.

OPENING RALLY OF Y.W.C.A.

The "opening rally" of the Y.W.C.A. last night was a brilliant affair in every way and attended by a large number of enthusiastic workers. The green room, where the affair was held, had been prettily and appropriately decorated with autumn leaves, flowers and fruit. Miss M. Hopkin, the president, occupied the chair.

Opening Exercises.

Rev. F. E. Malott, pastor of Trinity Methodist church, conducted the opening exercises and in a few words expressed his sincere interest in the work and success of the Y.W.C.A., and said that to-day one really wonders how the world ever got on without such an institution which, with the daily increasing number of girls who are living away from home, is rapidly growing the world over.

After the War.

Miss Dickson welcomed the many new faces which apeared at last night's rally for the first time, and after briefly outlining the aim of the Y.W.C.A., spoke of the prevalent thought on every mind— what will happen after the war? "There is no better way to prepare," she said, "for after the war than by faithfully and well fulfilling any task or duty which is put up to us day by day." In conclusion she asked the boarders to cultivate a spirit of give and take and should a condition be unsatisfactory not to go abroad dand complain, but take it to the superintendent, who is ever ready to rectify any cause of dissatisfaction.

The Reports.

The reports of convenors of the different convenors promised an interesting and instructive winter. Mrs. E. E. Harvey outlined the religious programme. In addition to the present Bible study and prayer already held at the "Y," which includes daily prayers and Sunday service, it is suggested that once a month at Bible study classes, members of the Board should gather with the members of the "Y" for a ten minute discussion by a member on prayer, etc., and occasionally invite a clergyman to assist by giving short talks on religious subjects.

Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, convenor of the Educational committee, said that the present with the calls for work for overseas it is difficult to make plans for anything but Red Cross. However, at the "Y" time will be found for some very interesting instruction. Home nursing and first aid classes will be continued. Miss Parker will take a number of pupils for elocution and expression lessons. A Chautauqua course of study of different countries will be held. This will cover four years. Arrangements are being made for a French class under the direction of a teacher lately returned from Paris. A course of practical studies of dressmaking, millinery will be instituted. In conclusion she spoke of advantages of the 'gym' classes, which she said are already so well known to be hardly necessary to mention of.

In the absence of Mrs. Turner, Miss Parker gave the report of the Extension committee, outlining the success of the Silver Link and Athena Clubs. The assistance of a number more established clubs at the "Y" is solicited. These clubs are given the freedom of the club rooms which, although scantily furnished at present, it is hoped will be furnished later by donations from those who have furniture unnecessary to their homes.

Summer Conference.

Miss Penrose gave an interesting outline of the social side of the summer conference Miss Stuart of the lectures and study held, following which Mrs. Morrison, superintendent of the boarding home, told of the beginning of the "Y" in the early fifties with a membership of five ladies, to its present standing when, in Peterborough alone, the boarding home is almost full.

Miss Parker, the general secretary, concluded the reports by an interesting address on the "Worth of a Girl" to her self, to others and to God.

A Programme.

The programme was varied by solos by Mrs. J. E. Middleton and Miss Ruby Quartermaine, piano selections by Miss Elliott and a recitation by Miss Winnifred Parker, after which, during the social hour which followed, some splendid selections on an Edison, loaned by the Greene Music Co., were appreciated. Dainty refreshments were served.

SENSATIONAL ARREST BY POLICE AT QUEBEC

MAN GATHERED IN BY THE MILITARY THOUGHT TO BE AN ENEMY SPY.

Quebec, Sept. 25. — An important capture is alleged to have been made under sensational circumstances here last night, when the military police after a wild chase over roofs, through valleys and dark yards in Lower Town, arrested a foreigner named Provokoff Trototsky. He was arrested in Quebec on Monday evening last in a beer garden on John street after he had made unfriendly utterances against the Allies. He escaped from the St. Louis barracks, however, and was finally located in a Lower Town boarding house, close to the water front.

Trototsky, when first arrested, carried a large roll of money which was confiscated, and again, yesterday evening when arrested he had another big roll of bills. He talks French and English quite fluently, is apparently refined in character, and had in the three grips that he carried, a collection of false wigs, beards, etc.

The authorities refuse to give out any statement as to the real identity of the man, who is now being closely guarded at the barracks.

SIR ADAM BECK IS RECOVERING.

(Special to Examiner.)

TORONTO, Sept. 25. — At the General Hospital at 11 a.m., to-day, it was stated that Sir Adam Beck was resting easier after suffering considerably for several days.

Food Board Flashes

The class in dairying which was to have been started at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, in October, has been postponed, but will probably start some time in January, so that would-be dairymaids do not need to be discouraged.

The Ontario Government is considering the recruiting and training of girls for the cheese and butter factories. The Chief Dairy Inspector for Eastern Ontario declares that his best cheese-makers have been women. He feels strongly that the standard of cheese-making would be improved if there were at least one woman in every factory where there are two assistants.

A month's training would be sufficient, and wages vary from $35 and board a month to $60 and board. He claims that men and women should be able to earn the same salaries. Something like 5 women could be placed in Eastern Ontario in this capacity next summer.

GENUINE CALL OF GERMANY

Majority of Kaiser's Subjects in Switzerland Will Not Return

BERNE, Switzerland, Sept 25.—The German authorities in Berlin have instructed all Germans discharged from the army and living in Switzerland to return to Germany for work in the rear of the fighting line, especially in guarding prisoners.

German subjects here show little inclination to respond to the call, and it is believed that 75 per cent. of the 10,000 Germans affected will refuse to return to Germany.

Samuel Gompers' Message to French Labour Leaders

Special to The Examiner

(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labour, told more than a score of French Labour leaders, representing every phase of workmen's activity in France, that American labor is determined to carry on the war to a victorious finish. He declared America's workingmen will "see it through," "whatever" may be the cost."

ACCUSED ORDERLY HAS WITHDRAWN ALLEGED CONFESSION.

MONTREAL, Sept. 24.— Commenting on the case of Berthe Courtemanche, the woman orderly at the grey nunnery here, who confessed to having started the fire that led to the burning of over sixty babies in February last, and who yesterday withdrew her confession and pleaded not guilty, Judge Choquette mentioned that there has lately been more or less of an epidemic among girls of incendiarism and that he had heard of several cases of this sort in the juvenile court, over which he presides. Judge Choquette committed the girl for trial in November before the court of king's bench. She will be medically examined at an early date.

CANADA WILL HAVE TANK BRIGADE

Second Tank Battalion is Now up to Strength and Will Shortly Proceed Overseas.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 25.—The Dominion is shortly to be effectively represented in one of the newest and most unique branches of the service overseas, namely, tanks. The first tank battalion under Col. R. L. Dennison, has been overseas for some time past and is now engaged in intensive training. Such was the excellence of the personnel of this battalion that a number of them have been taken from the French Canadian unit for training as infantry officers.

Will Have a Brigade.

A second tank battalion is now up to strength at Petawawa and will shortly proceed overseas. It will be taken over by Major M. K. Cameron, R.M.C. For the officering of this battalion 18 men have been taken from the artillery. About 40 or 50 cadets will go over as tank commanders, but without commissions until they qualify overseas and instructions have been given to district officers commanding to select their officers each with the completion of the complement.

There are sixty tanks to a battalion and the Dominion is to have a brigade of three battalions. The third will be organized shortly. A battalion consists of ninety officers and forty-one sergeants and staff sergeants, 460 other ranks and in addition one medical officer and five other ranks attached. The tanks will be both of the "dreadnought" and "whippet" variety. Negotiations are now proceeding with the Imperial authorities as to the completion of the brigade.

OBITUARY

ROBERT FLACK

The call came to an old and highly respected resident of Lindsay yesterday in the person of the late Robert Flack. Deceased, who was aged eighty years and six months, was born in Manvers Township in March, 1838. For many years he lived in Manvers Township but thirty-two years ago moved to Lindsay where he resided until his death.

The late Robert Flack had been ill for some time and for the past few days had been hovering between life and death. Deceased was an Anglican in religion and a conservative in politics, and was married more than fifty eight years.

Left to mourn the great loss is his wife, two brothers, George, of Rochester, James, of Treherne, Manitoba, and one sister, Mrs. Stinson, also of Treherne. Two children also survive Mr. Alexander Flack, and Mrs. Werry, both of town.

MRS. WILLIAM NEEDLER

The death took place Sunday of Mrs. Louise Needler (nee Carson), wife of Mr. William Needler, in Lindsay. The deceased, who was in her 75th year, was found dead in her bed by members of the family. She is survived by her husband, one son and one sister. The son is Dr. E. P. Martin, of Michigan, and the sister Mrs. Deyell, of Millbrook. Rev. Canon Wm. Allen, of Millbrook, is also a cousin of the deceased.

The late Mrs. Needler was known to a large number of Lindsay citizens, having lived there for years. She was highly respected and endeared to those who knew her best.

Funeral arrangements have been made for Wednesday afternoon, interment to take place in Riverside cemetery.

JOHN McCLELLAN

John McClellan, brother of Mr. J. Harris McClellan formerly of Gilmour street now of Toronto died in Bowmanville last week and the remains were laid at rest on Sunday in the family plot. Born in Bowmanville on April 28, 1839 he was for sixty years harbormaster at Port Bowmanville and for forty years senior member of the firm of McClellan Bros. dealers in grain, lumber, wood and coal.

His wife was Miss Mary Perry of Coteau Landing, Que. He was a Liberal and a staunch Presbyterian, for many years a leading official and supporter of St. Paul's Church, and was an elder up to his demise. He is survived by his wife, two brothers, Joseph H. McClellan, Toronto, and William McClellan, St. Thomas, and two sons, J. A. McClellan, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, and John McClellan of Bassano, Alta. His funeral was very largely attended, Rev. D. W. Best, M.A., his pastor, officiated, assisted by Rev. Samuel Sellery, M. A., B. D., Methodist, and Rev. G. Gomm, Presbyterian, of Blackstock.

School Fair at Immaculate Conception School

To-day is the Annual School Fair With the Scholars as Exhibitors.

The children of the Immaculate Conception School have been busy getting in their entries for the School Fair, which is taking place this afternoon. Excellent specimens of roots and vegetables, fowl, etc., excellently arranged, are making a very interesting exhibit. The scholars have taken a keen interest in the Fair, which is developing from year to year.

Miss Helen Priest at Murray Street Baptist Church

Miss Helen Priest was the principal speaker at the annual rally of the Women's Mission Circle of the Murray street Baptist Church last evening. Miss Priest is home on her third furlough after 25 years spent in the Tuli district of India. Her work is principally the advancement of Christianity among the women of India but her work has carried her among the boys of that district, who have benefited by much higher instruction. She spoke last evening on her work in India and the great strides Christianity has taken in that far-off dependency of the British Empire.

Miss Priest is one of the senior missionaries sent by the Women's Board of the Baptist Church of Canada.

During the summer the classes, under Miss Caroline Littlefield, have made splendid progress in the art of swimming, and the exhibition will be a surprise to many.

IN MEMORIAM.

Of the late Mrs. E. Guthrie, who died Sept. 25th, 1917:

We loved her, yes, we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And He has sweetly called her,
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were opened,
A gentle voice said "Come,"
And with farewell unspoken
She calmly entered home.

Inserted by her son, R. H. Guthrie, and wife.

The Case of Mrs. McIntyre

Mr. Burnham has the following to say about the case of Mrs. McIntyre:

Mrs. McIntyre, who has just come out of the hospital, went with Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., to see Ex-Mayor William Buller this morning, a member of the Patriotic Fund Committee regarding the help which she applied for. All Mrs. McIntyre asked was help in meeting her debts which in account of her continued illness and operations she was unable to meet not being as yet able to work. Mr. Buller promised help and Mrs. McIntyre went away quite satisfied.

The trouble over this poor little woman's affairs during her husband's absence at the front, has been due to the failure of Mr. F. H. Dobbin to deal with her sympathetically. Consequently in addition to her illnesses she has become quite unnerved and being alone and a stranger and from Scotland but a few years she did not know what to do. She has paid out all her savings but a trifle and had become greatly worried by her bills for operations, hospitals and medical treatment. With the relief and business management of her affairs kindly promised by Mr. Buller. She will likely be ready to go to work before long and to try and get a little home together once more for her husband when he returns.

WHAT NEW BRITISH PLANES CAN DO.

BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE — Left to themselves, the latest type of heavier-than-air machines used by the British, will make their way safely to earth, except for slight damages which may follow a landing. The machines are so balanced and the wings so arranged that when the engine stops they glide gradually and easily to earth.

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

(Toilet Talks.)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about two minutes, will when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure that it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed.

EIGTH "CRISIS" SINCE 1914.

London Sees in German Agitation Only a Peace Farce.

LONDON.— Although reports of a German political crisis arising from the supposed movement for parliamentarization of the Government are printed here and the situation is watched with mild interest, the whole thing is mostly regarded as merely an integral part of the German peace offensive. Frequently since the war broke out the reassembling of the Reichstag has been proceeded by an outbreak of excited talk in German political circles. This has created a temporary "thundery" atmosphere, in which some revolutionary bomb has been predicted, but one has ever fallen.

The Telegraph, discussing the rumours, says that this is the eighth political "crisis" in the course of the war, and adds: "All of them have left things were much as they were before."

The view widely taken is expressed by the Graphic, which describes the discussion now filling German papers as a "strategem to lure the Allies into making peace by depicting Germany as a democracy." The paper believes that the Emperor is following the example of some of his Hohenzollern predecessors and is gladly playing his part in "the farce which is about to be restaged with the Centrist majority and the Socialists as joint managers."

The inwardness of the move, the paper adds, is that Mathias Erzberger hopes, with the help of Philip Scheidemann, the Socialist leader, and his followers, to ouse Imperial Chancellor Von Hertling and secure the centre of the stage as peacemaker for Germany.

"'Allied democracies are led to believe it will be quite safe to negotiate with a German parliamentary Government." The Graphic says: "The whole movement is clearly preparing the way for a resuscitation of the notorious Reichstag resolution in revised edition, in the hope that the Allies have forgotten how completely that sham has been exposed."

This is the season of the year when a man looks in his back yard and decides the one thing needed is a goat that will consume the tin cans.

Bolshevism in Bulgarian Army German Aid Believed at End

Allies' Successes in the East May Split the Quadruple Alliance—German Influence With Turkey Said to be Waning.

RELATIONS CHANGING

PARIS, Sept. 26.—While not losing sight of the fact that intensely interesting developments may be expected at any moment on this front, the principal attention of Paris is directed to the influence which the allied victories in Macedonia and Palestine may have on the immediate future of the war. It is felt here that these events must inevitably have important political consequences and will tend greatly to modify the whole aspect of the war in the East.

Not only have two smashing blows been delivered against the prestige of the Central Powers, but it is believed that the evidence that has been given in the past few days that neither Germany nor Austria is any longer able to offer effective support to their subordinate accomplices, Turkey and Bulgaria, must have a strong influence on the stability of the quadruple alliance.

As Paris sees it, the recent furtive journey of that wily old fox, Ferdinand, to Germany, the complaints he is understood to have addressed to his former omnipotent, but now sadly discredited War Lord, his unheralded return to Bulgaria, followed by the hasty visit paid by the King of Bavaria to Sofia, and the long conferences there between Ferdinand and Dr. Solf, the official emissary of the German Government are all full of significance.

Menace of Bulgarian Socialists.

All these events took place before the recent crushing defeat of the Bulgarians, and are believed here to be closely connected with the critical internal conditions of Ferdinand's unstable realm. The Bulgarian Socialists, who form a very substantial proportion of the subjects of Ferdinand, are known to have been in close relations with the most advanced parties in the Ukrainian Republic, and also to have sent delegates to Switzerland, where several leaders of the Bulgarian Socialists have been for some time in exile.

The conclusion drawn here from these and other facts is that the Bulgarian Army is already seriously infected with Bolshevism, and that this may very possibly result in the near future in the elimination of Bulgaria as a factor on the German side. The Bulgarian defeat in Macedonia may or may not have been due to this cause, but one thing is certain; the result of that defeat must inevitably contribute enormously to the extension of the demoralization which the Bolsheviki have already brought about in Ferdinand's kingdom.

Fears of the disintegrating effects of an extension of the movement that brought Russia to ruin have been a nightmare in Austria for months past, and to a lesser extent in Germany itself; but from all accounts that have reached Paris, the most serious inroads of this poison have been made in Bulgaria. Conditions there are now such in this respect, indeed, that it is believed that almost anything may happen in the near future. It would be only poetic justice if the same influences which wrecked Russia would bring about the break-up of the forced coalition of the Central Powers and all the blessings for the civilized world that would follow in its train.

Enver's Power in Turkey Waning!

The situation in Turkey, as Paris reads the various factors in being, is now also full of promise for the Allies. Here, however, quote other causes are apparently working toward the same end. Apart from the manner in which the military situation is developing entirely in favour of the Allies, it must not be forgotten that the new Sultan, Mehemet VI., has revealed himself in more than one situation as possessing a much more energetic character than was expected of him. One of his first acts was to call in as one of his principal advisers Said Bey, who was Secretary of Kiamil Pasha, the veteran Ottoman statesman who held for some years the post of Grand Vizier, and as such was the virtual ruler of Turkey.

Kiamil was notoriously Anglophile, and consequently Pro-Entente all his life, and a strenuous opponent of the Young Turks and all their works. Since Said Bey became Mehemet's counselor the influence of Enver Pasha has steadily diminished. Mehemet obviously dare not throw overboard this unscrupulous German agent too suddenly. Moreover, Enver has undoubtedly strong support in Constantinople in the person of the infamous Bernstorff, onw German Ambassador to the Porte. Bernstorff, however, is no longer omnipotent in Stambou, and has characteristically shown his sense of his changed position by indulging in several bitter quarerls

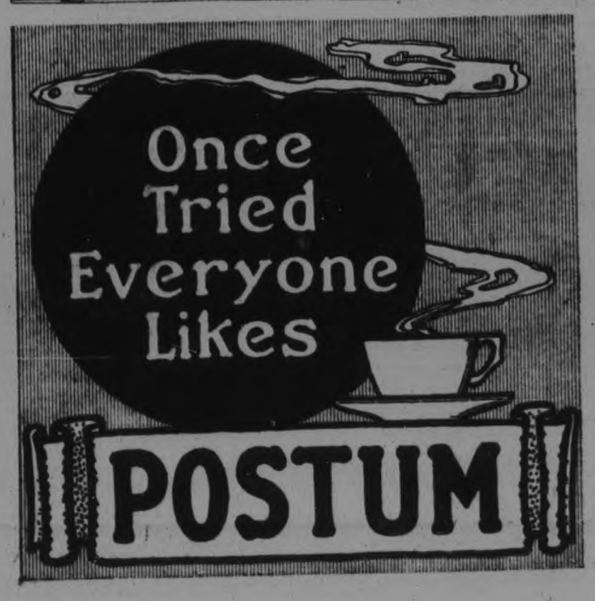
PALESTINE FROM DAN TO BEERSHEBA—This unique map (published by the Sphere some months ago), shows the general characteristics of the country in which General Allenby's army has won so sweeping a victory over the Turks. The clearing of the Holy Land is complete, and names which have been familiar to us all from Bible reading now take their places in the annals of the British army. That which the ancient Crusaders under Richard the Lion Heart failed to do, the British, Australians and Indians have done under Allenby.



Summary of Reports Made by Agricultural Representatives

Potatoes are Being Dug—Fall Wheat Has Been Much Delayed in Sowing by the Wet Condition of the Ground—Cattle are Looking Well.

FARMERS ARE BUSY THRESHING

The following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Kent reports that the farmers are busy husking corn, and that some claim that they have each secured fully 2,000 bushels of seed corn, mostly White Cap, while others have a considerable quantity of Wisconsin. Norfolk describes some varieties of Southern corn as standing 14 feet high. Silo corn is now being cut in many counties both east and west. The yield per acre is better than was expected early in the season, and most silos will be fairly filled.

Potatoes are being dug, and odd complaints of rot among the late varieties are coming in, as the ground has been very wet for some time.

The Brant Representative says that early turnips are being shipped from that county at from 30c to 35c a bushel, and that prices will likely remain high this year, owing to the smaller general acreage. Both turnips and mangels are still growing vigorously.

Brant also reports a big increase in the acreage of red clover retained for seed this season, as wherever possible, most farmers have saved the crop for that purpose.

Fall wheat has been much delayed in sowing by the wet condition of the ground. If the weather clears soon a considerable acreage may yet be added to that already in, some of which is now showing above the ground, and looks promising. There has been an increased demand for seed lately.

Cattle Looking Well.

Cattle are looking well, as September pastures have been lush. Oxford reports some grass fed cattle going on the market, while Halton states that a number of carloads of feeders are being brought in.

The supply of milk has improved with the pastures. Chesterville Creamery is reported as paying $2.35 a cwt. for September milk.

Hogs are selling at from $18.75 to $19.50 a cwt. Dufferin states that reports would indicate a heavy run of hogs in the next month or so.

The outlook for the winter feeding of live stock is fair, with the large supply of coarse grains on hand. Hay however is scarce and is increasing in price. While straw is comparatively short in length, it is as a rule of excellent quality for chopping and feeding, and the area sown to cereals this season was about 200,000 acres more than that of the preceding year. The silos also will be better filled than they were last season.

Farmers are too busy threshing, plowing, wheat planting, potato digging, corn cutting, etc., to do much marketing of grain. Some of the abundant crops of oats has been sold at from 70c to 76c a bushel. Seed wheat is selling at $2.50 in Peterboro and hay at from $18 to $20.

While farmers are very busy, the demand for labourers is not correspondingly keen, chiefly because arrangements for help had been made in most cases well in advance, and also as one Representative puts it, because there is little use in applying so late in the season. The extension of harvest leave to soldiers to cover the greater part of fall work is an additional reason.

GRAIN MARKET

Predictions of frost last night sufficed to give a lift to the corn markets towards the close, after on the whole a rather weak session. The October option closed 1 5-8c. up from Tuesday's close, and Nov. 1 1-8 up. There seems to be nothing doing here as yet in cash corn. There is a strong demand for both oats and barley, but receipts are still light. An announcement from Winnipeg says that the Board of Grain Supervisors has authorized a 50c. advance in flour.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2, $2.21 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.11 1-2, not including tax, in store, Fort William.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.31; No. 3 winter, $2.37; No. 2 spring, $2.26; No. 3 spring, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 76c. to 78c.; No. 3, 75c. to 77c., according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, new crop, $1.05 to $1.10.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Ontario Flour — War quality, $10.75, Toronto-Montreal, $10.75, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal; shorts, $41.40; bran, $36.40; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay— Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $19 to $20; No. 2 mixed, $17 to $18 per ton; straw, car lots, $9 to $9.50.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards: Receipts yesterday, 80 cars, with 1,178 cattle, 128 calves, 1,048 hogs and 1,364 sheep and lambs.

The market continues to hold steady to firm for everything of quality and weight. The poor and thin stuff is in a very slow and draggy market, commission men finding it very difficult to clean up a few remaining loads from this week's earlier delivery.

Fat cows were in good demand, some of the highest prices being recorded this week for many weeks past.

Choice feeders and stockers in good market, but a lot of thin stockers shipped in that are difficult to cash.

Choice milch cows and springers in good demand.

Choice veal calves firm and wanted, but too many heavy calves coming in.

Lambs firm and a little higher.
Hogs steady but firm.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

Death Removes Well Known Resident of Manvers Township

MILLBROOK, April 25. — By the passing of Robert Armstrong at his late residence on Friday last, at the age of 76 years, Manvers loses one of her best known and most highly respected citizens. Deceased was born in Ireland and when but an infant in arms came to this country.

About 40 years ago he married Miss Rosanna Harris, who predeceased him by thirty years. One son, Stanley, on the homestead, and two daughters, Mrs. T. H. Fallis of Manvers and Miss Cora Armstrong, at home, survive him. One sister, Miss Mary Armstrong, also survives him.

Deceased was a Methodist and a staunch Conservative and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral to Fallis' cemetery, Manvers, on Sunday, was largely attended.

Epworth League Notes.

The "Wordsworth" evening under the management of Miss Van Nest, was a splendid success. Miss Mary Higgs occupied the chair and gave a very interesting talk on the "Life of Wordsworth and His Influence on English Poetry." Miss May Dawson read the Scripture lesson and Miss Vera Bradshaw read a group of poems showing the poet's love of nature. Mr. Harold Dawson read "Nutting," and Mr. Bruce Dawson read three of Wordsworth's sonnets. The boys and girls from Miss Van Nest's room sang two nature songs, "Afton Water" and "The Last Rose of Summer."

Next Monday evening will be an Intercession service. All who have friends overseas are specially invited to join with the young people in this hour of prayer, from 8 to 9 o'clock.

The Late Mrs. James H. Peel.

The death of Mrs. Peel, (nee Mabel Etta Hoovey), took place in Millbrook on Saturday, Sept. 21st, at the age of 40 years.

Deceased was born in the township of Cartwright. She was married about twelve years ago. To this union two children were born. To Mr. Peel and children we extend sincere sympathy. Mrs. Peel was a member of the Methodist church and Ladies' Aid, Missionary Society and the Sunday school, in all of which she will be greatly missed.

The funeral to Gardener's cemetery on Sept. 23rd was largely attended, Rev. W. H. Higgs conducting the service at the house and grave. The floral offerings were beautiful, among them being a "sheaf" from the Ladies' Aid and a wreath from Miss Byam's Sunday school class.

Mr. Robt. Hayes, Miss Annie Hayes, of Omemee, were visitors to town last week. They were accompanied by Mr. A. W. Hayes and son, Master Bobbie.

Mrs. A. W. Hayes and children, Douglas and Donald, attended the school fair at Ida last week.

Next Sunday, Sept. 29, is Rally Sunday at the Methodist church Sunday school. A programme, entitled, "His Wonderful Name," will be given. Miss Needham and Mrs. F. J. Johnston will sing. Rev. W. H. Higgs will give a short address.

Miss Gladys Gray is attending the Normal school at Peterborough.

AMERICANS CAN'T JOIN THE C. E. F.

Order From Kingston Puzzles Officers at Ottawa and Rockcliffe.

OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—Under an order issued at divisional headquarters, Kingston, American citizens are not to be accepted for voluntary enlistment in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. An extract from the order, No. 166, which has appeared in the battalion orders at Rockcliffe Camp, reads:

"Pending further instructions, American citizens will not be accepted for voluntary enlistment in the Canadian Expeditionary Force."

No explanation of the order has been received by the officers at Rockcliffe Camp. Practically all of the Americans who have joined the Canadian forces recently have been taken on by the British Mission in New York.

TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Randles, Rothesay, Kings County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter. So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Kiss

By EVELYN MAY

If her husband had struck her in the face Margaret Blake could not have been more startled, amazed and spellbound. For a moment she fairly crumbled back. Then it seemed as if a sudden glory pervaded the little narrow hallway. For the first time in thirty years John Blake had kissed her.

"Oh, John!" she fluttered and the faded cheeks, yet soft as velvet, flushed pink and the lips quivered, and she felt as if she could die content, and then she seemed to grope her way blindly into the little parlor and sank to her knees, collapsing beside a chair and burst into tears.

"What a fuss a woman makes," she caught the tones of her husband outside and then, soft and tenderlike—"All the same, Margaret, you're the best wife a man ever had. Hello! I forget my cane."

He turned back into the hall and secured the article required. For a moment he halted. His glance was fixed upon the half-prostrate woman. Her hands were clasped above her head the tears were raining down her cheeks, her soul seemed soaring heavenwards as she uttered the words:

"It is worth all the longing and waiting of thirty years—oh! my one only love. Oh! life is sweet."

"H'm!" John Blake tried to mutter in his practical phlegmatic way, but the strong man was shaken. It was the first day in two weeks that John had been out of the house. He had recently overdone himself, was laid up with a bad attack of rheumatism and Margaret had nursed him.

A sense of her tireless attention, sleepless nights, poignant anxiety had overcome him as he left the house. A flash of the true worth of this devoted woman had caused that erratic impulse of sentiment.

How glorious it was to again bathe in the joyous sunlight, free from pain! How neat and prosperous the farm looked. Margaret had done double service as nurse, housekeeper and outdoor manager.

Margaret won a furtive, but half gratified glance from John as he arose at supper time that she wore one of the tidy white aprons, that had seemed so dainty and becoming in the earlier days of their married career.

"You mustn't overdo yourself, John remember," she said the next morning and accompanied him again to the door. There was something longing and wistful in her eyes.

"You aren't thinking of yesterday's nonsense, are you, Margaret?" he had laughed.

"Yesterday's nonsense kept me happy all day long, John," she said, her lips trembling.

"It's cheap and handy, anyway," said he, and went over and gave her a hearty smack.

"Haw, haw!" greeted John outside in the yard, in his gig, was his portly neighbor Joshua Griggs. He waved his whip boisterously.

"I say Blake," he hailed, "what's the occasion? Old sparking days over again?"

John was deeply chagrined. A frown came to his face.

"No harm done, is there?" he challenged angrily.

"What's the good, though? Why, I haven't kissed my wife in ten years. That soon wears out with the sex, Blake. Women get a man and forget everything except that he is a provider. Your wife drudges, mine gallivants—change, change, change. Never satisfied. Bah! the honeymoon over and they're practical critters."

"Perhaps if you kissed your wife once in a while she would drop so much gallivanting."

"Don't you criticize my wife!" blustered Griggs.

"I ain't. You did. Yes, I've made Margaret a drudge."

"And she's happy in it. Don't disturb her way."

"But I'm going to mend things, Joshua. I'm beginning to wonder if the humdrum way we sink into mere providers doesn't chill all that is lovely and natural in women folks."

"Margaret," said John the next day, "you're going to make a two-weeks' visit to your sister and her two little kids. You're going to bring them back here, for good. Miranda is having a hard time of it, and I see my duty plain to make it easier for the poor widow. With her help you won't be drudging your life out."

"Oh, John! the added burden for you, their care."

"A blessing, girl," declared John. "Those two little ones will make music in the house. There's going to be a change in affairs around here—phonograph, movies, new furniture, maybe an automobile. You're going to get something out of life, if it takes all I've got. Good-by. Two weeks, take a good rest and come back ready to enjoy the new life," was what John said when the next day Margaret was seated in the wagon bound for the depot.

He waved his hand airily. Margaret with beaming eyes leaned forward toward him. How enticing, how girlish, she looked!

"You've forgotten something," she whispered palpitatingly.

"Oh, yes!" he laughed, and merrily and with sparkling eyes, and a ready vim—"the kiss. There's two of them, Margaret. Heaven bless you!"

CANADIAN SHRINES.

Spots That the People of Our Land Should Visit.

How many Canadians know that the popular hymn, "What a Friend We Have In Jesus," was written by a resident of Port Hope, who spent the greater part of his life in Ontario, and was buried on the shores of Rice Lake? Joseph Scriven was an Irishman, and lived for a time in a cottage at Port Hope, and for another period was tutor in the family of Mr. Pengelley at Rice Lake. Though born in a comfortable Irish home, his later life in Canada was marked by straitened circumstances, and in the end, his mind weakened by depression and disappointment, he vanished from his room one night and his body was found in a nearby water.

Scriven tried to put into his own life the doctrines of the Sermon on the Mount. Mr. Sankey, the evangelist, in his "Story of the Gospel Hymns," relates this incident:

"One afternoon he was seen walking down the streets of Port Hope carrying a sawhorse and a saw. A gentleman standing by said to a friend: Do you know that man? I want someone to cut wood, and I find it difficult to get a sober man to do the work.' 'But you can't get that man,' was the reply. 'That is Mr. Scriven. He won't cut wood for you because you are able to pay for it. He saws wood only for poor widows and sick people who are unable to pay for the work.'"

Though Scriven published a small volume of hymns in 1869, strangely enough it did not include the hymn for which he is famous. His grave is in a wheat field on the farm of his former pupil, Mr. T. P. Pengelley. A. Wylie Mahon, who describes in Canada Weekly a pilgrimage to the shrine, contrasts the neglect of this spot with the public demonstration at the grave of a Nova Scotia giant and athlete. "Why is it," he asks, "that the giant who could do miracles of physical prowess is honored, and the poet who breathed out his soul into sacred song and awakened heavenly aspirations in many hearts is neglected? Is it that we Canadians think more of physical prowess than we do of spiritual greatness?"

The point is well taken. It is a lamentable fact that the shrines of Canada perish in neglect. Not far from Scriven's grave once lived Archibald Lampman, gentlest of Canadian singers. He is buried in Beechwood Cemetery in Ottawa, but how many pilgrims have visited the boulder on which his simple surname is carved? Haliburton, the author of "Sam Slick," and pioneer humorist of the continent, lived in a secluded portion of Nova Scotia. All over the country there are spiritual and patriotic inspirations of this kind were we but taught to find and venerate them. It is true we are a busy industrial and commercial people; and that at present we have the distraction of the greatest of wars. But if the war means anything it should bring more introspection and a keener consciousness of spiritual values.

Spruce for Planes.

So great is the demand for airplane spruce by the Allies that eastern as well as Sitka spruce is now being used. Canada has large resources of eastern spruce, which has hitherto been used mostly for the manufacture of pulp, paper and lumber, and the British War Mission is at present trying to secure in Eastern Canada as large an amount as possible of the grades suitable for airplane manufacture.

Eastern spruce has for some time been used for airplane construction in the United States, although only a very small percentage of this timber is sufficiently clear for this purpose. Tests made by the United States and Canadian Governments show that where material of suitable quality can be found, this species serves admirably for airplane construction and may be expected to supplement the supplies of Sitka spruce from the Pacific Coast, which are only now beginning to approach adequate proportions.

Sam to the Rescue.

The first sergeant was talking to his men about courtesy. "You men must have proper respect and care for all women, and if you ever see a woman in trouble, go to her rescue at once. Sam," he continued, addressing a tall negro in the rear rank, "supposing you were walking down the street and saw a big brute strike a woman in the face. What would you do?" "Sergeant," replied Sam, "Ah would look dat brute in de eye and say: 'Man, it am mighty lucky for you dat you didn't strike me!'"

Mother is Well Now

Your Noise Does Not Disturb Me Any More—It is a Pleasure to Hear You Romp and Play.

"IT is like a dream now to think of the long, weary months I spent in nervous helplessness. Some days I would be cheered by feeling better, but only to slip back again, and to be more than ever discouraged.

"I had always been very active. Had a wide acquaintance and did much entertaining. In addition to helping in whatever was going on at the church, there was Red Cross work to be done, and all the time I had my little family to look after and could not get help.

"I suppose I tried to do too much, for I got so I could not sleep at nights and always felt tired out in the mornings. Then I would have headaches and did not seem to care for my meals.

"Instead of the usual ambition and energy I found myself putting off the duties of the day. I got behind with the housework, and this worried me.

"I did not think that I was sick, but only tired. However, the time came when I did not get up in the morning. I simply could not. The doctor came and said, "Nervous Prostration." It seems I had kept on the go until the nervous system was wrung dry of all nerve force.

"Then came the long, weary weeks, and weeks dragged into months, without finding much improvement. I was completely discouraged and almost devoid of hope.

"But one day a friend told me of her experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and she was so sure that this treatment would do me good that I decided to give it a chance.

"I need scarcely say that there were some dark, discouraging days after beginning the use of the Nerve Food, but as my appetite and digestion improved I felt that I was gradually getting back the old-time vigor. Sleep became more natural and refreshing. The dark days passed and I began to take a more cheerful view of the future. Then I began to plan what I would do when I got around again. The house must be decorated and the children brought home, for I had to send them to my sister's on account of the way their noise disturbed me.

"Now I feel that I am entirely well again, and without hesitation give the credit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I cannot tell you the pleasure it gives me to be restored to my husband and children after the long period of helplessness."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Memorial Service Held in Hastings

HASTINGS, Sept. 25. — A memorial service for the late Lieut. Reginald Plant was held in the town hall on Sunday evening at the close of the church services. A very large gathering assembled to pay their last tribute of respect to the memory of so noble a boy, who at the call of duty willingly offered his services for the sake of freedom and friends. Dr. Hess, reeve, occupied the chair, and made a few remarks after which the local clergy addressed the audience, every one speaking in most commendatory terms of the life and character of the young hero, and expressed their deepest sympathy for the family who had been so sadly bereaved.

Passengers going by the G. T. R. to Peterboro on Wednesday morning experienced considerable delay by the wreck near Birdsall's Station. The morning train due here at 7 o'clock carried the passengers to the scene of the wreck, where they were transferred to a waiting train, and conveyed to the city. The return journey was not quite so full of adventure as the road was so far repaired as to allow the cars to pass over.

Funeral Sunday.

The funeral of the late Pearl Glen of Percy, was held on Sunday afternoon from her late residence to the Trent Valley Cemetery. Deceased was just in the prime of life and was stricken with tuberculosis which caused her early demise. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved father and brothers.

Miss Hawkins of Percy, is staying at the parsonage with Mr. and Mrs. (Rev.) Snell.

Mrs. Blackbourne and children left during the week for a visit with friends in Lindsay.

Mrs. Fisher took a trip to Peterboro on Wednesday.

Mrs. Prest has returned from a pleasant visit with friends in Peterboro.

Mrs. Arthur Knight and son, Wilfred spent Wednesday in Peterboro.

Mrs. Harold Beavis returned on Monday from a visit with friends Lindsay.

Mr. Whitley of Toronto, is spending a few days in town.

Miss Jessie Wilcox is on a visit to friends in Lindsay.

Mr. T. Crowley has been unfortunate in losing three or four head of young cattle, which had been infected with some fatal disease, apparently not quite understood by the government inspector, who was called to make an investigation.

Rev. D. A. Thompson was in Roseneath on Sunday, taking the service there.

Dr. and Mrs. Wade of Roseneath, were in town on Sunday.

Mrs. W. Gould is on a visit with friends in Campbellford.

Mr. Cecil Dorsee of Norwood, spent Sunday under the parental roof.

Mr. Wall of Peterboro called on Tuesday.

Miss Chatterson of Western Canada, is visiting friends in town, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hess.

STRANGE EPIDEMIC HITS QUEBEC TOWN

THREE HUNDRED STUDENTS AT COLLEGE ARE SICK—THREE DEATHS HAVE RESULTED.

QUEBEC, Sept. 23.—An epidemic of what is supposed to be Spanish influenza is raging at Victoriaville, Que. where the 300 students at the college are reported to be sick. The fact is that the college has been quarantined for the last week, all the scholars being gradually sent home after disinfection. So far two of the teaching brothers have died, Brother Donat and Brother Pierre. A student has also succumbed.

Morgue statistics to-day show that in the course of the last few days nine sailors have died on ships in the harbor of Quebec, apparently from Spanish influenza. The bodies are shipped to the homes of the men, mostly in the United States.

CHANGE OF WATER CAUSED DIARRHOEA

People moving from one place to another are very much subject to diarrhoea on account of the change of water, change of climate, change of diet, etc., and what at first appears to be but a slight looseness of the bowels should never be neglected or some serious bowel complaint will be sure to follow.

The safest and quickest cure for diarrhoea dysentery, colic, cholera infantum, cholera morbus, pains in the stomach, sickness and all looseness of the bowels is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mr. T. T. Allard, Parry Sound, Ont., writes: "In the fall of 1914 I was working on the new 'Chiclet Gum' factory, on Carlaw Ave., in Toronto, when I had a violent attack of diarrhoea, owing, I think to the change of water. One of the foremen advised me to get a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I did, with the result that I hadn't taken it all before I was completely cured."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Wild Strawberry has been a national remedy for the past 72 years, and is sold by medicine dealers everywhere at 35c. a bottle. Don't let anyone palm off a substitute on you. When you pay your money for the genuine, you've a right to get it. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SMELTING IN EXCELSIS

Canada's Only Refining Centre

The Great Smelter at Trail, B.C.

ALTHOUGH, as is well known, a world-wide attention was first directed to British Columbia by reason of the discoveries in the late "fifties" and early "sixties" of alluvial gold in the Fraser river and in the streams of the Cariboo district—and for many years a rich harvest was reaped from these sources mining as an important basic industry of the Province—and it is now by far the most important industry in British Columbia—was not, fairly launched until nearly forty-five years later; and the building of the Trail smelter in 1896 by that brilliant young American financier and copper king, F. Auguste Heinze, not only made Rossland, whose mines have since produced gold, silver and copper to the value of $70,000,000 in round figures, but had the effect of enormously stimulating mineral development and the investment of capital in mining in other sections of the province. But Heinze was essentially a business man, and in establishing his smeltery was certainly not actuated by philanthropic or eleemosynary motives. It was no part of his plan to operate the smelter for the profit of anyone but himself. Hence although he received a land grant from the Provincial Government as a consideration for the construction of the smelter and of a narrow-guage railway to afford connection between the works at Trail and the mines at Rossland, and also obtained an assurance from the Dominion Government of a bonus of a dollar on each ton of ore treated, he also took care that the rate imposed on the treatment of customs ores should be a tolerably stiff one. In fact ere long, as the development of the mines progressed and it became necessary to market ore of a lower grade average, the margin of profit left to the miners after paying treatment charges became considerably restricted; and consequently the satisfaction was very general when in 1898 the reduction works and railway were acquired by the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the rates were at once reduced very materially. It is fair, however, to state that the new owners were in a much better position to undertake to smelt at a lower cost owing to the great cheapening of fuel following the development of the Crowsnest coalfield. In 1906, the smelter became the property of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada, which also acquired at that time the War Eagle, Centre Star group of mines at Rossland, the St. Eugene lead mine at Moyie and other properties, (which since have been further augmented); and the capacity of the plant was greatly increased, so that the undertaking now ranks as one of the largest and most important of its kind in the British Empire. This is attested by the fact that the smelter has treated to date 5,179,307 tons of ore having a gross value of $54,315,754 and representing 1,778,921 oz. gold, 27,500,770 oz. silver, 455,326,524 lb. lead, 75,047,410 lb. copper, and 25,056,996 lb. zinc.

The site of the smelter was admirably selected having regard to engineering and commercial considerations and requirements on an elevated terrace of gravelly soil overlooking the Columbia river, an only a few miles distant are the magnificent Falls of Bonnington, from which the plant derives its power. Moreover, ore can be shipped for treatment to this centre most readily and advantageously from the various localities in both West and East Kootenay, and indeed from much farther afield. In consequence the Trail smelter has become almost a national institution, since in recent years it has treated in addition to British Columbia lead, zinc and copper ores ores from the Yukon, Manitoba and Ontario, from the United States and from China. From quite small beginnings the works have been expanded until they now cover many acres of ground and when working at full capacity give employment to 2,500 men, a large proportion of whom are necessarily skilled. In this article it is not proposed to go into technical details, but it may be stated briefly that the main smelting plant consists of four copper blast-furnaces, four lead blast-furnaces, and two 12 ft. basic-lined converters, the product of which is refined locally, employing electrolytic methods. This latter, perhaps, is the most interesting part of the story; and as a national achievement reflects the greatest possible credit on those responsible for its successful establishment. Before the war the only useful metal in refined form produced in Canada was lead, which was exclusively undertaken at Trail; but all our copper and our zinc, both being by the way essential metals in the manufacture of munitions are shipped out of the country as matte, or in other unfinished state, to be refined, and then to satisfy our own requirements for these metals in finished or unmanufactured form we repurchased at, of course, a vastly enhanced price representing the profits of manufacture in a foreign country plus the import duty. All of which was the reverse of good business. But the war, which has had so stimulative an effect on the national energies in general, influenced action beneficially in this direction also; and upon the urging of the Munition Board those in charge of the Trail smelter set to work with a will, and succeeded after much experimentation in producing refined zinc electrolytically on a commercial scale. The plant now in operation has a capacity of from 60 to 70 tons of spelter daily, and last year produced 10,000 tons of zinc, having a value of $3,000,000 which, as is stated in an official report, marks "an epoch in the metallurgical history of Canada." So also with the refining of copper, which before the war was on many sides pronounced to be an undertaking that could not economically be conducted in Canada, but which during the past two years has been most successfully carried on at Trail, the two copper converters installed in 1916 enabling the matte from the copper furnaces that previously had been shipped away for further treatment, to be converted into blister-copper, which in turn is refined electrolytically in a plane which had an initial capacity of 10 tons daily, but which since has been enlarged to handle twice that amount. Other products of the smelter are copper sulphate, lead pipe, shrapnel, wire, gold, silver, sulphuric acid, and hydrofluosilicic acid. In short, it is now as complete a metallurgical works as there is on the continent, and as such has played a most important and useful role in furnishing the metals needed for munition making in Canada, thus contributing materially to the effectiveness of the Dominion's war efforts. Nor does this complete its record for patriotic achievement. Since its proudest boast is that it has an honor roll on which is inscribed the names of something like three hundred of its employees, who enlisted voluntarily for overseas service early in the war. Among these are several members of the engineering staff, all of whom have won distinction for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty in the battlefields of France and Flanders.—N. L.

Conscientiousness in Parents Covers a Multitude of Mistakes. Young People, Like Their Elders, Want to be Understood. They Want Frankness.

—Says FERN HOWARD

"I never deserved such ingratitude. I have clothed and educated, fed and trained my child. I have been a conscientious mother and she has never shown me the slightest gratitude. She has kept secrets from me and now has married this worthless, fellow without even asking my advice. Why are children so ungrateful?"

It was the woman sitting in front of me in the train that was speaking. Please do not accuse me of listening to a conversation that did not concern me, for I assure you that her tones were so harsh that I should have had to go to the other end of the car to avoid hearing her.

Just then I reached my destination and left the train. But the remarks of that strange mother set me to thinking. And to all you good mothers who have failed to win the gratitude of your children, I would say, that there is some reason. Conscientious parents can be very difficult parents and conscientiousness may cover a multitude of mistakes. You have failed, somehow, to understand them. Young people, like their elders, like to be understood, and when you fail to understand them, ingratitude may come.

"I never lived according to my own preferences until I had grown to manhood and left the home of my parents," said a pastor in my presence recently. "They never understood me."

How wearying to the spirit, must have been this man's childhood, how difficult for him to have attained to a wholesome and generous attitude toward life.

What is more conducive to greatness than a free and unrestricted childhood, where the love and understanding of parents is added to the many charms of childhood! Lincoln had the woods to grow in and the wild things of nature to teach him wisdom as well as the inspiration of a great mother.

If you want your children to grow and develop into independent, self dependent characters, give them their freedom. Give them room to develop in. Teach them obedience. Always appeal to their own sense of honor, their own pride, self-control and ideals. No tyranny or repression on the part of a parent can develop fine spirit in a child.

Mutual confidence, a spirit of fair play and co-operation, and that rare working out of everyday sense, that many forget, are things sure to guide you in the building of the lives that you have sacrificed so much for.

A child's spirit should never be broken. But it can be developed, enlarged, and made a wonderful medium for enduring happiness in the home and in the world.

PRINCE OF HESS SEES THRONE FADING AWAY

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 25.—Prince Frederick Charles of Hess, a brother-in-law of Emperor William, has been urged "by high quarters," according to the Socialist newspaper Volkstimme of Frankfort, to leave the question of the Finnish throne in suspension and agree to accept the office of administrator of the kingdom for five years. The prince, the newspaper says has not yet accepted the proposal.

FORTY ARMED GERMANS DEMAND LONE GROOM ACCEPT THEIR SURRENDER

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 25.—A British brigadier general left his groom near a quarry which he supposed had been cleared of the Germans and went forward to watch the advance of his men.

When he returned he found the perplexed groom surrounded by forty armed Germans, demanding that the groom accept their surrender.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head and ear noises, or are growing hard of hearing go to your druggist and get one ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it 1-4 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

ACCIDENTS TO AIRMEN.

Reassuring Figures Supplied by the Royal Air Force.

There have been so many rumors from time to time regarding the loss of life in the Canadian aviation schools that the authorities recently went into the matter and prepared a statement on the subject. The figures secured by them are very reassuring. The records showed that over a period dating back from June 30 and covering 36,253 flights, there had been 33 total losses of machines, five cases of two or more longerons being broken, twenty-one cases of one longeron being broken, and 69 cases of undercarriage of plane being broken, injuries repairable by the squadron in a very short time. These accidents were responsible for 36 admissions to hospital, including seven fatalities, equal to one fatality per 19.38 hours, or 5,179 flights, and one admission to hospital per 377 hours, or 1,007 flights.

On the records of the R.A.F. for the period mentioned those accidents have been categorized as follows, no attention being paid to the class "D" crashes, which were only minor ones, resulting in no admission to hospital:

	With injury to pilot or passenger.	Without injury to pilot or passenger.	Total.
1. Aeroplane defect—
(a) Breakage	..	..	..
(b) Engine failure	6	..	6
(c) Faulty rigging	..	1	1
2. Error of judgment—
(a) Poor flying not due to instruction	14	16	30
(b) Poor flying, probably due to instruction.	2	..	2
3. Loss of head	6	4	10
4. Brain fatigue	..	..	..
5. Fear	..	..	..
6. Physical illness	..	..	..
7. Unavoidable	4	2	6
8. Disobeying orders.	4	..	4
	35	23	59

In the instances of forced landings, said a Flying Corps officer, error of judgment was frequently a strong contributory cause, and the majority of accidents occurred in that period of a cadet's training when he became over-confident. Other accidents were due to sudden weakness or mental inertia suddenly overtaking the pilots in the air. He further stated that, in the matter of accidents the training system in Canada would compare favorably with that in England.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISS' OR SMALL WOMAN'S DRESS.

There is a certain dash about this girlish frock with the ruffle peplum which will appeal to the average miss. The design illustrated in No. 8841 is suitable for a number of different materials, such as French serge, prunella, taffeta, silk poplin, or in the cotton materials—voile, batiste or embroidery flouncing. The waist is cut so that it fits the figure slightly, for there are no gathers at the waistline. The round collar is a very attractive shape, and it outlines the vest as far as the short belt at the front. The two piece skirt has two short peplums gathered to it.

The miss' and small woman's dress pattern No. 8841 is cut in three sizes—16, 18 and 20 years. Width at lower edge is 1¾ yards. The 16 year size requires 4⅞ yards 36 inch, or 3⅛ yards 54 inch material.

Lemon Juice For Freckles

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautiler, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

ATTILA SURPASSED.

London Chronicle.

The Crown Prince of Germany for the moment out-Huns his sire. The Kaiser, in the message to his people, which most of us have read, felicitates them, in chastened mood, upon having escaped the horror of war in their own land. The Crown Prince, explaining his gigantic failure on the Marne, bid his father's subjects rejoice in victory, for "another region of France has been devastated." Attila, the Kaiser's idol, put his method of warfare into a phrase, "Grass never grows where my horse has once trodden."

Bolshevism in Bulgarian Army

with Nazim Pasha, one of the new Ottoman Ministers.

Other evidence of a changed policy in Turkey is found by observers here in the remarkable fact that the present Grand Vizier, Talaat Bey, taking advantage of the elimination of Russia has persisted in carrying on independent military offensive in the Caucasus. It is known here that the Turkish insistence in this daring campaign has met with strong opposition in Germany, where it is, of course, foreseen that in connection with circumstances elsewhere it would probably bar Germany's alternative route into Asia as effectively as the interposition of resurrected Serbia and Roumania would close the road through Asia Minor. It must be admitted that Aalaat's policy has proved successful to the extent that it has enabled the Turks to obtain possession of Baku. Whether they will be allowed to retain it will depend upon many other factors.

Turkey Asserting Her Independence.

The fact that this campaign is being pursued at all, however, is regarded here as evidence that Turkey is resolved to resume at least a part of her independence of German control and that she may have decided to relinquish, if only for the time being, the hope of retaining Palestine and content herself with compensatory territorial gains at the expense of moribund Russia. The suggestion opens up quite new perpectives as to the arrangement of the new map of Turkey.

It is significant of the modifications that have evidently occurred in the relations of Germany and Turkey that, after Talaat's visit to Berlin a few days ago, a telegram of an apparently inspired character which reached Paris from Geneva yesterday said that "in anticipation of military events which may lead Germany to disinterest herself in Turkey, or Turkey to seek support from Germany, the Ottoman Minister to Berne has come to an agreemen with certain Swiss firms in regard to carrying on business in Turkey."

AMERICAN PROPERTY SEIZED IN GERMANY

Total to Date as Compiled from the Official Gazette, is About $14,000,000.

—NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—In view of the many inquiries that have been made regarding American property seized in Germany, the list was issued yesterday. According to the table made by C. H. Huberich, a lawyer of 15 Park Row, from the German Official Gazette, a total of 105 American owned business houses and branches and estates have been seized in Germany. The value of the property is estimated at less than $14,000,000, while the German property seized in this country is more than fifty times that amount, according to an estimate made at the offices of the Alien Property Custodian. This is an exclusive of the German ships seized by the Government.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1918

"TANK" FORTS ARE NOW USED

A New Mechanical Obstruction—German Officer Tells a Striking Story.

"WE ARE DEFEATED"

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 26.— Germany is reported to have prepared a new mechanical obstruction to supplement her waning morale and man power. According to escaped Britishers and German prisoners at certain places in this zone, "tank forts" have been built. They are designed to meet ever increasing menace of Allied war chariots. They constitute well embanked gun positions. Their armament includes field guns, trench mortars, tank rifles and machine guns designed to operate together.

But it will take something better than "tank forts" to save this line if a German under officer, captured a few days ago, tells the truth. His picture of conditions behind the enemy lines is striking. "The last blow has opened the eyes of the common soldier to the break-up of German military supremacy," he said.

Admit Defeat.

"We are defeated, and know it. I doubt, however, whether the German soldiers yet uncaptured realize how crushing this defeat is. Coming through your lines I saw things I could scarcely believe. Such transport, such horses, such men. Those masses of artillery compared with our wretched iron-wheeled transport skidding all over the place and blocking the roads in wet weather, our scanty, badly fed horses; boys pretending to be Guards (he was a member of the Second Guards)— all emphasize the terrible contrast in the condition of the opposing armies. We still have a certain amount of artillery, but you must have five guns to our one. We are well off as regards shells, but you seem to have an endless supply. Germany is defeated. The sooner she recognizes the fact the better. But you will have to admit that we put up a good fight. No nation could have done more.

A CRISIS IN BULGARIA

Ministerial Crisis is Impending as Result of Allied Victory on That Front.

THE FOREIGN POLICY

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 26.— From Paris come reports that a ministerial crisis is impending in Bulgaria and that there may be a complete change in the foreign policy of that country. The present premier, M. Malineff, was favourable to the Allies before Bulgaria entered the war as an ally of the Central Powers. It is possible that the Allied victory in Macedonia may be reflected in political developments of the most important character in Bulgaria.

Speech Arouses Little Comment

New York World Says President Wilson's Terms are Clear and Must Stand.

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Chancellor Hertling's address to the Reichstag has aroused little comment here, his familiar generalities making no impression. The "World" epitomizes the prevailing view, reiterating that Germany having forced war upon the American army, will not be ready to discuss peace until Germany's armies are whipped and Prussian military destroyed. As soon as that is accomplished the American people expect to have a great deal to say about peace and it will be their own kind of peace.

The Times says President Wilson's terms are clear and must stand, and that the nation with all its reserves will give the President loyal support in his aims.

A Strange Speech.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 26. —It appears from reports of yesterday's session of the Reichstag Main committee in Berlin that Adolph Groeber, one of the Centrist leaders, delivered a speech before that body which is interpreted as being somewhat antagonistic to Chancellor Von Hertling, who himself is Centrist and has heretofore had that party's support. Groeber's attitude was a surprise.

Mrs. James Lewis,
579 Aylmer Street,
Peterboro, Ont.:

Dear Mrs. Lewis: I am writing to give you particulars of the death of your son, Pte. A. J. Lewis of this unit, who was killed on the night of Sept. 3rd, official notification of which has I am sure, reached you before this letter can.

Your son was on that night at our Advanced Dressing Station unloading stretcher cases on the trucks of a small trench railway. A heavy action was in progress and the area was being shelled, although nothing had fallen very near the station. About 4 a.m., a shell pitched in, killing your son instantly and also killing and wounding several of the others of the party. Your son was killed instantly. His body was brought into the station, and was buried the next day in an adjacent military cemetery by an army chaplain.

I feel his loss very keenly, as ever since he came to me as a reinforcement in May last, his work has been excellent.

Allow me to offer you my sincerest sympathy in your loss.

Yours very sincerely,

French Opened New Attack on Champagne Front in Co-operation With Americans

New Attack, if Successful, Will Threaten Communication Lines in the Rear of the Hindenburg Defence System—Initial Successes.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS (Official), Sept. 26.—Between the Ailette and the Aisne the Germans renewed their attacks last evening in the region of Allemant and at Moulin-Laffaux. The enemy succeeded at the latter point in penetrating the French lines but an energetic counter-attack by the French re-established the situation. Further south the French have enlarged their gains east of Saucy and have taken prisoners. This morning at 5 o'clock, French troops attacked on the Champagne front in co-operation with the American army operating further to the east.

The New Attack.

The French-American attack on the Champagne front is the first Allied thrust made on that sector since Marshal Foch assumed the initiative in July, and is the result of the Allied success in Picardy in driving the Germans back to the Hindenburg line from Arras to Laon. A drive northward in Champagne threatens communication lines in the rear of the Hindenburg defence system where the Germans are struggling to keep the British and French from breaking through. While the length of the front of attack is not disclosed, it is probable it extends a good part of the distance from Rheims to Verdun, and probably beyond.. Military critics have pointed out that the Champagne front was the logical place where an Allied effort intended to destroy the effectiveness of the Hindenburg line could be made.

Counter Attack Repulsed.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Sept. 26.—Northwest of St. Quentin, British troops continued the pressure against the German defences and have captured enemy strongholds in the neighbourhood of Selency and Gricourt, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. Renewed German attacks north of the Aisne have been repulsed.. At one point where the Germans gained a foothold upon the French positions, they were ejected by counter attacks. In Flanders the British line has been advanced, progress having been made in the sector north of LaBassee.

The Statement Reads.

Local operations were continued successfully in the afternoon and during the night northwest of St. Quentin. English troops progressed and captured certain strongly defended localities in the neighbourhood of Selency and Gricourt, together with a number of prisoners. In addition to the counter attacks also reported which were launched by the enemy yesterday northwest of Fayet, his troops twice attacked on the positions north of Gricourt. These attacks were unsuccessful. A successful minor operation was carried out yesterday by enemy troops northwest of La-Bassee as the result of which the line was advanced and over 100 prisoners were taken. A counter attack launched by the enemy in this locality during the night was repulsed and several prisoners were taken.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(Official). — The German airdromes at Buhel, 25 miles south-west of Karlsruhe, and Kaiser's Lautern, between Metz and Mannsem, have been bombed by machines of the British independent air force. Fighting took place during the evening, with the result that two enemy machines were destroyed. Three of the British machines are missing.

The Toronto Markets

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards here this morning were 53 cars, containing 7,756 cattle, 102 calves, 1,048 hogs and 1,260 sheep and lambs. Trade quite active and prices generally steady. Lambs weaker. Export cattle $14.50 to $16.50; export bulls, $9.75 to $10.50; butchers' cattle $11 to $12; butchers' cows $9.50 to $10.50; butchers' bulls $7.75 to $8.50; feeding steers $8.55 to $10.50; sheep, ewes $14.50 to $15; lambs $16.75 to $17.25; hogs, fed and watered $19.50 to $19.75; calves $18 to $18.25.

DON'T DESTROY FRUIT.

Government Experts Explain How to Rid Bottled Fruit of Phenol.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—After an investigation the Canada Food Board has come to the conclusion that the rubber bands used on preserving jars, infected with phenol, do not harm the fruit, and that any fruit preserved in such jars must not be destroyed. The objectionable odour and taste will disappear after 24 hours' exposure to the air, leaving the preserves perfectly suitable for human consumption. There is no need to destroy any such fruit, as it has not been harmed.

The Allied Forces Have Entered Bulgarian Territory

British Are Within Four Miles of Important Bulgarian Base—First Bulgarian Army Cut Off.

IMPORTANT GAINS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The important Bulgarian centre of Istip has been captured by the Allied troops, according to despatches received from the Salonika front to-day.

Instip is in Serbian territory, eighteen miles east of Veles and thirty miles north-west of Stroumitza. It is 25 miles north of the nearest point of the Serbo-Grecian frontier.

BULGARIANS DESERT.

LONDON, Sept. 26. — German troops are continually firing on Bulgarians who desert from the battle line, it was officially announced by the Serbian War Office in the communication received here to-day. German prisoners, according to the communication, complain that the Bulgarians intentionally abandoned great numbers of German-made machine guns.

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, Sept. 26. —British troops entered Bulgarian territory opposite Kosturino yesterday, it was officially announced yesterday.

Kosturino is on the main Stroumitsa-Donran highway, two miles within Bulgarian territory and four miles directly south of the important Bulgarian centre of Stroumitza.

Official Report.

LONDON, Sept. 26.—(Official.)—Reports in official quarters here indicate that the Prilep-Veles road has been cut at Izvor, isolating the first Bulgarian army from its main line of communication and placing it in a precarious position. The first army is on the Allied left.

North of Prilep the Serbains are pursuing the Bulgarians into a complete retreat and are approaching Izvor, midway between Prilep and Veles.

Bulgaria Invaded.

Canadian Press:

SALONIKA, Sept. 26.—(Official.) — Bulgaria has been invaded by Allied troops. British troops entered Bulgarian territory opposite Kosturino, about six miles south of Strumitza, the enemy base in this region. At Troyatsi the Bulgarians burned their depots and fires spread to the hospital, with the result that more than 10 Bulgarian wounded perished. A horse hospital also was destroyed by fire. We have liberated more than 50 Greek and 10 Italian soldiers who had been captured. It is confirmed that the Bulgarians continue to commit atrocities on our soldiers when they fall into their hands. One of our patrols of four men was found near the village of Veputchiana horribly done to death. Our aviators have used their machine guns very effectively against retreating enemy troops.

Bulgarians Encircled.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 26.—Advices received in Serbian diplomatic circles here to-day show that the Bulgarian troops in the region of Lake Ochrida, toyards the western end of the Macedonian front are virtually encircled by the Italians advancing in the direction of Kichevo, and the Franco-Serbian force moving from Monastir towards Krushevo. The fall of Krushevo is expected hourly.

Serbian troops reached the outskirts of Ishtib, an important Bulgarian base, on Tuesday, says a Serbian official statement. Elsewhere east of the Vardar the Serbians have made important gains.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 26.— As soon as the new Serbian front has been established, the Serbian government will be removed either to Monastir or Prilep, the Serbian Minister to France stated to-day.

Huns' Latest Peace Flyer

Hertling's Speech Put in the Same Category as the Austrian Note.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Germany's latest peace flyer—Hertling's speech—was dismissed by officials to-day as summarily as its more concrete predecessor, the Austrian note. They promptly branded it as insincere and pointed to the whole course of German military and diplomatic policy for proof of their claim that this is only another German effort to squeeze out of the war with the best possible bargain before added forces put the finishing touches on the Teuton dream of world conquest.

THE POPE'S REPLY.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 26.— A diplomatic courier is reported to have left Rome with Pope Benedict's reply to the Austrian peace note. It is said to be a simple declaration of neutrality.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

Swinging to the east and west from the line followed in their first plunge throughout the Bulgarian lines in Macedonia, the Allied armies are engaging in a turning movement which appears to be of equal, if not greater importance, than their continuous advance northward towards Veles and Islet. On the west the Serbians and French have passed Prilep and are advancing along the roads toward Krushevo and Kichevo, which are in the foothills of the mountains separating Serbia from Albania, and north of Prilep they are moving toward Veles. On the right the Allies have enlarged their bridgehead on the east side of the Vardar, and are on the range of hills between the Vardar and the Kriva Lakavitza River, which parallels the Vardar on the east. It is officially reported that the Bulgarians are crossing the Kriva Lakavitka. Further north the Massif of Popadija, east of the Babuna Pass, has been taken by the Serbians. Babuna Pass is a rocky defence through which the Vardar flows to the Aegean Sea and presents a difficult problem to the Allies.

FUEL REGULATIONS

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Fuel Commissioner Chisholm means business. The regulation forbidding any citiben having more than 70 per cent. of his regular winter supply is apparently not to be allowed to remain a "dead letter." At least when definite information is received by the Commissioner that such is the case. This was shown to-day when an order was sent to a certain dealer to remove several tons of coal from the cellar of a residence where more than the allotment had been delivered. The order was imperative to take the coal from the cellar. This is the first time that such drastic action has been taken in Toronto. The Commissioner emphasized in the strongest possible manner the necessity of every citizen conserving coal to the utmost. The people of Toronto, he declared, did not realize the seriousness of the fuel situation throughout Canada and the United States. "In Massachusetts," he declared, "the people have been forbidden to light fires until the 1st of December. Not even wood may be used until that date, and Massachussetts is a cold State. That will serve to indicate how real the coal shortage is.

"I would strongly advise those whose houses are equipped with hot water appliances should by all means lay in a supply of soft coal, while those who have 50 per cent. of their supply of hard coal should make up the other 20 per cent. with soft."

Mrs. Whatley Is Bereaved

Her Brother, Gunner H. Parfitt, Is Killed in Action.

Mrs. Whatley, wife of Secretary Sidney Whatley, of the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, received word yesterday that her brother, Gunner H. Parfitt, had been killed in action on August 27th. Gunner Parfitt, who was serving with the Royal Artillery, had been in France for over three years.

Have Not Heard of Regulations

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—"We haven't heard of the new Fuel Controller regulations of which you speak, but of course we will carry them out," was the general attitude of the industrial coal dealers when a reporter drew their attention to the latest rules sent out from Ottawa to avert anything like an industrial fuel famine or a private famine this fall and winter.

PAPER COLLECTION A BIG SUCCESS

The paper collection of the Patriotic League of Ashburnham yesterday was a great success, over a car and one-quarter of paper being collected in the city. The result will be a considerable increase in the funds of the League, and the proceeds will be used to send boxes of comforts to the Peterborough boys overseas. If any citizens who have saved their paper for the League were not called upon yesterday, they would confer a favour on the League officers by telephoning 264J or 1361.

COTTAGE PRAYER MEETINGS WILL CLOSE TO-MORROW NIGHT

As to-morrow night will be the last of the Evening Cottage Prayer Meetings, prior to the opening of the Evangelistic Campaign, I wish to urge the fullest possible co-operation and attendance for this last night.

Let nothing of lesser importance hinder you from coming to one of them, and between now and to-morrow night making some personal effort to awaken interest in some friend who has not yet attended.

I appreciate very much indeed the co-operative effort of each who have helped to make these prayer services the success they have been and feel confident that the fruit of this united effort will be encouragingly manifest during the special evangelistic services.

Shall we unite to make this last night of prayer and spirtiual preparation a splendid and telling climax? DO YOUR BIT.

A. G. DONER,
Chairman of Spiritual Preparation Committee.

OBSTACLES TO PEACE

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 26.—Philip Scvheidemann, Majority Socialist leader, addressing the Main Committee of the Reichstag, declared that General Von Ludendorff and not Chancellor Von Hertling rules in Germany. He said that Germany is suffering now because she undervalued her enemies. "I regard the Brest-Litovsk treaty as an obstacle to peace," said Scheidemann. "This king-making business in the East must terminate.

"The dismissal of former Foreign Secretary Von Kuehlmann was detrimental to peace. When he uttered words displeasing to the military party he immediately disappeared.

"This sort of thing cannot continue. We must confess openly that General Von Ludendorff now rules, not Chancellor Von Hertling.

"So far as Belgium is concerned we ought to have spoken sooner and differently.

"The submarine warfare has linked American against us."

EFFORT TO STAMP OUT THE DISEASE

Canadian Press:

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — The stamping out of Spanish influenza, which has extended to more than a score of army camps and many sections of the country, has been recognized by the Government as a war measure. Medical and nursing units to-day were mobilized in communities where the epidemic has gained considerable headway under the general direction of a central committee representing the public health service, the army, navy and the American Red Cross.

"You Just Make Me Feel Reckless"

This is what Ruth Hackett said to her husband during his constant fits of jealousy.

Ruth was entirely innocent of flirting with another man. But all that she could say in self-defense, would not shake Brian Hackett's unreasonable suspicions.

And we all know that "what's the use?" feeling that comes when we have "the name without the game"—that feeling that we might just as well have the game!

But does Brian actually drive Ruth to a point of recklessness where she is foolish enough to smile upon another man? Or does her strong, fine womanhood stand guard against such folly?

You can find out by reading "THE WIFE" which starts shortly in The Examiner.

WHY GASOLINE MUST BE SAVED.

Some people pretend to believe that there is no necessity for saving gasoline and use this as an excuse for ignoring the request to eliminate Sunday motoring. The vital necessity of building up a reserve and reducing the amount used for pleasure motoring to a minimum is shown by the warning issued by the United States War Department which pointed out that the result of a battle might depend upon the speed and effectiveness of the motor transport. Already the United States requires the enormous quantity of half a million gallons daily for the transport service, and by next spring the daily amount needed will have increased to over one million gallons. To ensure that there shall be no shortage there must be an ample reserve on hand for weeks ahead.

The serious feature of the situation is that in spite of the utmost exertions of those in charge of the oil industry, production is not keeping pace with the demand, and unless the amount used for non-essential purposes is considerably curtailed there may eventually be a shortage that will cripple war effort.

Canada depends upon the United States for her supply of gasoline. When our neighbours to the south have loyally accepted the request of the authorities to do away with Sunday motoring, Canadians have no other course than to adopt the same measure and to carry it out as enthusiastically as it has been done across the line.

If the voluntary campaign is not a success, compulsory measures will undoubtedly have to be taken.

Peterborough motorists did well last Sunday. This week end should see even more improvement.

WAR COMMANDMENTS.

The economic and social section of the league of Patriots in France has issued a code of rules for the guidance of the French people. These ten commandments while written for the French civilian population are equally applicable to Canadians. Especially at this time when the people of Canada are being urged to practice thrift to the fullest possible extent is it is French guide worthy of being followed by every citizen of the Dominion.

The ten commandments as circulated in France run as follows:

"(1) Do not forget that we are at war. In your smallest expenditures never lose sight of the interests of the native land.

"(2) Economize on the products necessary for the life of the country: Coal, bread, meat, sugar, milk, wine, butter, beans, cloths, leather, oil. Accept rations. Ration yourself as to food, clothing and amusements.

"(3) Save the products of French soil, lest some day you deprive your father, your son, your husband, who are shedding their blood to defend you.

"(4) Save the products that France must buy from foreign countries. Do not drain reserves of gold which are indispensable to victory.

"(5) Waste nothing. All waste is a crime which imperils the national defence—prolongs the war.

"(6) Buy only according to your needs. Do not hoard provisions; your selfishness raises prices and deprives those of smaller means of things indispensable to existence.

"(7) Do not travel unnecessarily. Reflect that our trains are, before all, destined for the transportation of the troops, the feeding of the population, the needs of our national production.

"(8) Do not remain idle. According to your age and your ability work for your country. Do not consume without producing. Idleness is desertion.

"(9) Accept without murmuring the privations which are imposed upon you. Reflect upon the sufferings of those who are fighting for you, upon the martyrdom of the population whose hearths have been devastated by the enemy.

"(10) Remember that victory belongs to those who can hold out a quarter of an hour the longest.

"That France may live, she must be victorious."

HELP THE HUTS.

The campaign on behalf of the Knights of Columbus Army Hut Fund, which opens in Peterborough on Monday, has as its objective the sum of $6,000, which should easily be raised in the city. In other Canadian cities where similar campaigns have already been held the project has been enthusiastically endorsed by all classes of the community, and there has been no difficulty in reaching the mark aimed at.

In Toronto, where the campaign opens next Wednesday, Protestant citizens are uniting with their Roman Catholic brethren in the organization of the big drive. Protestant business men are members of the committees, and at the mass meeting in Massey Hall at which the campaign will be launched, a choir selected from all the Protestant churches in Toronto will provide music.

Patriotism and an earnest desire to help our soldiers overseas have resulted in a striking example of church union on behalf of the Army Hut campaign.

Admirable reasons why the Knights of Columbus hut plan should be supported are given by Mr. Ralph Connable, publicity director of the Toronto campaign.

"The Y.M.C.A. huts in France are open at all times to boys of every denomination," says Mr. Connable, "but there is no place where the Roman Catholic boys can go and make confession of their sins and receive the holy communion, according to their faith, before they enter the trenches, in many cases to die. If the Roman Catholic boys feel that they want this, we, as a body of Protestant men, think it is their duty to have it, the same as our boys can have whatever sort of religious service they have been accustomed to throughout their lives, each according to their faith.

"The idea is to have a tent hut in charge of a priest to every battalion where the boys can receive religious help. These would cost about $500 each. Brick huts near every hospital are also in the plan, each one to cost approximately $13,000. The Protestants in Toronto before entering the campaign made a pledge with the Roman Catholics that these huts would not be used by the priests in charge to increase the members of the Roman Catholic church among the boys in France, but that they would serve only to take care of the spiritual side of the soldiers now of that faith. These Roman Catholic army huts will be open to all denominations during the day, and during the night mass will be held in them.

Peterborough people will undoubtedly show the same patriotic spirit as the citizens of Toronto and make next week's campaign as successful as the undoubted merit of the cause warrants.

IT IS GEBROKE.

Leiber Himmel! it is gebroke! Der Wotan line. Let those who the Fatherland truly love keep this cchrecklich and never to be believed news from the burdened and with misfortune depressed hearts of the home-dwellers. And it was those pigdogs of Canadians and their verdamte tanks that did it! Canadians—who should, in this wondrous opportunity provided for them by the far-seeing and superior German mind, be now engaged freeing themselves from the unbearable shackles of England's money-lust! It is to the highly-intelligenced and kulter-developed German mind a happening most unthinkable. It was never, in the plans of the All Highest's supreme command, intended that this should have occurred. When before the advance of the all-conquering and invincible German army the miserable and degenerate French troops abandoned the northern and most valuable coal fields, it was the intent of the guiders of the Fatherland's glorious destinies that hereafter they should be German. It was this, to the kultured Teutonic mind wholly understandable reason, that the Wotan line was for the defence of the coal fields, of most unshakable strength, carefully gebuilded. The valuable property of the Fatherland should above all things most carefully protected be! And now, without conscience and with the most foolhardy recklessness of their own life as well as indifference to the unalterate decrees of the All Highest, those verdamte Canadians have in one inconsiderate blow nearly six miles of the Fatherland's defences destroyed and verboten territory invaded. It is schrecklich! — Buffalo Courier.

RESTRICTED BREAKFASTS.

London Free Press.

We are buying sugar in small quantities, but even of this commodity there appears to be enough. Yet for many months the forty million people of Great Britain have been subjected to a sugar ration of three ounces per person per week. The consequence is that no one has sugar for his porridge, and only by great care can he make the supply eke out the week for his coffee. Neither is there cream to be had under any circumstances. This is only one of very many privations that the British people are enduring with a smile.

AN EQUALITY OF SACRIFICE SHOULD RULE IN CANADA'S ARMY.

Toronto Telegram.

A Toronto gunner of the immortal 9th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, four times wounded in fighting on the battlefront since March, 1915, was reported killed in the casualties published recently.

Equality of sacrifice should be the condition of service in a democratic army. Canada's military organization has proved itself the least democratic of all armies in its system of sending wounded officers back to Canada and of sending wounded men back to the battlefront.

A newspaper cannot take the sting out of inequality by assuming that inequality does not exist. The wives and mothers of private soldiers and gunners will continue to ask why their wounded husbands and sons are denied the furloughs that are granted to wounded husbands and sons of higher military rank but of shorter terms of service.

Adequate Punishment.

(Guelph Mercury.)

When a poor woman in a Canadian court gets a sentence of four years for the theft of sixty-five cents, what should a war profiteer get who makes millions out of the blood of the poor during these trying times? Some of them will probably be awarded with seats in the Senate.

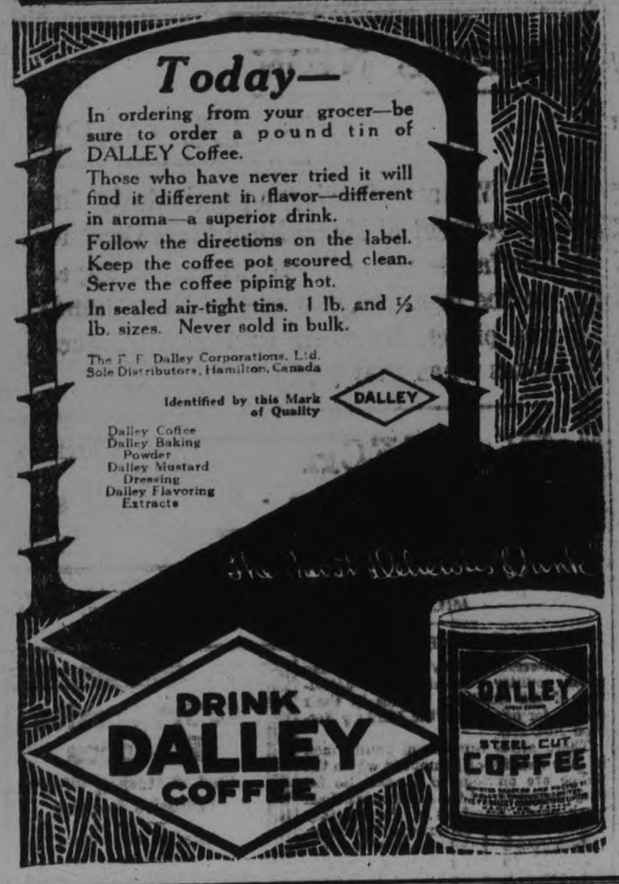
FINED FOR WASTING PAPER.

For sending out "unreasonable and excessive" advertising circulars, William F. Mitchell of the National Institution of Sciences, London, was fined one hundred pounds ($500). The firm, it was alleged, purported to give instruction by correspondence in mental suggestion. One member was asked to leave the country in 1916 as an undesirable alien.



BOOKS FOR THE SOLDIERS

Dear Sir,—The knowledge that everything connected with the soldiers possesses the greatest possible interest for those who are unable, by force of circumstances, to take their part in the war must be my excuse for troubling you with these lines. The books that have already been given by the citizens of Peterborough for use in the army camps in Canada have been many, sufficient indeed to fill seven good-sized packing cases, and material is accumulating for the despatch of an eighth case. It need scarcely be added that the authorities appreciate to the full the gifts of these volumes. In many instances the books that have been sent in have been virtually new, thus showing that the donors have not been backward in giving of the best that they possessed. It is unfortunate, perhaps, that in Canada we have no present means of knowing the exact extent of the army camp library movement. In the United States it is otherwise, and periodical leaflets are sent broadcast throughout the country showing not only the books that are in chief demand, but what the Library War Service is doing. A few facts and figures will serve to illustrate the great strides that the Americans have made since they entered the war.

There are now 41 library buildings in operation in the States; 43 large camp libraries have been established; 143 hospitals and Red Cross houses have been supplied; 243 librarians are being maintained in the service; 315 small military camps have been equipped with books; 350 points overseas have been supplied with books; 406 naval and marine stations have been supplied with libraries; 600,000 technical works have been purchased; 1,030,458 books have been shipped overseas; no less than 3,011,510 gift-books have been placed in service; 5,000,000 gift-magazines have been distributed. If we only had the figures we would find that Canada has no need to blush for the work that she has accomplished along the same lines, but we need to do more.

One thing that always has to be borne in mind is that the soldiery of the present day are drawn from all classes of society, and that therefore, all classes of books are needed for a camp library. At Camp Johnston, in Florida, the librarian in one day received requests for books on the following subjects:

Coffee-roasting, blending, rather than cultivation.
Woollens.
Refrigeration.
Cold storage and transportation of food materials.
Medical dictionary.
Sanitation and the public health.
Psychology.
Shorthand and typewriting, also mechanics of the typewriter.

The American Library Association, which has charge of supplying the American soldiers with reading matter, reports that there is a great call for books of a serious sort, history, economics, travel, biography, and technical treatises, and that up to the present it has been unable to satisfy that demand.

In every essential feature the American soldier corresponds with the Canadian. He has the same tastes, reads the same authors, and enjoys much the same educational advantages. It is natural, therefore, that there should be as great a diversity of choice in literature in the one country as in the other.

There is still the need for giving as suggestive of that need; and this letter cannot be closed in a more fitting manner than by quoting some verses by E. V. Lucas, which appeared in "Punch" in June last:

O, For a Book.

"O for a book and a shady nook"
You recollect the rhymes,
Written bow many years ago
In placid happier times?
To-day no shady nooks are ours,
With half the world at strife,
And dark ambition laying waste
The pleasant things of life;
But still the cry for books is heard,
For solace of the magic word.

"O for a book," the cry goes forth,
"O for a book to read;
To soothe us in our weariness,
The laggard hours to speed."
From countless hospitals in comes,
Where stricken soldiers lie,
Who gave their youth, who gave their strength,
Lest Liberty should die.
How small a favour to implore;
The books we've finished with — no more!

A book can have a thousand lives,
With each new reader, one;
A book should have a thousand lives before its course is run.
And we few kinder things can do
Our gratitude to show,
Than give the freedom of our shelves
To those that need it so,
Nor let them ask without avail
The sweet beguilement of a tale.

PIG IRON PRICES HAVE BEEN ADVANCED $1 TON

NEW YORK, Sept 26.—Prices for basic and foundry pig-iron were advanced one dollar a ton, by an aggreement between the representatives of the American Iron and Steele Institute and the War Industries Board, it was announced here yesterday. Ore prices were increased 25c a ton. In addition basing points for iron sales were changed from f.o.b. furnaces to Pittsburg and Birmingham. The new rates resulted from a conference of members of the trade with government officials in Washington last week.

Basic iron, under the agreement, which is effective October 1st to December 31st, will be $33 a ton and the foundry product will be $34, it was stated. The change in the basic point will add several dollars a ton to the prices received by many of the higher cost furnaces, situated far form the two centres named. No change was made in steel prices. It is said none was requested. Official announcement of the new rates, it is stated will await the President's approval.

No matter how well you do a thing, you are sure to hear more complaints than compliments.

PROTESTANTS TO AID CATHOLIC CAMPAIGN

Here's a Striking Instance of Church Unity in Working for Soldiers.

400 MEN IN DRIVE

(Toronto Star.)

A campaign to collect $150,000 in Toronto for the erection of Roman Catholic army huts in France will be launched next Wednesday, to continue throughout the week. Not only Roman Catholics, but Protestants of every demonination in the city, will unite in making the big drive a success. In this instance a unity of the Churches has been brought about through patriotism which has never before been known in the history of Canada, and not a few are surprised with the enthusiasm already shown among the teams.

The majority of the officers are Protestants, the chairman of the important committees are Protestants, and one entire team of men is composed of Masons. The Knights of Columbus are back of the movement and during this week are carrying on a campaign all over Canada for this purpose. But in Toronto the assistance of the Protestants was sought by the organization, with the result that the Toronto campaign will be postponed until the following week.

The campaign will open on Tuesday night in Massey Hall at 8 o'clock where a monster meeting will be held. Bishop Fallon, of London, Ont., of the Ontario Roman Catholic Diocese, will be the principal speaker. He has been to the front and knows the needs for places of worship among the Roman Catholic soldiers, and will make a special appeal. G. A. Warburton director of the Toronto Y.M.C.A. will speak, as well as Norman Sommerville, another Protestant.

A large choir, composed of the best talent from all the Protestant churches in the city, will sing for a half hour before the meeting and afterward. The first rehearsal was called for yesterday, and no less than 300 business men in Toronto set their business aside and attended the rehearsal. "This fact in itself is remarkable," said Ralph Connable, publicity director, to-day, "and the enthusiasm shown among them for the success of the music was unparalleled."

400 MEN IN DRIVE.

The plans as to how the money will be collected have not been given out, but Mr. Connable says that the scheme is such that every man, woman, and child in the city will have a chance to give his share. Four hundred business men will, however, take part in making the drive a success.

"No business man whom we have asked to help," said Mr. Connable, "has refused when he became acquainted with the necessity for places of worship among the Roman Catholic soldiers in France. Father Burke first asked for my aid, and I will see my end of the thing through to the finish.

"The Y.M.C.A. huts in France are open at all times to boys of every denomination," he continued, "but there is no place where the Roman Catholic boys can go and make confession of their sins and receive the holy communion, according to their faith, before they enter the trenches, in many cases to die. If the Roman Catholic boys feel that they want this, we, as a body of Protestant men, think it is their duty to have it, the same as our boys can have whatever sort of religious service they have been accustomed to throughout their lives, each according to their faith.

NO PROSELYTIZING

"The idea is to have a tent hut in charge of a priest to every battalion where the boys can receive religious help. These would cost about $500 each. Brick huts near every hospital are also in the plan, each one to cost approximately $13,000. The Protestants in Toronto before entering the campaign made a pledge with the Roman Catholics that these huts would not be used by the priests in charge to increase the members of the Roman Catholic Church among the boys in France, but that they would serve only to take care of the spiritual side of the soldiers now of that faith." These Roman Catholic army huts, Mr. Connable said, would be open to all demonimations during the day, and that during the night mass would be held in them.

The officers of that campaign include: W. T. Kernahan, chairman; E. J. Hayes, secretary; Col. W. S. Dinnick, organizer, and A. M. Miller, assistant organizer; G. A. Warburton, Norman Sommerville, J. D. Warde, H. H. Williams, Dr. A. H. Abbott, J. E. Day, Ralph Connable, J. J. Gibbons, R. J. Dilworth, John Firstbrook W. H. Alderson, H. E. O'Neill, A. L. Whitelaw, J. P. Mallon, C. W. Bishop M. J. Brennan, C. J. Gillhooley, and W. E. Turley.

With Other Councils

The Quebec policemen are paid $14 per week, which is not enough to hold men in the force, according to a report to the Council.

A Court Order.

The Detroit Street Railway Co. has been ordered by the court not to increase the fares.

Want Living Wage.

The Protestant school teachers of Montreal are demanding higher wages. They claim the $650 minimum is not a living wage.

Industrial Progress.

The Morrow Cereal Company has taken over the property of the James Goldie Co., Limited, at Guelph.

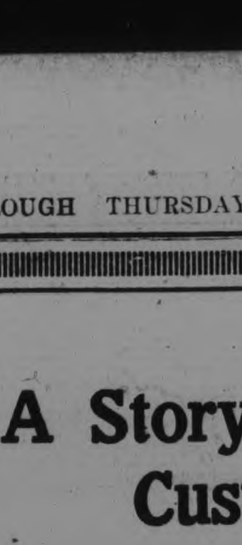
A Story of the Visit of Any of Our Customers to the Children's Dress Section

It is a conversation reported to have taken place between two friends after a fitting-out journey to the Elliot Children's Dept.



CHILDREN'S SWEATER COATS $2.00

You know Madge is only 12 years old but she seems to know just the proper time to have new things. In fact she's like a grown-up person. She wants new dress, or perhaps its a hat or a coat, at the first of every season just as regular as can be.

So, when I read about Elliot's new dresses I decided I'd take Madge and go right down and buy everything she needed for Fall and be through with it. We went into the Children's Department, and on a rack was a group of serge dresses that had just come in. There were cotton dresses also; but leave it to Madge to select the best. And it didn't require more than 15 or 20 minutes to choose one of the styles. What I liked best about it all is that they were so well made. I hardly thought that such great care was ever taken with children's dresses. We paid $2.75 for the dress, but there were others as low as $1.50; some even as high as $11.00, and there was a lovely velvet one at $8. These were quite beautiful but they were too expensive for school.

57th Chapter of I.O.D.E. Was Addressed by Toronto Ladies

Regular Monthly Meeting was Held Yesterday Afternoon.

At the monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E. held yesterday evening in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A., some interesting addresses were given by visitors. Miss Constance Boulton outlined the work of the order, what the I.O.D.E. stands for, and in conclusion explained the attitude of the I.O.D.E. in severing affiliation from the National Council of Women.

Mrs. Bruce in speaking of the work of the I.O.D.E. referred to a letter from Lady Perley in which she spoke of the irestimable value the Nurses' Home has been in forming a centre to get in touch with the nurses overseas.

Canon Davidson spoke briefly of his own experience with conditions overseas. In conclusion in speaking of the I.O.D.E. hospital in London he commended the Nurses' Club recently formed, saying that there is nothing too good for the Red Cross nurses.

Mrs. Birdsall, vice-regent, & the Norwood Chapter I.O.D.E., was present.

DIED OF SHEER DISGUST.

Four Lions in German Circus Found Dead in a Car.

Hagenbeck's circus has suffered a severe loss. A train conveying the animals to Stegtlitz was derailed at the goods station there. It was then found that four valuable lions were dead. An examination established the fact that the lions had suffered no injury whatever, and it was concluded that they had died of fright. We do not believe it. The more plausible explanation seems to us to be the one we have received from an independent source. It is that the railway truck in which the lions were conveyed had on former occasion been used for the transport of victuals, and that in a corner there still remained a few handfuls of the substitute articles, which are now being distributed among the fortunate population of greater Berlin. The lions had seen and smelt these Government-sent delicacies, with the result that they died of sheer horror and disgust. —Berlin Vorwaerts.

DEFAULTERS EVADED MILITARY POLICE

(Lindsay Post.)

An interesting story comes from the north country concerning the activities of the military police in their search for evaders of the Military Service Act.

There are a number of young men in the vicinity of Kinmount whom the police are anxious to secure. So far they have evaded the authorities. Last week seven members of the Military Police went up to Galway Township, Peterborough County, where a dance was held, in the hope that possibly the men required might be in attendance. Their conjectures were right, but their visit was in vain. The presence of the police in the locality soon became known and when they visited the place where the lovers of the light fantastic were disporting themselves, the young men made their exits through a window. Shots were fired in the air in the hope of halting them but they kept going.

The police captured a young man who lived with his mother and who had ten cows to attend to. He was brought to Lindsay and afterwards taken to Kingston.

A SHRINE IN SOUTH MONAGHAN

The appended letter addressed to the Toronto Globe, is written by Mr. L. F. Clarry, Master in Chambers, Calgary, Alberta. Mr. Clarry is a brother of Mr. E. S. Clarry, formerly of the Trent Canal staff. His parents reside in Millbrook. The letter follows:—

A Shrine That Should Be Marked.

To the Editor of The Globe: When spending vacation at my old home in Millbrook, Ontario, I read with a great deal of interest your editorial in The Globe of August 3, 1918, on the late Joseph Scriven, the author of that beautiful hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." Because of the fact that deceased lived near, and for a number of years as a frequent visitor to Millbrook, I was, perhaps, more than ordinarily interested. I met a number of people who were acquainted with the late Mr. Scriven, inclusive of whom are by mother and father.

So impressed was I with your editorial that on Sunday evening, the 11th of August, 1918, a party of us motored to the grave of the deceased author, in the township of South Monaghan, about ten miles from Millbrook. The body is interred in a small private burial plot on the farm of a former pupil, Theodore M. Pengelly, but a short distance from the shores of Rice Lake. Mr. Pengelly showed us the grave. It is unmarked and unkept. The plot is about forty feet square, and is surrounded by a stone fence now overgrown with wild vines and bushes, and trees of a goodly size have grown up within. Almost unconsciously we stepped reverently and softly about, as if afraid of disturbing the silence of the surroundings. The inscriptions on two tombstones show that the remains of Mr. Scriven lie between those of the late "Robert Lamport Pengelly, Commander, R.N., who fell asleep in Jesus, June 28th, 1875, aged 77 years," and "Eliza Catherine, only daughter of Andrew W. Roach, R.N., who died August 6th, 1860, aged 23 years."

Mr. Pengelly told me that Scriven was betrothed to Eliza Catherine Roach, whose untimely death caused bitter disappointment and greatly depressed him through the rest of his life. As a result he never married, and about twenty-five years later his remains were laid to rest beside those of his never-forgotten sweetheart. In early life Scriven was tutor in the family of the elder Mr. Pengelly, whose place he always looked upon as a sort of home, and to which he was always welcome.

I could say a lot about the deceased; how he spent his time and money ministering to the sick, poor and needy; his kindness, his extreme devotion to religion; the way his now famous hymn was published and the manner of his death, but I am afraid I would be encroaching on your valuable space.

The author of "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" lived a life of comparative obscurity and he is known to posterity only through the medium of his hymn, which unlike the deeds of many a dead hero whose memory we honour, is ever growing more popular and dear to us.

I agree with your editorial, and thought how ungrateful and how remiss are our churches that there is nothing to mark the last resting place of him who has given us one of the sweetest and most popular hymns written. As you have aptly said, we honour the memory of the departed "giant and athlete" for excellence in physical prowess and others in almost every walk of life, but the relics of Joseph Scriven lie unhallowed and forgotten in a nameless grave. Shame on the churches of Canada! I say, well may posterity honour the memory of the forgotten author, for he has left it an inheritance of excellence in spiritual magnificence.

Mr. Pengelly informed me that some years ago friends of Scriven made an effort locally to erect a monument over his grave, but that the same was abortive and subscribers were returned their money.

Is not the memory of Joseph Scriven sufficiently beloved by the churches of Canada to warrant their placing a slab or tablet or stone to mark his shrine? I believe everyone will say that it is, and, further, I believe that if the matter were taken up by the churches there would be a ready and willing support all over Canada. If one of the services on a particular Sunday were devoted to the memory of Joseph Scriven and a small collection were asked, it need only be a small one, I have no doubt that funds would soon be in hand with which to honour the achievement of the too long forgotten author. Mr. Pengelly told me he would be pleased to see something like this done. Will our churches move?

Missionary Gives an Interesting Address in St. Paul's Church

Miss H. Atkinson Had Charge of Mission Field in the West—Rev. Mr. Pogue Was Chairman.

(1) Can you drive a horse?
(2) Can you preach a sermon?
(3) Can you work three months in your field without falling in love?

Are the suggestions asked missionaries by the Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church before they start out in their new fields.

Miss H. Atkinson of Toronto, who has had charge of a district in Southern Saskatchewan for three months this summer, spoke last evening to a large audience in the Sunday School room of St. Paul's church. Rev. Robert Pogue, who was chairman of the evening, spoke on the success of women in the mission field. He said he believed the time was coming when there would be as many women as men in the theological colleges of the country.

Preached in Two Fields.

Miss Atkinson spoke of her work in her field, which comprised four small towns just west of Moose Jaw. The first Sunday she was in her field she preached two sermons, thus answering in the affirmative the second question which was asked by the Principal of the Deaconesses' home in Toronto. The first question can also be answered in the affirmative, because she has made no less than seventy five calls in her field during the past three months. So far Miss Atkinson has been successful in answering the third question, although it is not know how long it will be be before she will fall a victim to the wiles of Cupid, as her two predecessors have married the school teachers.

The 'Preacher Miss.'

She told of some of the visits she made. Many of the people seemed to have no idea of Christianity, and others did not seem to care. On the entire circuit she is now called the "Preacher Miss."

As the winters are very long, the women are practically closed in and the missionary's face, or indeed anybody's, is very welcome.

"I always tried to bring good cheer wherever I went," said Miss Atkinson. In one small town, she taught religion on Fridays to the pupils, who progressed wonderfully. The other three towns have now taken it up as a part of the regular curriculum, and are making great strides. Sometimes it is very hot out there. "We had it 100 degrees in the shade, and there is no shade," said the speaker.

Miss Atkinson concluded with an earnest plea to the young ladies and girls to see if they could not go as missionaries, as there was such a great need.

"One hundred and sixty-one mission points have been closed on account of the lack of missionaries, and many more will likely be closed unless the girls step in."

While the vegetable, sewing and fruit exhibit was better than ever before the home cooking was limited on account of flour and sugar conditions, nevertheless the display was very creditable to those who sent in samples of their work handicapped though they were by restrictions.

THE SPEECHES

Clever addresses were made by two of the pupils "Our Fair" by John Holland and "A Boy" by Harry Leahy followed by a chorus "We're the Soldiers of the Soil."

The afternoon closed by the National anthem.

Lakefield Deputation Witnessed a Demonstration in Peterboro

Reeve and Councillors Were Satisfied With Work of Chemical Engine—Lakefield Items of Interest.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 26.—Reeve F. J. Moore, with Councillors Porter, MacDonald and Dr. Smith and Clerk Mr. W. Sherin, also Messers. C. S. Tanner, S. Spence, R. B. English, J. W. Ridpath, T. Braden, R. H. Duff, Clarence Duff, George N. Spence and F. J. Burgess, and Father Meagher and others were in Peterborough yesterday afternoon to witness a demonstration of the Peterborough chemical fire engine, which was shown them by Fire Chief Grange and his staff. Members of the deputation had the pleasure of a ride on the engine for eight or ten blocks, showing how quickly it can be got out and how speedily it can put out incipient fires. Another feature of the demonstration was the interesting fact that it can be used in connection with a waterworks system. This latter fact is especially of interest to Lakefield as the question of waterworks is under serious consideration at present.

A. Y. P. A. Meeting.

The A.Y.P.A. met for the first meeting of the season in the Sunday school room of St. John's church on Tuesday evening The meeting was informal and of a social character owing to the fact that four old members were visiting in the village and were guests of the society on this occasion. The election of officers will be held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 8th.

Prayer Meeting.

The Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches have resumed their union prayer meetings. The first of the season was held in the Methodist church on Wednesday evening and was well attended.

Voice of The People

Peterborough, September 26th, 1918

To the Editor of the Examiner,—
City,

In last night's Examiner a news item appeared, stating that Mr. Burnham had given certain information to the Examiner respecting Mrs. McIntyre who had just come out of a hospital, and who had been unable to get help through the Patriotic Fund, due to the failure of Mr. F. H. Dobbin the Executive Officer, to deal with her

The facts are that Ex-Mayor W. H. Buller is the chairman of the committee, and a meeting will take place to-night. Mr. Dobbin's powers are limited by resolutions of the Committee, and there are thirteen other married women, without children, in the same position as Mrs. McIntyre, namely; that they do not receive money from the Patriotic Fund. The mothers of children do receive the benefit of the fund, and whether or not they do receive the beneifts of the fund, is altogether beyond the authorities and powers of Mr. Dobbin but is dealt with by the Committee itself.

I consulted Ex-Mayor Buller about the matter this morning, and he advised me that he had never seen Mrs. McIntyre before this matter came up, and that the matter had not been dealt with by the Committee, so under such circumstances, Mr. Dobbin was not responsible directly or indirectly because the Committee is not willing to pay hospital bills and doctor bills out of the funds of the rate-payers.

In addition to that, Mr. Buller advised me that he promised that he would recommend Mrs. McIntyre's case for consideration by the Committee. The article in the Examiner is incorrect inasmuch as it states that Mr. Buller promised help unless it could be implied from the statement that he would bring the matter to the attention of the Committee, that this was a promise of help.

From the investigation I have made in the matter, I have received the assurance that soldier's wives are not pressed for payment of hospital and doctor's bills, but are practically given their time to pay them, and in addition to that large numbers of physicians have given their time and professional services, either without charge or at much less than the regular charges to these women whose husbands are overseas.

Mr. Dobbin has instructed me to lay these facts before you and to ask you to withdraw the statements that were made in he Examiner, that he was in anyway responsible for Mrs. McInyre not receiving consideration in any application she may have made to the Patriotic Committee, as this was beyond Mr. Dobbin's power to deal with the case without the Committee's express authority.

I wish you would kindly make an explaination of this matter as Mr. Dobbin has asked me to immediately require you to do this.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

The Examiner regrets any injustice that may have been done Mr. Dobbin by the publication of the statement dictated by Mr. J. H Burnham.

British Investments Paved the Way for Trade With Argentina

Publisher of Buenes Aieres Tells New York Exporters How British-Owned Railways and Other Established Businesses Purchased Requirements in Great Britain.

In an address to the American Manufacturers' Export Association in New York recently, Jorge Mitre, editor and publisher of La Nacion of Buenos Aires, illustrated by European trade in the Argentine how investments paved the way for trade.

"The after-the-war competition of the great exporting countries of the world will perhaps be keener in South America than elsewhere; but, in my view, the effects of that condition will be less marked in the Argentine Republic than is popularly supposed in the United States, owing chiefly to the fact that there are vested interests which cannot easily be disturbed."

"Glance, for a moment," he said, "at the well defined circumstances which led to the commercial supremacy of Great Britain, in my country, to the gradual extension of the trade with Germany, with Belgium, and even with Holland, before the outbreak of war. Such an examination would demonstrate that in each of cases the trade increased in a ratio corresponding to the investment of capital in new industrial, financial, and commercial enterprises which themselves became local sources of supply and demand .That is no mere assumption, as statistics relating to Argentine commerce will show that the trade of each foreign country up to 1914 was exactly in proportion to its respective capital investment."

As an example of the value of foreign investments in Argentina, Mr. Mitre cited the British-owned railroads in that country. When rails or rolling stock needed replacement, orders for the new material were always placed in England unless abnormal conditions prevented. Similarly, the British railroads in Argentina turned to the English banks in Buenos Aires to meet their financial requirements.

LARGE IMPORTING AGENCIES EUROPEAN

This illustration, he said, applied with equal force, to other forms of industry and to other countries, especially when it was remembered that all the large importing agencies of Argentina are European, and would naturally trade with their own countries unless— as during the war—compelled by force of circumstances, to buy in foreign markets.

The editor pointed out that the security afforded foreign capital under the Argentine laws had resulted in Great Britain holding investments there to the extent of $2,500,000,000 before the war, and added that England was preparing the way to obtain additional interests.

Particulars Concerning the Death of Pte. Herbert Harran

Peterboro Soldier Was Instantly Killed When Shell Struck a Dugout.

Mrs. Eva Harran, 381 Burnham Street, has just received the particulars of her son's death. Pte. Herbert Harran was in a dugout, which was hit by a German shell. He was killed instantly and never knew what hit him.

Officers' Casualty Co.,
Buxhill, Sussex, England,
Sept. 7th, 1918.

Dear Mrs. Harran,—I am very sorry Mrs. Harran not to have answered your letter sooner, but I had left France when it arrived, and it was forwarded to me in a hospital here.

You wished to know just how Herbie met his death, and I can tell you now. On the afternoon of April 22 we were some distance behind the front line, and most of us were resting in our steel-covered huts because we had been working during the night. Some shells were dropping around us, and one happened to hit the hut in which Herbie and six other boys were. Five of them were killed and two were slightly wounded. One of these two told me that the noise of the shelling awakened them, and they were all just getting up to go out and see what was happening when, without any warning, there was a big explosion, caused by the shell which hit their hut, and it was pretty badly broken up. So you can see that the boys who were killed never knew what happened.

I was there about 3 minutes later, and when I looked at Herbie first I thought surely he was alright, because there was not a mark on him, but the force of the explosion had been too much, and he had been killed instantly.

It was just a month before his death that he and I and the platoon sergeant had a long talk one morning concerning the life after death of the boys who had sacrificed their lives in this great cause.

If it should be my luck to return to Canada at some future date I shall be pleased to try and call on you when going through Peterborough.

Yours very sincerely,

"Peterboro for Christ" is Motto Adopted by the Committee in Charge of Evangelistic Campaign

"Peterboro for Christ" is the striking motto that has been selected by the committees in charge of the big union Evangelistic campaign which is to open in Peterboro Sunday evening and last throughout the month of October. Probably never before has a campaign of the same magnitude been undertaken in the city. It has thrown a great amount of work on the committees that are in charge of the various activities but these have been working energetically and hopefully and all the preliminary arrangements are now well in hand.

The work of preparing the Brock street rink for the meetings has been a big task in itself. A great platform has had to be erected to accommodate the speaker and the choir of several hundred voices. Seating accommodation has had to be provided throughout the rink for the several thousand people who it is expected will attend the services. A large number of comfortable benches have been made especially for the meetings. Should these not prove sufficient other benches and chairs will be utilized The choir on the platform will be seated on chairs. To-night a large number of volunteers have been asked to report at the rink with brooms with the object of giving the rink a final clean up before the seating facilities are put in to-morrow and Saturday. As the weather at this time of year is uncertain the committee in charge of the building has made arrangements to have it heated whenever necessary. Sawdust will be spread down the aisle to deaden the sound made by people as they enter or leave the hall.

THE SONG BOOKS

The song books that have been printed especially for this campaign and which will be used in Peterboro for the first time in Canada, have arrived. They are expected to prove quite a feature of the campaign Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, who will have charge of the musical portion of the services were expected to arrive on the noon train to-day.

The first rehearsal by the choir will be held in the rink to-morrow, Friday evening at eight o'clock sharp. A full attendance of all who are willing to assist is asked for.

The arrangements for securing ushers for the services have been put in the hands of Chief Thompson, who has them well in hand. Those who are willing to assist in the ushering are invited to 'phone Chief Thompson

Mrs. Russell, who will be in charge of the Women's work, is expected to arrive to-morrow and Dr. Honeywell either Friday evening or Sunday morning. Dr. Honeywell is in Ottawa at present, where he has been visiting his aged father.

As previously announced Dr. Honeywell was for four years chief assistant to Rev. "Billy" Sunday, Rev. Mr. Sunday's opinion of Dr. Honeywell was expressed in a telegram in which he said, "I am glad to speak of Dr. Honeywell in the strongest terms. He has my unqualified endorsement. He is a man of fine intellect, a strong preacher and experienced pastor and a successful evangelist. He is absolutely safe and sane and you will make no mistake in getting him."

To-morrow night the final Friday evening cottage prayer meetings will be held. During the campaign half hour meetings in the morning will be held a couple of days a week. As most of the Protestant churches of the city will close next Sunday evening to permit their members to attend the big 7 o'clock service in the rink it is anticipated that the seating accommodation even of the rink will be well taxed for this service.

Changes in the G.T.R. Time Table

WILL TAKE EFFECT ON SUNDAY NEXT.

Commencing with Sunday, September 29th, the following changes will be made in the Grand Trunk Railway System in the city:

No. 96, leaving for Port Hope at 8.10 a.m., will be cancelled.

No. 97, arriving from Port Hope at 12.45 will be cancelled.

No. 98, arriving from Lindsay at 7.55 is cancelled.

No. 99, leaving for Lindsay at 8.31 p.m., will be cancelled.

The 1.30 p.m., train for Belleville will leave at 2 o'clock in future.

Lakefield Time Table.

The following is the new Lakefield schedule:

Leaves the city for Lakefield at 7 a.m. Lakefield for Peterboro at 7.40.

Leaves Peterboro for Lakefield at 12.05. Leaves Lakefield for Peterboro at 1.20.

The evening train is cancelled.

I.O.D.E. ACTING AS POLICE

At Collingwood Fair—In Other Capacities Also

COLLINGWOOD, Sept 26.—A feature of this year's fair, the Great Northern Exhibition, has been the splendid assistance of the I.O.D.E., who are acting as police, section judges, guards and attendants. This is the first year they have acted in his capacity, and the remuneration they received is donated to the order to assist in the work of aiding the soldiers.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

NEXT SATURDAY WILL MARK THE ELIMINATION OF RACING NEWS OVER THE TELEGRAPH LINES

Decision of United States Government Will Not Permit the Transmission of Race Results—Sporting Comment.

The decision of the United State Government not to permit the carrying of race results or entries afte next Saturday over the telegraphi lines, is a decided hardship on th public throughout the country, wh are interested in sport. It simpl means shutting off the up-to-dat news of both the running and har ness racing, but it will in no wis affect the sport at the points wher it is being conducted. Baseball an other sports suffered in a simila way during the past season. Inci dentally the elimination of the rac ing news will put a serious crim in the operations of pool rooms an handbooks all over the country Those who are speculatively inclin ed will now be forced to visit th scene of activity in order to bac their judgment. And if the order i as drastic as it appears right now several racing papers which carry nothing but daily turf news will jus about have to go out of business.

Gelding Must Go.

Turf magnates have decreed tha the gelding must "go," as evidence o good faith that the race track is a great factor in the breeding of thor oughbreds for cavalry mounts. Tha geldings have "gone some" this sea son there is indisputable evidence Roamer is a gelding and here is the thoroughbred which established a new American record at a mile last month over the Saratoga oval by re ducing Salvator's mark of 1.35 1-2 to 1.34.4-5. The The best two year old of the year is Billy Kelly. He has won many rich stakes and purses this season, and was recently sold for $30,000. He is a gelding. Flaggs is generally conceded to be the fastest of the season's sprinters, having won nine out of 12 races. He is a gelding. Practically every steeplechase horse of any consequence this year is a gelding. Geldings have been barred from some rich stakes this season and will be ineligible for many more next season. This will undoubtedly be good news for the owners of the unaltered colt, regardless of the subsequent value in the stud for the benefit of the cavalry.

An Enthusiastic Golfer.

"In the days before the war Marshal Foch was an enthusiastic golfer," says the London Express, "and took special lessons from a professional. He played a slow and cautious game, with a very useful handicap of 12. He had a quite amusing hatred of losing balls, and in the evening after dinner would stroll out with a string bag and collect any he could find. Once he came in triumphantly after a long walk in the dusk with quite a collection found with the aid of an electric flashlight. He used to express regret that his countrymen did not take to the game with any enthusiasm."

The course the generalissimo is going over just now is well bunkered but he will win out just the same.

A Wonderful Spirit.

John L. (Laddie) McKeown, former University of Chicago hurdler, conference champion and Chicago A. A. joint winner, lies broken in body, but not in spirit, in a base hospital in France. He was injured in an airplane plunge that killed a French pilot. "Although I'll be crippled the rest of my life, I don't regret ever going into the game. The sport is worth the risk, even though they almost ordered flowers for me,' he wrote in a letter to Coach Martin Delaney of the Chicago A. A. It is a wonderful spirit that "Laddie' McKeown shows in spite of his serious injuries but it is the same spirit that the sportsmen of all the allied countries have shown in the big fight "over there."

Jess Willard.

Some folks say Jess Willard has retired; will never fight again. Not on your life. Jess will fight when he finds a mark easy enough. Willie Meehan is claiming Jack Dempsey's place in the fistic world. And the joke of it is that Willard accepts Meehan's claim and says that he is the man he must meet for the title bouts the fans are clamoring (?). Is there anything more ridiculous than this? Dempsey, who honestly earned his right to contest for the title, disposed of Meehan in a four-round bout in which he was not even marked or knocked down, and which he fought with a bad hand. But it typical of Willard and another reason why the fans dislike him so much. Slowly they are gathering the evidence against Jess. William H. Rocap, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger, runs a story of a column length, telling of Willard's refusal to assist in the fourth Liberty Loan boxing show at Philadelphia. He was to have met Dempsey, who offered his services gratis. Willard was offered $30,000 for his share in the six-round bout, but he turned it down cold. From this one can safely judge that Willard is not only afraid of Dempsey but is not anxious to do his "bit" at a time when everybody else is doing his level best to assist in bringing the war to a quick end.

Allah stands at the head of all gardeners and anyone in doubt should go and see "The Garden of Allah," which, on its sixth annual tour, will come to The Grand for one night, Tuesday, Oct. 1, for it is a marvel in many ways.

The first rise of the curtain reveals a scene of the Great Sahara desert stretching away like an ocean of sand, its countless dunes rising and falling like mighty swells and the morning sun sending its ruddy rays up from the depths— messengers of its gladsome coming to illuminate and revivify the world.

And then across the sand strange beings pass like spectres that seem to come into one's presence from that mysterious past and who, saving not a word, bow in homage to the new day.

The desert then vanishes and a town hotel is seen, alive with strife and turmoil. This gives place to another and again another filled with restlessness and trouble. The silence having been replaced by the noise of weird babble. Another change and one is before a wondrous garden, a vision of the way the world ought to be and may have been in the beginning.

This scene vanishes in its turn and one is in the very centre of a real sand storm—a storm that makes its own darkness—whose fierceness is a tempest of dashing sand. And then it is night and the stars are out in all their glory. The Milky Way seems almost to touch the earth. And then last of all is the scene of the monastery—the place where peace and rest have their home and the tired soul is safe.

In the midst of all these wonderful scenes, the principals and supporting company, the Arabs, camels, horses, donkeys, goats, pigeons, etc., fill their roles and do their parts so impressively that the illusion is very remarkable, with many dramatic climaxes.

KUMMER IMPROVES

Kummer, who was something of a sensation in Maryland in the spring is improving fast now that the horses of the Viau stable are racing to form again. He looks like the lad most likely to push Sande hardest for the riding championship of what remains of the season of 1918. Kummer lost form hereabouts in the summer because a couple of failures robbed him of the confidence of the fickle him of the confidence of the fickle trainers, who rarely have the gumption to give a youngster a fair chance. And failing to obtain good mounts, horses on which he could win occasionally, shook Master Kummer's confidence in himself. He is recovering his assurance now that his own employer is supplying him with winning mounts again. Kummer's ride on George Star, a horse that is not partial to a greater distance than seven furlongs in the race of one mile and seventy yards at Havre de Grace in which the Jack Atkin colt defeated Mary Maud, was a very creditable piece of work. Sande himself could not have waited with more patience nor could he have put up a more energetic finish.

WILL TRY AGAIN

Having demonstrated his ability to cope with the slashing Jack Dempsey in a ring battle, Pacific coast promotors are grooming Sailor Willie Meehan, of San Francisco for another go with the leading heavyweight contender. The match in all probability will be one of a benefit card to be held in Los Angeles, and will be held outdoors, in an amphitheater which will seat 22,000 spectators. Several old-time pugilistic lights also will be on the card.

Music & Drama

"HAVE A HEART."

Rich in lilting music, with a plot rather more logically developed than the average musical comedy, and possessing an irresistible atmosphere of daintiness and charm, "Have a Heart," the Bolton's Wodehouse-Kern compilation of songs, wit and girls, proved a delightful attraction at The Grand Opera House last night. The audience was of a capacity nature, and there was no question as to the enjoyment with which the comedy was followed.

"Have a Heart" tells, with musical and dancing embellishments, the story of a young married couple who become reconciled almost on the eve of divorce proceedings, and who steal away to enjoy a second honeymoon. The situation is complicated by the presence of a "movie" star, with whom the husband had been accused of carrying on an affair, but eventually are difficulties are smoothed away as per musical comedy schedule.

The company throughout had evidently been carefully selected, and there was no weakness anywhere in the cast. The principals sang nicely and acted cleverly, and the chorus danced gracefully and formed one pretty picture after another. The costumes and scenic investiture were on a par with the general excellence of the offering.

Ruth Oswald and Henry Antrim did admirable work, both and vocally, as the couple who went on a second edition of their honeymoon, and Grace Hoey was decidedly effective as the queen of the movies. The chief fun-maker's task fell upon the shoulders of Joseph Keno, who, as an eccentric elevator-boy, kept the audience in a hilarious mood. He proved a hard working and versatile comedian, getting his quips over smoothly, singing his comedy songs in a manner that developed all the wit of the lyrics, and capping the climax with a woinderfully executed whirlwind dance, in which he had as his clever partner Miss Rosie Green.

Mr. Kern, who is responsible for the music of "Have a Heart," has succeeded in providing a score that is full of good things. The two duets, "I'm All Alone" and "My Wife, My Nan," charmingly sung by Miss Oswald and Mr. Antrim, both scored heavily, as did the lively trio, "Can the Cabaret," with appropriate jazz affects by the orchestra. "Samarkad," sung by Ralph Page, with the assistance of the chorus, was another gem, but the popular hit of course was "You Said Something," a number in fox trot tempo that the victrolas and player-pianos have made familiar all over the continent.

"Have a Heart" was a treat both to the ear and eye. An augmented orchestra brought out the fullest charm of the musical score, and added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Willard Quits Cold When Bluff Called

CHAMPION REFUSED TO MEET DEMPSEY IN CHARITY BOUT

Jess Willard's bluff having been called, the holder of the heavy weight title has quit cold. A few weeks ago Willard announced he would meet Dempsey, claimant of the title, provided the latter would agree to turn over the proceeds, after expenses had been deducted, to some war charity. This proposition did not appeal to the syndicate that is backing Dempsey, and it declined to accept the match under those conditions.

Dempsey, however, believes he can defeat Willard, and when he saw an opportunity to get Willard in the ring, he gave the syndicate to understand that he was going through with the match as he wants that heavyweight title. The syndicate, rather than lose is meal ticket, agreed to let Dempsey meet Willard in a benefit match and Jack Dougherty of Philadelphia agreed to stage the bouts.

This was agreeable to Dempsey and Willard was communicated with. The champion, however, refused to meet Dempsey, despite the facts that the proceeds were to have been turned o war charities. Willard, instead of going through with his bluff, stated he would not box anyone until the close of the war.

Kearns on being informed that Willard had refused to go through with his original agreement cut loose with the following: "Dempsey, not being a commercialized or financial fighter is ready to get the 'cheese patriot' into the ring with him, and will accept any proposition to do so. Willard must either meet Dempsey in a bona fide bout for patriotic purposes, or go down in history as a 'cheese patriot.'

That's enough to make a real fighter want to lick both Kearns and Dempsey, but Willard being peaceful by nature, will pay no attention to the remarks of Kearns.

Dempsey's manager, while hot on the trail of Willard, is paying no attention to the challenge of Harry Wills. The Panama negro is anxious to meet Dempsey and several close followers of the game who having seen both men in action are inclined to think that Wills is capable of giving Dempsey a tough argument.

Golfers Enjoyed More Thrills in Olden Days

Stunts That Could be Done With Gutta-Percha Balls.

Unquestionably, the game of golf has reached its present general popularity because of the longer flying and more easily manipulated balls, but there are those old golfers who confess that in the days of the gutta-percha balls they more thoroughly enjoyed the game than after the introduction of the rubber cores.

There is a thrill which accompanies the long flight of a hard hit drive, but according to one old timer it cannot compare with that admiration with which he used to watch the old "gutties" get away from the club, travelling low for maybe 100 yards or more before its started its rise, graceful as a bird. Every now and then a rubber core takes a similar flight, but not often; the old balls always did it when properly hit.

On the north coast of Scotland this golfer says that he has seen the boys stand about 100 yards from a flock of gulls which had settled on the beach. They would drive over them long skimming shots which would rise and soar with the birds as they took flight. Another trick of those young fellows was to place a ball at their feet and with a mashie well laid back, loft the ball into the air, and leaping quickly, catch it in the hand before it came to earth. Anyone who wishes to try this is cautioned not to start running forward before the ball is struck.

The effect of "spin" on a golf ball would be very trifling comparatively were there not "surface markings" on the rubber core. In the early days of the game the balls were made of compressed feathers covered with leather, with a surface like that of a baseball of to-day. Uniformity of flight seems to have been absent, a tendency to duck rapidly toward the earth being noticeable, and this resulted in shorter carry and longer run than the balls of to-day.

Soon after the gutta percha ball came into use someone discovered that a ball which had been hacked up in use flew more uniformly and carried longer than the smooth one, and this led to the first style of markings, the idea being to mark up the surface with a flat hammer. This developed into the cross lines style of the old gutty ball.

JOHREN, THE MIGHTY.

Johren, the three-year-old, owned by Harry Payne Whitney, is the King in his class this year, a racer comparable with the mighty of the past. No wonder, for his is a winning combination. He was bred in France, sired by England's great horse, Spearmint, and is owned by an American. Victory is written all over him, and he could not help being a wonder.

He is the essence of Allied endeavour. That is what every man is. In this war, Great Britain, France and the United States are giving their best, and the combination is unbeatable.

Can you run an automobile? Get on the farm, and run a tractor. The Allies need more food.

Never boast of the work you are going to do. Some men work all the time and have nothing to show for it, either.

CANADIAN OWNERS HAVE FINE JOCKEYS

Sande and Kummer of Ross and Viau Stables Riding Well

That Commander J. K. L. Ross and Wilfred Viau, the well-known Canadian owners, have the best jockey propositions of the day respectively in Sande, who rode four winners at Havre de Grace, Monday, and Krummer, is the belief of O'Neill Seiver, American turf authority. He writes:

"Commander J. K. L. Ross is more than fortunate in having secured the services of Jockey Sande for his strong stable. Sande is still a little chap and possibly he cannot ride other than a free running horse to the best of advantage. But men who remember racing for a long time back cannot recall a lad of greater promise. Unheard of anywhere until this season, and unknown to eastern turf folk until the Yonkers meeting was half finished and Sande had come to the front with astonishing quickness. Patrons of New York racing were beginning to follow him with considerable assurance at Saratoga, when the up-state meeting ended. At Harve de Grace, he is backed by the followers of Maryland racing, no matter what his mount may be.

SITS LIKE GRIFFIN

Sande sits on a horse much as Henry Griffin used to some twenty odd years back, his hands are light and he rides his time better than any jockey, old or young, that is riding to-day. He does not appear to be afraid to take a chance, when by taking a chance he can send a mount along, nor does he rush foolishly into pockets he cannot get out of. I have not seen him attempt to use the whip on a sluggish stretch runner, but I would not be afraid to bet he will keep a horse steady and punish him at the same time as well as any veteran in the service. He resembles Sloan, in that he seems to get what his mounts have to give of speed and courage without having to resort to the whip. On the rare occasions that I have seen him raise the catgut persuader, I have never known him to use it severely. A tap or two and he puts the whip away. There are half a dozen young jockeys about, who would do well to sit in the grand

BULGARIA HAS HAD ENOUGH

Wants to Suspend Hostilities and Talk Peace.

LONDON, Sept. 27.— "Bulgaria offers armistice to the Allies." This brief bulletin was flashed to the Examiner at nine o'clock this morning. In the Examiner of Wednesday and Thursday it was reported that Bulgaria was in the mood to seek a separate peace, so that the above news is not surprising.

An armistice in the dictionary sense of the term, implies a temporary suspension of hostilities by agreement of both parties, or in other words a truce while negotiations for settlement are in progress. It is safe to assume that the only kind of an armistice the Allies will accept will be a complete and unconditional surrender. Bulgaria is as familiar with the Allies' peace terms as Germany, and is at liberty to accept them.

GRAIN MARKET

It begins to appear very evident that so far as the United States Government is concerned, no "profiteering" on an unlimited extent on grain dealing transactions is to be allowed, All grain exchanges were notified yesterday not to permit their members to speculate beyond reasonable limits. It was also intimated that profits above a certain percentage would be taken by the Government. These notices are generally understood to mean that further restrictions will be placed against speculative trading in grains. The effect on yesterday's markets was a sharp decline of 1 3-4c. to 2 3-8c. in corn prices.

THE PROGRESSIVE SCALE.

The moon has raised her lamp above
While youth and maiden talk of love,
Just like others, who now grow old
Recite deeds both tender and bold.
But when dad landed on Canada's soil,
He penned his letters, 'twas toil, toil,—
While I, well my work is much lighter
For I write on an up-to-date typewriter.
Jimmy says Nelson is your one best man to see about a machine.

The Treaty Not Popular to Russia

Brest-Litovsk Was Enacted by Force.

Special to the Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 26. — The Brest-Litovsk Treaty is not given full acknowledgment in Russia, according to an interview with M. Uorovsky, a Bolsheviki representative, published here. He declared the Treaty is not considered definite because it is a treaty enacted by force. A note to this effect, he declared, has been sent to Germany.

SPANISH INFLUENZA REPORTED IN MONTREAL

Canadian Press:

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—An outbreak of Spanish influenza has occurred among children in Montreal. So far only a few cases have been reported, and these all have been isolated. The Provincial health authorities reported there are probably several thousand cases in Quebec, and twelve deaths have occurred from it.

Why do people talk so much? Certainly not always because they have something to say.

LABOUR APPEAL BOARD APPROVES ORIGINAL AWARD

C.G.E. Employees Demands Are Supported by New Governmental Body—Get Wages to 1st of June.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—An unanimous report in the appeal of the Canadian General Electric Co. from the findings of the Board of Conciliation which dealt with the dispute between the company and its machinists, specialists and electrical workers, has been submitted to the Minister of Labour by the Labour Appeal Board.

The Board of Conciliation which dealt with the dispute consisted of Judge Colin B. Snider, chairman, James G. Merrick, representing the company, and Fred C. Bancroft, representing the men. The members of the Board of Conciliation were unanimous save on three points, to which Mr. Merrick objected.

The appeal was taken on these three points. Mr. Merrick refused to place any limitation on the number of apprentices which the company might engage. With regard to this matter, the Appeal Board has declared that the number of apprentices shall be as follows:

One for the shop and one for every five machinists employed.

Another point at issue was the date on which the new schedule should go into force. On this point the Appeal Board confirms the report of the Conciliation Board, providing that the schedule shall date from the first of June and remain in force for one year.

The third point in discussion was settled by the Appeal Board taking out a paragraph of the schedule and substituting the following:

"During slack period, before any reduction is made in the number of its employees, the total working hours for the week shall be reduced."

In issuing the report Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, expressed satisfaction that it had been unanimously decided to have this case of appeal dealt with by this new Board. He said that it was altogether likely that the result would be accepted by both parties.

The company was willing to antedate the wages under consideration to July 15th.

Mrs. McElhiney Gave an Address Yesterday

Results of the W.C.T.U. Campaign

Mrs. McElhiney addressed the W. C. T. U. meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Y.W.C.A. Green Room and those who attended heard a talk, the real value of which cannot be over-estimated. With her twenty-seven years' experience, her knowledge of what could be accomplished by Christian women's work was very wide and interesting to hear. It was only regretted that conditions were such that Mrs. McElhiney will very soon leave the city, where her influence and good work has become such a factor.

Mrs. Shields occupied the chair.

Trinket Fund.

Mrs. A. J. Thomas presented a report of the results of the trinket fund, by which the objective of $25,000 had been reached by the W. C. T. U., to be given to the Y.M.C.A. for hot drinks at the front. The $6,000 which was over will be given to buy a hut for depensing hot drinks also at the front.

Another campaign will be shortly started to gather plated ware for the same object. All who have anything they do not want would help on this excellent cause by leaving it with the secretary, Mrs. J. S. Knapman or with Mrs. A. J. Thomas.

WEDDING BELLS

KING—DELONG.

On Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Methodist church parsonage, a quiet but pretty wedding took place when Mr. William John King was united in marriage to Miss Edna Delong, both of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. J. Thomas. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. A. R. White of this city, a sister of the bride.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy young couple left on the 3.47 C.P.R. train for Toronto, where their honeymoon will be spent. On their return they will reside in this city.

Wanted the 93rd Instruments for Siberian Forces

A request that the 93rd band instruments be placed at the disposal of the military authorities, to be used by one of the infantry units that will comprise the Canadian expedition to Siberia was received. It was stated in the communication from Lieut.-Col. G. H. Gillespie that there would be a considerable number of recruits from this military district. Col. Gillespie desires to know whether the instruments would be available, and offered to purchase them if they could not be loaned. Major Eastwood met both the Council and the War Veterans, and was notified to the effect that the instrument would be kept here.

Umbrellas are going to be longer, slimmer and with ivory crook handles.

Perfumes and sachets are supposed to have vanished since the war.

IS VIRTUALLY SURROUNDED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The Fourth Turkish Army on the Palestine front is virtually surrounded in the region east of Jordan and faces annihilation by General Allenby's forces, to-day's advices show. The total of prisoners already taken was increased to-day to 45,000. The annihilation of the 4th Army now hoped for, would complete the cleaning up of the Turkish forces in Palestine, accounting for about 80,000 men.

Electric Iron Causes Fire

An overheated electric iron resulted in a short circuit to-day at 1.38 p.m. at the home of Mrs. H. Archambault, 523 Elm street. The ceiling was damaged a little, but the damage was practically nil.

Turning Point of War Reached

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES—A noteworthy turning point of the war has been reached. It is just six months since the German General launched its last great effort for victory in the west, and two months since the allied command recovered the initiative and began to speed the invasion back. The overturn in this short period is so considerable that we may well be content to regard it and the prespect soberly.

Taken in conjunction with the Austrian defeat on the Piave in June, the slow decline of the submarine menace a certain recovery in Russia, and news of the victories in Macedonia and Palestine, the last two months' progress in the west does indeed warrant high hopes, but does not warrant an easy, boastful temper. In this time we will have taken some 200,000 prisoners, over 2,000 cannon, and an immense amount of war material. The enemy had taken less in double the time, but not so much less that we can afford to make light of our past misfortunes. We have recovered lost ground, suppressing the only likely opportunities for a German offensive, and reached a front whence the Allies can make a general push.

All these successes have been preliminary to the allied general offensive proper. For that movement fresh forces will come into play, for surprise has lost none of its ancient efficacy on the battlefield, and it is to our interest to extend the front as much as our means will allow, always providing for continuity of pressure. Both positively and relatively those means are now constantly increasing but the enemy has still wide spaces of French and German soil over which to retreat, shortening his line in the process.

For a time, at least, conditions of war will change. We now are nearly everywhere up against a succession of fortified zones which, to say the least of it, makes an easy triumph not to be expected. It may possibly be a long and wearying struggle. On the other hand, as the German Army and people increasingly recognize that the end is certain, there may be a more or less sudden collapse of their resistance. Already there are signs that the military caste is losing its grip. Two months of unvaried failure seems to have taken effect in the army as well as in domestic affairs.

Its flagrant lying on the subject of poison gas suggests a mind distracted if not actually deranged. A very amusing instance of the mental disturbance arrives as I write in the shape of a passage from the official German wireless service, issued from Nauen last evening. This bulletin insists that the German troops evacuated the St. Mihiel salient in good order and saved their war material.

"All installations of value, including lightning apparatus, clothing, stores, pianos, and musical instruments, were brought away in good time."

A piano was saved, but 250 square miles of ground were lost and 15,000 prisoners and 111 cannon were left behind. What a boast!

U. S. WOMEN TO REPLACE MENFOLK

Men to be Ousted From "Non-Essential" Work.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Machinery designed to force men out of non-essential employment and muster women of the nation to take their places, was put in motion to-day by one thousand community labor boards, reaching into every section of the country.

The boards are acting under detailed instructions from the Government, working through the United States employment service.

Each board soon will publish lists of industries in its locality in which men should be replaced by women. The lists will be based on surveys of all industrial plans in each board's district. The surveys will be minute. Each job will be studied to determine whether a woman should fill it.

Publications of the lists is expected to cause employers to employ many substitute women as a result of the pressure thus exerted.

This move is a result of the enlarged army program, under which four million men will be sent to France by next June.

It is expected to weed out of non-essential employments every man in the nation. The corollary is the probable induction of hundreds of thousands of women, not only into non-essential war industries, but into munition factories as well. Officials say the number of women may run into millions.

CAPTIVE SERBIANS SOLD INTO SLAVERY

PARIS, Sept. 26. — The Serbian Government is in possession of documents proving beyond possible question that thousands of Serbian prisoners have been sold as slaves for a specified period to Turkey by Bulgaria, Austria-Hungary and Germany, according to a Balkan Agency despatch from Corfu.

The prisoners, it is stated, were delivered to contractors who are engaged in work in Asia Minor and Anatolia. It is said they were subjected to terrible treatment and that thousands have died from typhus, cholera and hunger.

Taken on Western Front

TWENTY THOUSAND BULGARIANS CAPTURED

Paris, Sept. 27. — The Franco-American attack on both sides of the Argonne is continuing satisfactorily. The total length of the line of attack is between 40 and 50 miles. The Americans advanced to an average depth of seven miles, and took five thousand prisoners. The French made a gain of an average depth of four miles, taking over three thousand prisoners. Immense booty was taken.

STILL MAKING PROGRESS.

British Headquarters in France, Sept. 27. — The British are still making slight progress and have taken several hundred prisoners between Selency and Chateau Wood.

SEEMED DAZED.

American Army, Sept. 27. — The Germans seemed dazed by the ferocity of the attacks. One division took twenty guns and hundreds of prisoners.

BABUNA PASS CAPTURED.

London, Sept. 27. — The Bulgarians are still retreating rapidly, and it is reported that Uskub has been captured. The Serbians have seized the Babuna Pass. Twenty thousand prisoners and two hundred guns reported taken.

Thursday Evening Bulletin—

PURSUING ENEMY.

Athens, Sept. 26. — The Allies are pursuing the enemy on the entire front between Monastir and Velet... Franco-Greek detachments are now marching toward Prilep, which has been occupied by the French. On the left bank of the Vardar, the British and Greeks are pursuing the fleeing enemy toward Valandova.

VELES CAPTURED.

London, Sept. 26. — Veles (2 miles southeast of Uskub) in Macedonia, has been captured by the Serbians.

GERMAN REPORT.

Berlin, Sept. 26. — The German headquarters statement says: "Seven allied airplanes which were attacking Frankfort-on-Main, were shot down to-day."

RECAPTURED IN 1918.

With the French Army, Sept. 26.—The French Fourth Army has taken Servon, which has been in the hands of the enemy since 1914, and Navarin Farm, where there has been heavy fighting.

PENETRATED FOR SEVERAL MILES.

London, Sept. 26. — French and American troops launched an attack this morning on a front of 40 miles between Suippe and the River Meuse the Germans voluntarily abandoning their forward positions. Americans attacked on the right and French on left. The allied forces penetrated the German positions for several miles.

Our Scores of "Ifs" Take Up Too Much Room in Our Lives. They Keep Us From Seeing and Enjoying the Flowers That Bloom in Our Yard.

—Says FERN HOWARD

I had three interviews yesterday. One was with a man and two were with women. All were seeking that illusive thing called happiness. And it must be their own special brand. No other kind would do for them. In this they do not differ from the rest of humanity. Every human being is longing for contentment. And every one believes it would be his, were it not for that thorny obstacle which obstructs his pathway the great obstacle "if." We would be happy and moral "if" it were not for this or that.

Everywhere, we hear the cry that is almost a prayer, "I could be happy if I only had money," or "if I were married" or "if I had my freedom." And so we postpone being happy until to-morrow, or the day after, or until all the "ifs" are removed, from our pathway. Then, we assure ourselves, we will begin to find happiness.

The man with whom I had an interview unfolded a tale of financial disappointments. For many years fate had been against him. He said: "I was almost hopeless when I risked all the money I had in the world in a new business venture only to find that I had bought a pig in a poke. I found myself thinking, 'if I had only made good, I would have been perfectly happy.' Then I thought of something you once said: 'Always insist upon present happiness; the future may never come.' And I resolved then and there to start all over again, and from the very beginning to enjoy the fight."

I admire this man. He has the true fighting spirit. And because he has eliminated "if" from his vocabulary, he will no doubt find both success and happiness.

The second interview was with a woman who had a husband, children and a beautiful home. And yet she isn't happy. She said: "I long for new interests and adventures. I want to enjoy life."

She has failed to realize that new interests and adventures do not always bring happiness. And that unless we form the habit of enjoying

THE "Y" IN THE BATTLE.

HAD FULL SUPPLIES IN VILLAGE ALMOST BEFORE THE GERMANS WERE OUT OF IT.

A few hours after the Battle of Amiens began a Canadian Y.M.C.A. Officer and some of his assistants entered one end of what is still called a village though it is only a mass of shattered ruins.

Before they had gone far they were told by a guard that the Germans were still in the village. This did not stop their plans, and an hour later a big cauldron of hot tea was giving off a cloud of vapouring steam and a little mountain of biscuits and cigarettes were piled alongside for the benefit of all passers by without cost. By this time the enemy had been evacuated.

More than one man was heard to declare after partaking of the hospitality of the organization that the "Y" saved my life."

The second interview was with a woman who had a husband, children and a beautiful home. And yet she isn't happy. She said: "I long for new interests and adventures. I want to enjoy life."

She has failed to realize that new interests and adventures do not always bring happiness. And that unless we form the habit of enjoying life from day to day we will never enjoy it. What, after a'l, are distant fields? They may have less flowers than the ones near at hand.

The third and last interview was with a childless widow. "I could be happy if I only had companionship," she said, discontentedly. "I want a husband and children. I long to live a happy, normal life."

I admit that this woman's "if" is a thorny obstacle in her path to happiness. But she has never realized that even a husband and children cannot bring happiness unless within the heart there is a spirit of contentment.

And so if our life is confused by a number of "ifs" why take them so seriously? We are missing a great deal if we do not pause now and then and give a word of encouragement to a friend, listen to the music of the spheres and enjoy the flowers that bloom in our own door yard.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards —Receipts yesterday, 53 cars, with 715 cattle, 106 calves, 870 hogs, and 1,196 sheep and lambs

Yesterday was cleaning up day at the cattle market, with quite a few loads of held-overs from the earlier market to be disposed of at the best prices obtainable, which meant, in most cases, material concessions, from the first demands. As most of the day's offerings consisted of light common cattle, the concessions did not affect the general steadiness of the market for anything of decent quality in the butcher killing line. The market is still good for the right class of cattle, but weaker for the common stuff.

Lambs steady.
Calves steady.
Hogs steady, though, too many heavy hogs are being marketed and stricter grading is likely.

BULGARIA HAS HAD ENOUGH

Wants to Suspend Hostilities and Talk Peace.

LONDON, Sept. 27.— "Bulgaria offers armistice to the Allies." This brief bulletin was flashed to the Examiner at nine o'clock this morning. In the Examiner of Wednesday and Thursday it was reported that Bulgaria was in the mood to seek a separate peace, so that the above news is not surprising.

An armistice in the dictionary sense of the term, implies a temporary suspension of hostilities by agreement of both parties, or in other words a truce while negotiations for settlement are in progress. It is safe to assume that the only kind of an armistice the Allies will accept will be a complete and unconditional surrender. Bulgaria is as familiar with the Allies' peace terms as Germany, and is at liberty to accept them.

GRAIN MARKET

It begins to appear very evident that so far as the United States Government is concerned, no "profiteering" on an unlimited extent on grain dealing transactions is to be allowed. All grain exchanges were notified yesterday not to permit their members to speculate beyond reasonable limits. It was also intimated that profits above a certain percentage would be taken by the Government. These notices are generally understood to mean that further restrictions will be placed against speculative trading in grains. The effect on yesterday's markets was a sharp decline of 1 3-4c. to 2 3-8c. in corn prices.

Semi-ready Tailoring

After three months' wear

That's when you can judge clothes; often within a month

You have met the "flash" friend—all smiles and alluring in outward form—who turns out to be a hollow sham on close acquaintance. So it is with other things. After three months' wear, after years of acquaintance with Semi-ready Tailoring, you will like it better and better. It's the inside as well as the outside you must judge by, and now that cloth and clothes cost more money, it pays to be particular.

German Schoolboy Ignorant of Sports

Physical Training From Primary Grades to University Has Military Service in View—Its Damaging Effect.

The German schoolboy has no sports. He has no games to stimulate personal initiative and develop a sense of fair play. His "team work" is something imposed by authority. His physical training is a part of his school curriculum and discipline, planned to make him a better soldier and contribute to efficiency. Outside school hours he has little time to play and little interest in the possibility of playing.

Even in the primary schools the German child is part of a militaristic machine; and in that inexorable mechanism, sport as the Anglo-Saxons know it, athletics which inculcate the sense of "playing the game," have no part, just as in the German language the words "sport" and "athletics" have no equivalent. During the last two decades the German primary and secondary schools have adopted more and more the tone of the barracks.

The German system of education, in respect to physical training and games, is thus summarized by Dr. I. L. Kandel, Associate in Education at Teachers' College, Columbia University, and a member of the staff of the Carnegie Foundation. Dr. Kandel is an authority in the field of comparative education.

As Dr. Kandel outlines prevalent education methods there are two main reasons for this absence of sport. First, the boy's school programme makes no provision for it, and his physical exercise is arranged on a different plan; and, second, he is so overworked in school that he has neither time nor energy for games outside school hours-even if he were encouraged, as he is not.

"As for physical training in Germany," said Dr. Kandel, "it all tends toward military service.

"The German schools have physical training—plenty of it, but they approach it from a different standpoint from that of the Anglo-Saxon peoples. Physical training in the schools was begun in Germany as a part of the national reorganization of the early nineteenth century. Its main purpose is and has always been State efficiency.

"Many educators have considered the possibility of introducing English athletics in Germany, but they have met with the strongest opposition; first, because it was a foreign idea, and, second, because athletics and games essentially develop individuality and initiative instead of social solidarity. Here," and Dr. Kandel opened a book which lay on his desk, "are a few sentences from the Prussian regulations in regard to the purposes of physical training in the primary schools; they state first that it is to contribute to the pupils' physical wellbeing and erect and graceful carriage, which is all very good, and continue:

"'To increase the strength, endurance, and versatility of the body. To assure the acquirement of a certain skill which is useful in later life, especially with reference to service in the army. To aid the school in its educational activity, that the pupils are trained in the performance of physical exercises to strict attention, quick comprehension, accurate execution of a command, and to willing subordination to the purposes of a greater whole.'

"Most physical training," Dr. Kandel went on, "is devoted to work in mass, under orders, supervised by specially trained experts. Every elementary school teacher must have had a course in gymnastic training, and each secondary school has specialists for that subject.

"Very recently, under the Crown Prince, there has been a development which is called by the English word sport, but it is confined to horse racing and boat racing. There has also been a rapid development of tennis, but it is still limited to the well-to-do classes above school age whose habits of mind have already been formed.

"In the schools themselves the discipline has tended of recent years to become definitely militaristic. This is especially the case in the secondary school, where the pupils range from 9 to 18 years of age. But it is found in the primary school as well. The old type of secondary school professor that used to be caricatured in the comic papers has disappeared, and in place of this scholarly, rather elderly type, are young teachers who in many cases are reserve officers in the army, or who hope to become such. As Professor Alexander points out in his 'Prussian Elementary Schools,' the most frequent cause of breakdown among elementary school teachers in throat trouble—which comes from constant shouting at their pupils."

Of the tone used by the Prussian elementary school teachers in addressing the pupils, Professor Alexander in the volume quoted by Dr. Kandel, writes, after discussing discipline and obedience:

"This attitude of subjection on the part of the children is not always obtained by a mere show of dignity, but in far too many cases by shouts and blows."

"There are several things to be considered in the matter of the German child's play," Dr. Kandel observed, coming back to the subject of "athletics."

"Every school time-table provides for recesses. But during these recesses the children are not expected to run about and exercise freedom. They walk round and round the yard in twos or fours, most frequently eating a lunch, no matter what time of the day it may be!

"In the elementary schools there are games, but they are not what we would call games. They resemble our kindergarten amusements. In all the programme of the German school boy there are no games that develop either initiative on the part of the individual, or team work among the boys themselves, as distinct from the communal esprit de corps which comes from constant mass obedience to common authority. Everything looks towards the boy's twentieth year—the time when he is to begin his military service.

"The boys who finish their school work with a certain standard can complete their military training in one year. This one-year class constitutes a real caste in the German Army. Because of the association of success in school with social position no activity outside school work is encouraged.

"So, you see, that while the German school gives far more physical training on the whole than do we, its underlying purpose is simply discipline. There is plenty of open-air life for the German school boy, but it is mainly educational. The 'school excursion' idea is, for example, well developed, but always the children are under the guidance of the teachers."

Dr. Kandel went on to speak of the effect of all this supervision, overwork, lack of opportunity for free development on the mind of the German boy:

"Many of the boys realize the restraint they are under in school, but they look forward to the freedom of the university. The boys who only go to the elementary schools are under subjection until the age of confirmation. After that they leave school; their control during the years of adolescence is becoming an increasingly difficult problem in Germany. Sudden freedom from the rigorous control of school has led to moral breakdown and an increased percentage of juvenile delinquency, which is probably higher than in any other country.

"This is acknowledged in the most recent report we have got from Germany. But it is not simply a war condition. It was the fact before the war as it is now, that German boys suddenly set free from the stern repression of school broke down morally."

BALL FROM THE SKIES.

New Form of Amusement Devised by Baseballists in the Army.

A new form of amusement has been devised by that portion of American soldiery drawn from the ranks of the baseballists. It appears to be of a rather risky sort, but the American sport wants nothing that is devoid of the elements of exciting adventure. The new wrinkle was originated by the aero squadron at Kelly Field a few weeks ago, when a baseball dropped from a plane 700 feet up was caught by a player on the field below. Three dozen balls were dropped before an adventurous player succeeded in making the catch.

The airplane boys over in France heard of this piece of business and at once determined to go the Kelly Field boys one better. The Plane News, printed by the men on active service in France, tells us about it. Among the members of the Third Aviation Instruction centre there are twenty baseball teams, and these will try for what is to be known as the "record catch." A plane piloted by a flying officer will rise to a height of 750 feet, fifty feet higher than was attained in the Kelly Field contest, and at intervals of every three or four minutes the pilot will swoop over the spot where the contestants will be lined up, dropping single balls, so that there will be but one ball dropping at a time. In case a catch is made of the ball from 750 feet, the pilot will rise to 800 feet, and the men given a second chance to win the record. To the one who catches the ball at either of these heights will go the world's championship and a medal proclaiming his feat. The ball he catches will also become his property for a keepsake.

The velocity attained by these falling balls by the time they reach the ground must be something terrific, and the player who might be struck by one of them would stand a good chance of being knocked into a pile of broken bones. But no harm of that sort has yet come to these adventurous fellows, and there is no need to anticipate so unlucky an occurrence. We would not be surprised to hear some day of these American aviators catching German cannon balls.—Charlotte Observer.

GERMAN AIRMEN DESERT

Many Said to Have Done so in Resentment of Favoritism

AMSTERDAM Sept 26.—Germany's losses in the air now include many, if not most of the star pilots, whose names during the past year received continuous advertisement in the German communiques. Fourteen of the airmen credited by the German reports with the most numerous victories have been killed or captured.

Any one who follows the German air communiques carefully, finds some curious statements in them. Occasionally an absolutely new name crops up, its owner being suddenly credited with his twentieth victory or so, the name perhaps never appearing again.

Germany's enthusiastic adoption of advertising methods in the recording of all sorts of aerial performances by individuals has clearly failed to provide German air service lately with stamp of pilot it desires. The largely increasing numbers of desertions from this service during the last few months is said to be due to a general lowering of morale and dissatisfaction with a system by which it is alleged favoritism is shown to certain pilots.

Prediction is Made That Era of Cheap Food Will Not Return

The prediction made by Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, in an article in the Review of Reviews, that the era of cheap food will never return, will interest those who have hesitated over their returning to the land in the future because of fear that the return of peace would herald a reaction in the prices of farm products, and restore conditions under which many farmers practically worked for their board, and others were able to show a bank balance at the end of the year only by employing their wives and children without wages.

The condition to which reference is made is familiar to all who have lived in rural communities. In many of these the farmer who was even "well-to-do" was the exception. Lack of accounting system has kept many farmers in ignorance of the fact that they were actually selling their products below cost. Mr. Poe quotes with approval the striking statement of Alva Agee that our city consumers have been "objects of charity," in that they have received the benefits of the unrewarded labor of women and children on the farms. This expresses in a few words the thought which must have occurred to many a farmer on casting up his profit and loss accounts.

The price of farm products will hardly return to the old levels so long as other industries, in the centres of population, continue to compete openly for the labour of the country. It is no secret that the chief reason why the farms have not been able to hold the young men has been that the city offered them the opportunity to earn real wages, and paid them in cash, which were not theirs so long as they remained at home with their fathers. The recently intensified movement toward the factories has increased the desire of young men to be financially independent. Wages in manufacturing, and in other urban activities, may or may not remain at present levels; that is a question for the future to determine. But the fact remains that in the readjustment of our economic affairs agriculture will be compelled to compete on a basis of fair reward for the labour involved. Young men, who are figuring on making careers for themselves are not going to be drawn into a business which obviously does not pay. Only one alternative to famine would seem to be open—such prices for all the products of the farms as will insure a profit to the man of industry and intelligence, after he has paid fair wages to his workmen.

Mr. Poe points out that another reason why crops were sold below cost is ceasing to be a reason. It was that "millions of farmers, uncompensated for their labour in the prices of their products, were content to keep on farming, because they were reaping the 'unearned increment' in land value." He attributes this to the rapid increase in tenant farming, but it is probable that there are other reasons. Clearly, however, the tenant farmer cannot profit from the speculative increase in the value of land owned by his landlord, and he must have his reward in fair prices for the crops which he has to sell. The same condition is likely to prevail as to farmers who own their own land, because there comes a time when he cannot sell for materially more than the price he paid. In many sections land values already have come to a standstill. James J. Hill once pointed out that "the actual value of the soil has already deteriorated more than it should have done in five centuries of use," and Mr. Poe quotes the late Henry Wallace as saying that much western land, while advancing three fold in value in thirty years, is actually producing less corn than then.

The full extent of our transformation from a rural to an urban-dwelling people is appreciated by only a few. In 1880, only 29.5 per cent. of the population lived in cities; in 1910 the urban population was 46.3 per cent of the whole. At present, owing to exceptional conditions, the proportion credited to the cities must be much greater than that. The back-to-the-land movement, while it depended for stimulus upon sentimental books which described the beauties of prairie sunsets, and upon theoretical works of the 'little land and a living" type, was a failure. The lure did not endure. Drawing incompetents to the farms was not good business anyway. It is now beginning to be realized that farming is a calling requiring technical skill, business experience, and considerable executive ability. The kind of man who would make a master farmer could rise to the top in other more profitable enterprises. And this condition will prevail until the rewards of agriculture are commensurate with the labour and ability involved.

It would seem reasonable to expect that there will be, at least, no sudden drop in food prices as a whole. A few commodities may decline in response to the law of supply and demand, but these will be at the expense of other products. Increased crop production as a whole will be necessary to insure against famine, and this can be insured only by a suitable reward for the agriculturist. The reward must consist, not only of better prices, but as Mr. Poe suggests in conclusion, of better conditions of rural living generally. To work out a desirable programme is a task not beneath the dignity of leading statesmen or economists. — Oregonian.

A FAMOUS GERMAN FIGHTFR

(By Lieut. F. I. Sleath.)

On a day in April the German official communique credited Cavalry Captain Manfred von Richthofen with his 80th aerial victory. The next day came the news that this, the greatest of German pilot fighters, had died shot down in the region of the Somme.

In no quarter was the news heard with greater regret than among British flying men. A German writer once described Richthofen as a relentless destroyer, whose sole passion was to kill. His British opponents held a higher opinion of him. To them he was an admirable fighter, a clean and skilful antagonist, and their feeling towards him was best illustrated by an incident at a dinner some months ago, when in a company composed of crack flying men, one of the greatest British pilots rose and gave as a toast—Von Richthofen.

Much of the success of the British pilot has always been ascribed to the fact that from boyhood he is reared in an atmosphere of sport, where hard knocks are taken with equanimity, and an opponent is not so much a man who may win, as one of the several factors forming the game. It is interesting to note that Von Richthofen grew up in a similar environment. He came of a good land-owning family, whose traditions had not been moulded in the harsh school of Prussian officerdom. When he joined the Uhlans before the outbreak of war, he became one of the few family exceptions who had taken up soldiering as a profession. For generations they had been noted rather for their skill in the saddle and with the gun, and it was this trait of family character which sent Richthofen into the German flying corps when the stalemate of trench warfare put an end to cavalry activities.

It took some little time before he gained prominence in his new career. Nearly the whole of 1915 he spent as an observer on the Russian front, and not till the end of the year did he become a pilot. For a short time he served on the Verdun front during the great German attempt to break the French line. But again he was sent to Russia to fulfill the routine duties of a reconnaissance pilot. In August, 1916, however, he joined Boelche's famous squadron of Fokkers, and then his career as a fighter really commenced. His first British victim was brought down in September of that year.

He did not succeed to the command of Boelche's Jagdstaffel, as has been erroneously stated, but soon after that airman's death he came into public notice in command of a "circus" of his own. It should also be noted that the term "circus" is not of German origin, but a name invented by the British flying corps to denote a squadron of fighting scouts which holds a roving commission and appears at any point of the line where the need is greatest. The gaudily painted exterior of these machines may also have stimulated the inventive genius of the name-giver, for certainly with their blue, yellow and red stripes and parti-colours, they reminded one of all the striking paraphernalia of a travelling showman's outfit. The Germans put several of these squadrons into commission, but none gained a reputation equal to that commanded by Richthofen, its record of successes down to a recent date amounting to over two hundred.

To the great regret of his British opponents he went into a temporary retirement towards the end of last year, his marriage to one of Germany's great heiresses—Fraulein von Minkwitz—quickly putting an end to the rumours of his death. It was during this period that his remarkable memoirs were published. As a book these memoirs astonished the world by their egoism and bad taste. The book was, of course, part of the German Government propaganda scheme of making their flying service popular at home and feared abroad by the glorifying their most famous pilots; and poor Richthofen was only a pawn in the imperial game. The sporting outlook of the average German official can be well gauged by German communiques : assertion—necessarily based on the very vaguest conjectures —that Richthofen was not vanquished in fair fight with British aviators but killed by a stray bullet from the ground. The facts showed this conjecture to have been without foundation.

Richthofen's method of fighting was moulded upon that of his master, Boelcke, and had all the characteristics of the old Fokker school, which aimed at dealing a knockout blow to an unsuspecting enemy. These tactics applied particularly to opponents already slightly disabled. Richthofen himself never hesitated to break off an engagement as soon as the odds seemed against him, and nearly all his successes were gained in the presence of his whole squadron, generally with the majority of his comrades protecting his tail. He was at his favourite game when he met his death.

His whole idea was to win, or to live to fight another day. In this respect he differed materially from that great-hearted fellow Voss, who never hesitated to take the odds, no matter how desperate. But if Richthofen's methods did not exactly reach the British public school boy's standard, it should be remembered that he came of the Fokker school, and of an autocracy which has consistently set its seal on the adage—the end justifies the means.

STRIPPED OF HONOURS

Lieutenant-Colonel Gingras Is Dismissed From Service.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25.—Thursday Lieut.-Col. Daly Gingras, D.S.O., was formerly dismissed from the military service and stripped of his honours and decorations as a result of the sentence commended by the recent general court martial held to enquire into seven charges against him. The announcement of the sentence, as approved by the Governor-General in council, was given by Major General F. W. Wilson, C.O.C. in his own office military headquarters, in the presence of a number of staff officers.

At the conclusion of the announcement of the sentence which read "the sentence is that Lieut.-Col. Daly Gingras, D.S.O., be dismissed from the service and stripped of all his decorations," he was released from the close custody in which he had been held and was permitted to proceed to his home.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

THE STRUGGLE FOR LENS.

One of the Places Where Canadians Won the Day.

Lens, now so famous owing to the fighting that has raged for its possession from the early days of 1915 to the present day, was, before the war, a town of some 25,000 inhabitants. It is situated in the Department of Pas-de-Calais, 17 miles southwest of Lille.

The size and importance of the place cannot be gauged by the population of the town itself, explains Major C. J. C. Street, R.G.A., author of "With the Guns," etc. Lens is merely the nucleus of a large colliery district, a mass of bricks and mortar, dominated every few yards by tall chimneys and massive winding-towers. Round the town itself lies a mass of suburbs, locally known as cities, each consisting of a group of miners' dwellings, or corons, clustered round a central pit. To the eastward a series of straggling towns stretches in almost unbroken continuity as far as Douai.

Lens was a town before the exploitation of the coal field that surrounds it, but it has made only one important appearance in history. This was in 1648, during the Thirty Years War. On Aug. 20 of that year the French, under the leadership of "The Great Conde," inflicted a severe defeat upon Spaniards at Lens.

This part of Artois is a country of low chalk downs and wide shallow valleys, under cultivation up to the very edges of the spoilbanks, or crassiers, that surround the mouths of the pits. Lens itself lies on the little river Souchez, long since canalized and connected to the Canal de la Haute Deule, which runs from Douai to Lille. But the natural features of the district are almost entirely overshadowed by the artificial features produced by the local industry. The most conspicuous of these are the spoilbanks, where the refuse from the mines is tipped. Sometimes these are conical in shape, like the huge Twin cones of Auchel, or the lesser ones of Philosophe and Vermeller, sometimes they stretch like huge black fingers across the country, as at the famous Double Crasssier of Cite St. Pierre.

By the side of the crassiers rise tall mine-shafts, of which the Pylons at Loos was the most noticeable. This extraordinary lattice-girder tower stood up 300 feet from the level plain, utterly dwarfing the hills about it, and was plainly visible from the hill of Cassel, nearly thirty miles away. Besides the winding shafts, a forest of chimneys and water-towers bewilders the eye, sometimes in regular groups, like those of the Societe Metallurgique du Pont a Vendin at Wingler, or of the coal-ovens of Annay, sometimes singly, as in the suburbs of Lens itself.

In May, 1915, the British line was extended from the La Bassee Canal to a junction with the French at the Noeux-les-Mines-Lens Railway. The fourth corps took over the new sector, and on Sept. 25 the Loos attack was launched by the first, fifteenth and forty-seventh divisions, the latter composed entirely of London Territorials. The fighting lasted until Oct. 13, by which time the British line had been advanced to a considerable depth over a wide front.

But the dominating position of Hill 70, north of Lens, from which observation can be obtained into the town itself and over much of the country beyond, had not been won, despite desperate efforts on the part of the guards division on the days following the first assault; nor was a frontal attack made upon the town of Lens.

It was not until the spring of 1917 that any further attempt was made upon this sector, although early in 1916 the Germans succeeded in driving the British from some trenches about Souchez. But on April 9, 1917, the British first and third armies delivered an attack on a wide front, of which the northern sector was the ground before Lens.

The Canadian divisions, by the capture of Vimy Ridge, made the German positions in this area untenable, and forced them to withdraw. By the evening of April 14, the whole of the town of Lievin was in Canadian hands, and the line ran thence to the old British front line north of the double crassier. Great quantities of ammunition of all calibres, as well as several guns, and stores and material of every kind were abandoned by the Germans in their retreat.

Another lull ensued on this sector, lasting until Aug. 15. Early in the morning of this day, the Canadian corps attacked on a front of four thousand yards east of Loos. Their objectives were Hill 70, the plantations about it, and the western and northwestern suburbs of Lens. Practically the whole of these objectives were gained rapidly at light cost, and in exact accordance with plan. Only at the farthest apex of the advance, a short length of German trench west of Site St. Auguste resisted the first assault. This position was captured next day, and the whole extent of the advance was held in the face of determined counter-attacks. Over one hundred prisoners and a great quantity of booty were taken.

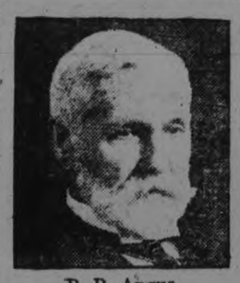
C.P.R. Directors in the West

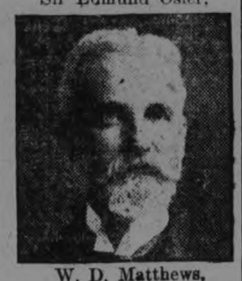


R. B. Angus,

Sir Herbelt Holt.

Lord Shaughnessy, President C. P. R.

Sir Edmund Osler.



W. D. Matthews,

C. R. Hosmer,

Sir Augustus Nanton,

Senator F. L. Beique,

E. W. Beatty, K.C.,

ALTHOUGH Montreal is the headquarters of the C. P. R., the interests of the railway lie just as much in the West as in the East, if not more so, and the train which carries the President on his annual inspection trip always carries with it a strong contingent of directors. The names of the directors who accompanied Lord Shaughnessy this year give an indication of the ramifications of the interests which are allied to the great transportation system, for these directors are all powerful also [illegible] of banks, of light, heat and power, or pulp and paper, of steel, or foundries, of bridge building, of the milling industry, of textiles, of shipping and of insurance. They are representative not of Montreal only, but comprise also leading citizens of Toronto, Winnipeg and Victoria, B.C., and the French-Canadian element is admirably represented in Senator Beique, the President of the Banque d'Hochelaga. The Senator was not actually a traveller on the special directors' train this year, for he was already in Vancouver on a trip of his own when that train left for the West. Mr. R. B. Angus is the doyen of the directors, but in spite of his years his is one of the most active brains controlling the destinies of the C. P. R. At the age of eighty-four he went on a trip round the world, and since that he has been twice across the continent. The great Angus Shops at Montreal are named after him, and the present outstanding position of the Bank of Montreal in the world's finance is due in no small degree to his foresight and ability. Sir Herbert Holt was identified with the early construction of the C. P. R., so far back as 1883. The Royal Bank under his presidency has made phenomenal progress, while he is the moving spirit behind some of the most important power development schemes in Canada. Mr. C. R. Hosmer began life as a telegraph operator, and at one time was manager of the C. P. R. Telegraphs. He still is closely identified with several telegraph and cable companies, but in 1899 extended his interests, so that he is now president of the Ogilvie Flour Mills and is a director of the Bank of Montreal, the Royal Trust Company, the Dominion Textile Company, the Laurentide Paper Company, and many other such representative Canadian undertakings.

Mr. W. D. Matthews is one of the leading financiers of Toronto. He was long engaged in the grain trade, and has been president of the Toronto Corn Exchange and chairman of the Eastern Grain Standard Board. As president of the great Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Trail, B.C., he is particularly interested now in mining development.

Sir Edmund Osler is also a citizen of Toronto. As president of the Dominion Bank and head of one of the most powerful brokerage firms in Canada, his financial advice is of great value to the C. P. R.

Sir Augustus Nanton came to Winnipeg in 1884 and remained there to become the leading financial authority in the West. Like Sir Herbert Holt, he has taken a strong interest in the Canadian Patriotic Fund.

Mr. E. W. Beatty, K.C., in addition to being a director is also the legal vice-president of the railway.

The advent of so distinguished a party of visitors naturally created great interest at the cities where the special train made a stop. The itinerary selected has enabled these directors to see not only the country traversed by the Main Line of the C. P. R., but also the more northern areas of the three Prairie Provinces. In this way they have obtained a comprehensive idea of crop conditions in Canada's great West—conditions which are on the whole very satisfactory in spite of rather unfavorable climatic conditions in early summer.

Metz, the Inviolate Fort, Now the Centre of Attack By the New Crusaders

History Shows it Untaken Till Transferred to Germany in the Treaty of 1871—The Strongest Fort Germany Has on French Border.

Nearly due south of the little duchy of Luxemburg and about ten miles from the French frontier, lies a quaint patchwork town. Narrow zigzag streets push their tortuous way until they suddenly find themselves pulled up before a modern highway. Winding roads, framed in the mosaic architecture of seven or eight centuries stand cheek by jowl with macadam highways along which first-class shops stand sentinel. Here the huge pointed windows and slender columns of a Gothic cathedral, mellowed with centuries of rain and sunshine and stained with the red, gritty dust of Lorraine, frown down upon a military establishment, which reeks of new paint, yellow soap and whitewash

This is Metz, the strongest fortress on the French frontier. Throughout history it had never succumbed to an enemy and had thus earned the name in which it is today enshrined, in thousands of French hearts—La Pucelle. With Strassburg, Metz ranked, before the war as one of the two two great bulwarks of the west frontier of Germany. Today it far outdistances Strassburg in military importance. For Metz stands as guardian of the Bassin de Briey, the greatest iron-producing region in the world. Herr Schrodter, one of the foremost iron masters of Germany, declared recently that without the Bassin de Briey, Germany could not conduct the war for another three months. Briey is the tactical and economical pivot of the war and between the Franco-American army, that achieved so much success in the St. Mihiel salient, and this key to the German puzzle, stands Metz.

MOLTKE'S COVETOUS EYES

It is a curious, but irrefutable fact of history that Bismarck was against retaining Metz after the war of 1870, and it was only the urgent insistance of Moltke that secured this key of German defence for the new empire. Apart from its integral value as a fortress, defending the approach to the Rhine provinces, Metz has been of inestimable value to Germany during the present war as a sure and speedy source of supplies and reinforcements.

Metz was known to the Romans as Divodurum, the chief town of the Mediomatrici, and it is from the name of this ancient people that the present name is contracted. Caesar describes it as "one of the oldest and most important towns of Gaul." The Romans realized its great strategical value and connected it by splendid roads with Toul, Strassburg, Verdun, Lyons and Rheims. It reached the zenith of its commercial prosperity in the thirteenth century when it was granted the privileges of a free imperial town. It fell into the hands of the French through treachery in 1553 and was heroically defended against Charles V. by Francis, Duke of Guise. It was formerly ceded to France by the Peace of Westphalia in 1648 and it remained in her possession for over two centuries.

From the military viewpoint the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 is largely centred on Metz and this chain of forts. Marshal Bazaine was in command of the fortress and of the army stationed in and around the city. On the morning of August 14, the first and second German armies were heading for the Moselle between Metz and Pont-a-Mouson when they encountered stubborn resistance in the neighborhood of Borny. At night, when Bazaine drew off his men and retired under cover of the Metz guns, he assured his staff that the German spell had at last broken. It was a day of victory for France. Two days later came the battle of Vionille—the hardest fought battle of the war. The terrible effectiveness of the German artillery was counter-balanced by the dogged determination of the French infantry. Then came Gravelotte of August 18, which the Emperor William, accompanied by Moltke and Bismarck personally directed. The fall of St. Privat at the close of a hard day forced the French army within the lines of Metz, where they were invested for 54 days.

SURRENDER MADE HISTORY

While the garrison suffered little from hunger, yet sickness and suffering were rampant. Small-pox and dysentery were epidemic and the hospitals and private houses were crowded with the wounded and the dying Yet it was only when the French army, as an army had ceased to exist, that negotiations for the capitulation of Metz were begun. These were completed on October 13, and on the following day the army on the Rhine surrendered.

The death-roll of the civil population had reached 3,587, but had Metz held out for forty-eight hours longer events before Paris and Orleans would probably have taken an altogether new turn and the whole history of Europe for the last half century might have been written very differently.

THE FIRST ATTEMPT ON METZ

Once again in August 1914 Metz and the surrounding terrain played a part on the world's stage. On August 14, General Castelnau assumed the initiative and by the 19th he had reached Saarburg and Chateau Salins, thirteen and fifteen miles southeast of Metz respectively. That was as far as he got. On the following day he was obliged to retreat to Nancy, where he fought brilliantly, desperately and successfully, to defend the Grand Couronne. Yet Castelnau's objective was plain. He was following the route favored by several successive French General Staffs for the invasion of Germany across the Seille thence bearing northward on Metz. It failed, but this diversion of strength against Metz in the hope of delaying the German onrush brought French fighting enthusiasm to the highest pitch. It was a blow struck at once to recover beloved Alsace and Lorraine. General Joffre was not deluded into the belief that he could capture Metz at a single stroke, but no movement could have so rapidly and so effectually consolidated his armies Today Castelnau and the Second Army of France are back to their old positions of four years ago. On their left is the American Army, which is west of Metz. At the proper time Castelnau may again cross the Seille and bear to the northward on to Metz.

Twenty-two strong heavily gunned forts, to which field fortifications have been added, defend the capital of Lorraine. The forts of the outer ring are on high ground, as are also five of the forts of the inner circle, and these dominate this part of the Mossene Valley. Approaches to the outer ring are through narrow valleys and along the plain of the Moselle. To capture Metz, even with the heaviest and newest Allied guns is a task of the greatest magnitude, and no event in the whole war would raise such frenzied joy among the French people.

MAIN FORTS ALL RECENTLY BUILT

The main forts have all been built since 1899. They are at an average distance of 9,000 yards from the borders of the city, and the diameter of the fortress circle is approximately 18 miles. It would be impossible to bombard the city except from the air until one or more of the great chain of forts had been silenced. Beyond this there is an outer chain of forts beginning on the right bank of the Moselle. These are the forts Haesler, St. Blaize, Wagner, Orny, Sanry, Mercy-les-Metz, Maizery, St. Barbe Argency, Lothringen, Amanvillers, Kaisenin and Kronprinz. The permanent forts of concrete are served with ammunition from the city by a light line of railway, and this system also connects with scores of designated positions located in anticipation of attack.

Metz has many famous monuments. Among its ten city gates is the eutsche Tor, erected in 1445, which still bears the marks of the seige of Charles V. Its library, with priceless volumes of early Lorraine history, the magnificent church of St. Eucharius and many other ecclesiastical edifices have been admired by thousands But there are two monuments that hold a special interest today At the top of the broad esplanade, up and down which civilians and military, residents and tourists used to promenade, stands the equestrian statue of Kaiser Wilhelm I., the grandfather of the madman of Europe. Again just outside the city stands the little cemetery of Chambiere, where more than 8,000 French soldiers lie buried. These emblems of the sword and the cross of Metz enchained or Metz delivered, are set before the eyes of the new crusaders, who stand today knocking at the city

Looted Hospital Beds For German Dugouts

Red Cross Protection Useless—"Loot Detachments'" Duties Systematically Defined.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY.—Efforts to organize pillaging by the German Army and the transportation of loot appear, from official documents and verified incidents, to have been much more effective than the work of carrying out the removal of legitimate war booty during this Summer's operations.

The sacking of private houses and public buildings throughout the regions from which the Germans have been driven has been done with characteristic German thoughtlessness specially detailed squads. Advancing French armies, however, have found intact on the plateaus in the region of Soissons and elsewhere important dumps of munitions which the French had been obliged to abandon in their retreat last Spring.

An order, signed by General von Marwitz and dated May 28, was found in the pocket of a prisoner. It throws peculiar light on the subject of pillaging. After condemning in severe terms disorganized looting operations by soldiers for their personal account, this document calls attention to the rules established for organized pillage and says the men of the "loot detachment," bearing white arm badges and special identification cards, have the same powers as military police. It adds, "The chief of these detachments will confiscate eatables and drinkables as well as objects of current use that are collected and keep guard over them until the arrival of the exploiting group."

Quartermasters are authorized by this document to apply to the use of their units a proportionate quantity of booty suitable for immediate consumption and to send the rest to the rear.

Private letters written by prisoners give additional evidence of the extreme limits to which looting is practiced. A striking example of this work is found at the Vaubuin Hospital, near Soissons, which was established and managed by Mlle. Canton-Baccarat. Before the building was demolished by German shells, it was completely sacked by German officers the principal offender being an army surgeon, whose name is known and has been placed on file for future reference.

Although supposedly under the protection of the Red Cross, this hospital was robbed of everything it contained, including 50,000 francs in money and securities from Mlle. Baccarat's safe, framed pictures and photographs, for which coarse caricatures were substituted. Linen bedclothes, laboratory instruments, and supplies valued at 1,500,000 francs and given by Americans, were taken. All the finer objects were shipped to Germany, and the ordinary hospital beds went to the dugouts of German artillery officers around Soissons. Two hundred of these have been recovered since the region has been occupied.

"She Has Lost Faith in Me"

This was the thought that took the heart out of Brian Hackett. He saw that his wife no longer expected him to succeed.

And she had believed in him so staunchly, when she married him! He had seemed a hero to her, then,—a man with a big future

But success comes slowly, and Ruth had not the patience to await the day when Brian would make money. Instead, she took a business position herself—an act which put their whole marriage-partnership on a different footing.

And do things ever right themselves for Ruth and Brian? Does the day ever come wnen, as at first, the wife stands behind her husband, positive of his success, inspiring him with her steadfast belief in him?

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S CLOSED DRAWERS.

The closed drawers shown in No. 8874 are very practical and easy to make, and, besides, they have the advantage of not requiring a great deal of material. The pattern is in two pieces, with a seam through the centre front and centre back. The lower edges are cut in points and the openings are very wide. The top is gathered on a drawstring run through a casing. The drawers may be finished with a plain hem or trimmed with embroidery.

The lady's closed drawers pattern No. 8874 is cut in six sizes—26 to 36 inches waist measure. The 26 inch size requires 2⅛ yards 30 inch, or 2 yards 36 or 40 inch material.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction
This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents

PASTOR IS ARRESTED.

Methodist Minister at Windsor is Gathered in as Defaulter Under M.S.A.

WINDSOR, Sept 26.—Rev. George Kersey, pastor of Howard Avenue Methodist church here, was taken to London yesterday as a draft defaulter. He was arrested by an officer of the Dominion Police and turned over to Capt. W. Griesinger, M.C., local Provost Marshal.

Although exempt from military service under the terms of the Military Service Act as an ordained minister or divinity student, he violated the Act by failing to send in documents to the divisional registrar, after appearing before a medical board. Local military authorities and Dominion Police declined to discuss the matter, except to verify the arrest of the pastor, who was formerly a Y. M. C. A. worker in Toronto before accepting a call from the Windsor congregation.

GERMAN REGIMENTS DESERT TO HOLLAND

Dutch Sentries Busy Trying to Prevent Smuggling, Too.

Gerald Van Casteel, of 115 Broadway, New York, a former Deputy Assistant District Attorney, who has returned from a visit of ten months to Holland, said that along the entire length of the Dutch boundary all German infantry had been withdrawn and replaced by marines, men who had never taken an active part in the war. Dutch officers, Van Casteel said, told him that Germany was forced to replace the soldiers with marines because of frequent desertions.

"It had been the custom to send regulars from the German armies after periods of fighting for intervals of rest and recuperation on this quiet sector of the neutral border," said Mr. Van Casteel, "but immediately after the recent big German offensive three regiments of infantry crossed into Holland and accepted internment. Some of them frankly said they wanted no more fighting like that in which they had been engaged.

"Germany has combed Holland for grease and all kinds of lubricating materials. Their chief necessities just now appear to be cotton, wool, leather, rubber, nickel, and brass. While I was there German agents got possession of a quantity of tires, rubber, and other materials, and prepared to smuggle it by rushing the Dutch sentries. Armour was placed atop of their car to protect the occupants from bullets. As the roads leading from the Dutch side are barricaded, the Germans in this case took the car through woods, smashed a wooden fence between sentry posts, and finally made the run to the German side under fire from the Holland guards.

"Practically all resentment over the seizure by us of Dutch ships has disappeared, and the people generally are pronounced for the Allied cause, but Holland's position continues to be a very difficult one, and one which requires the most skilful diplomacy. Holland cannot openly offend Germany, because upon the will of the latter depends the coal supply. Yet Holland is trying at every point to be true to her neutral duty by enforcing the laws, and to do this she is carrying a great financial burden by mobilizing her man power in arms.

"I know from my own observation that the talk we have sometimes heard of Holland favouring Germany is nonsense. But for he German menace Holland undoubtedly would be clearly on the side of America and her allies. If there were no other reasons Holland would continue to oppose any alliance with Germany on economic grounds—the danger of losing her colonies, Java and Sumatra."

FEW WILL HAVE TURKEY.

Prices Are Too High and Thanksgiving Menus Will Consist of Chickens Mostly.

Turkey meat promises to be a real luxury for the Thanksgiving menu this season. In fact the great majority will have to be content with something less than the king of fowls and dine on chickens and ducklings.

In the opinion of one dealer there will be very few spring turkeys on sale. "The birds will not be in finished condition, in other words they will not be fat enough to be put on the market." During the week several farmers brought in turkeys to the market, but they asked $2.00 for a four-pound bird, and were forced to take them back with them.

Good old-fashioned pumpkin pie will be in order. Although a small crop is reported, vegetable dealers state they have plenty on hand to meet the Thanksgiving trade. These are not so large as in other years, and will sell from $1.00 to $2.00 a dozen.

HARVEY SAYS HE GAINED 25 POUNDS

Weighs More Than He Ever Did in His Life Since Taking Tanlac.

"To show you what Tanlac has done for me, I gained twenty-five pounds on five bottles and am now twelve pounds heavier than I ever was in my life," said M. Harvey, who is employed by the Grant, Smith-Porter Ship Building Co., and lives at 410 Fifth street, Portland, the other day.

"For four or five years," he continued, "I had an awful time with stomach trouble that steadily got worse in spite of all I could do. I didn't relish my food, and what I ate would ferment on my stomach and bloat me up with gas, till I was miserable for two or three hours afterwards. The terrible misery in my stomach would go clear through to my back, and at times I would belch up much of what I had eaten. I fell off from a hundred and sixty-eight to a hundred and fifty-five pounds. I felt so tired and worn out that it was all I could do to keep going and many a time I felt like I just couldn't hold out another day. I took all sorts of medicines, but nothing did me a bit of good.

"When I heard of so many people taking Tanlac and being helped by it I got me a bottle to try, and it wasn't long before I was feeling like a different person. I eat like a pig now—anything I want and nothing hurts me at all. I never had any trouble with gas or those awful stomach pains and I went up in weight to a hundred and eighty pounds. That old worn-out feeling is all gone, I am working hard every day and never feel tired like I did before. My wife was very much run-down too, and complained of indigestion and nervousness. A few bottles of Tanlac soon straightened her out and now she says that she feels as well as ever."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

GATHERING WAR HISTORY.

All the Armies Keeping Record of Minute Details of Fighting.

LONDON.—A few years hence school children studying their histories of the great war may be curious to know just how the minute details of the battles were assembled. Teachers will find the answer in the historical sections of the various armies and the officers who roam the fields searching for data, rescuing precious incidents from oblivion, gathering the details of chaos into an intelligent story.

It was Canada which first set the example of how to glean history from the rubble of the battlefield. When the United States entered the war its officers, who were selected for historical work, had the benefit of the experience of the experience of the Allies. Photography, sketching, and painting have a big share in the task of recording the war, France having set an example for pictorial efficiency with its Mission des Beaux Arts.

Up and down the front among the battalions go special officers, giving instructions to battalion headquarters how to write their official war diaries, which are supposed to be accurate chronicles of the doings of the battalion month by month. If a big event occurs the battalions concerned chronicle their part in it, the narrative being signed by the commanding officer. Then the diaries are sent to headquarters, where they are filed, tabulated, and preserved by the historical section.

Behind the front line a staff of photographers and moving picture men are constantly at work on incidents, which, in time, will be recorded and shown to the public. There also are the artists with their paint and brushes getting local colour, painting the havoc of war as it is. Reality is what they strive for.

Recently an artist was so anxious to get a glimpse of the actual happenings of a little raid that he went over the top with the troops into a German trench. Another, working near the front, remained too long in an exposed position, and an inroad of enemy raiders forced him to hurry away from his quarters so quickly that many of his canvases were captured.

WINDSOR POLICE GET RAISE

Complying with a petition presented by the members of the department the Windsor Police Commission has allowed a ten per cent. salary increase, making the maximum wage of first-class patrolmen $110 a month The increase will date from August, and continue until December 31, when a new salary schedule may be made.

Deserted From Austria, Found Chaos in Russia

Italians Reach Native Land, Via the United States, After Many Hardships.

ROME.—That truth is stranger than fiction is the only definition for the adventures of certain soldiers belonging to the Italian provinces still subject to Austria who deserted and succeeded after incredible experiences in reaching Italy. One example is that of Piero Bartolo, a native of Trentino, who, when Italy declared war on Austria, was called under the Austrian colours.

Speaking to a correspondent he said the general feeling, even among the Austrians, was that the war would last only a few months, owing to internal troubles of the Dual Monarchy. For this reason Bartolo thought he would soon be freed, otherwise if he had even distantly dreamed the war would last so long he would have fled sooner. He deserted on a rainy, dark night on the Russian front, where the Austrian and Russian trenches are some 400 or 500 yards apart. On his sector of the front the Russians and Austrians often fraternize. The Russians interned Bartolo in a camp near Kiev, where he remained with many Italians till January of this year, when the chaos among the Russians reached such a point that all discipline and order disappeared.

Bartolo, with several hundred deserters from Trieste, Dalmatia, and Trentino, was allowed to go to Kiev, where an Italian Major was stationed, to see what he could do to help them reach their native country, Italy. The Major did all in his power, but communications of any kind were stopped.

The Italians were getting impatient of the long delay and determined to try to escape on their own initiative. They were divided into groups of ten, each headed by a man who spoke Russian well. The Major gave them 40 rubles each and wished them luck. They were all dressed in the Russian uniform and crossed Russia on foot or by rail. Once the compartments were so crowded they had to hang for hours on the outside rail of the train.

Bartolo says that the confusian in Bartolo says that the confusion in coupled with the complete ignorance of the population, has brought matters to the present state. The ignorance of the peasants is such that often they have not the vaguest idea of whether the French, Italians, and Americans are fighting for the Entente or the Central Empires. Too stolid to participate in the political uprising, their only aim is to steal and pillage as much as possible from their former lords and masters. Strife and bloodshed are almost continual in the cities.

Food is very scarce. The only food Bartolo could procure was the blackest bread and a kind of ham at an exorbitant price, paying for a piece of the former, worth two cents, one ruble.

The trains are run by wood or naphtha, seldom by coal. The disorganization has reached such a point as to cause continual collisions. It seems to be effectively within every one's right to steal from and kill his neighbour. Bartolo saw all the passengers of the first and second class turned out, their belongings and clothes stolen, and then left naked on the platform, happy to escape with their lives.

The deserters, sometimes declaring themselves to be pro-Bolsheviki, sometimes pro-Czar, succeeded in reaching Siberia, where the conditions were a little better. It was sufficient to say "Italianski," and be allowed to continue their way. After many hardships they arrived at Vladivostok, where they were sent to a concentration camp with Germans, but when matters cleared they were despatched to San Francisco.

Upon landing in America, all received American uniforms. Bartolo is almost inarticulate with emotion when he describes the wonderful reception all received at the different stations. He never thought it possible there would be such enthusiasm in America for the war. Naturally, Bartolo and his friends were taken for American troops going to Europe, but when they arrived in Chicago the head of the railways telephoned along the line, announcing that they were escaped Austrian soldiers of Italian nationality.

Everywhere they were received with the most wonderful demonstrations ever witnessed. Women and girls offered refreshments, cigarettes, cigars, chocolates, and flowers, and bands played Italian patriotic songs. They arrived at New York and embarked on a transport carrying American troops to Europe. Upon landing they were taken for Americans and received an overwhelming welcome. Bartolo and his companions are now awaiting to join the Italians at the front.

FEATURES IN COAT STYLES

Straight line, semi-belted and full belted models are all represented in those late Fall lines of coats for women, which are most popular with the general run of buyers. Fine wool velours and pom pom cloths are mentioned as being among the best selling coat fabrics thus far. Various military features are still sought but apparently not in such volume as earlier in the season There seems to be a slight tendency away from the strictly tailored models and toward more dressy garments On these as on others, however, fur trimming is in high favor and fine plushes imitating seal are also used extensively —New York Times.

As a matter of fact there is very little common sense in the world—most of it is uncommon.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

SHOULD NOT IGNORE LIGHTER FORMS OF MUSIC.

The music student, however seriously she may be disposed to take herself and her work, should always remember that a little of the serious lighter side of music is not to be by any means scorned. To give the whole of the attention to the strictly classic and severer models is apt to send the pupil into a rut and nothing tends to diminish interest and cause a feeling of dullness quicker than moving in a rut. Besides, there are often others to be considered. It is by no means exceptional to see parents, who are spending a good deal of money on a daughter's musical education often at a sacrifice to themselves sorely disappointed because their child, when asked to play in company, refused on the score of having no suitable music — because she is giving all her attention to the study of difficult and intricate classical music, and which she feels instinctively would not be appreciated by those present. There is plenty of what might be called drawing-room music to be had, which will in no way detract from the standard of taste which the student has set up for herself, and which at the same time will give pleasure in the hearing to those who have not been educated to an appreciation of the severer forms without descending to rag time. Take for instance the delightful and melodious compositions of Rubenstein Goddard, Heuselt and a host of others.

The young and earnest student should always remember that the mission of music is to bear a message to all and that though there are those who understand it when conveyed in complex and classic form, there are very many to whom it only speaks when clothed in simpler and more direct language.

WHERE "FOR HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW" CAME FROM

It will come as a big surprise to many to hear that the tune of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" is a very old piece of music. The very nature of th ewords which are sung all over the English-speaking world gives the impression that it is one of our comparatively modern popular songs; but not so. A French writer once contended that this tune was originally used by the Crusaders, his decision having been influenced by the fact that the Arabs in Palestine were heard to sing it. But other authorities agree that its formation stamps it as a popular tune of the day.

A tune very similar to this was used by a French soldier after the battle of Malplaquet to satirize the English general, Marlborough, in which form it attained wide popularity. It might have been forgotten had not a madame used it for a lullaby for the infant heir to the French throne in 1781. Marie Antionette heard the tune and it soon "caught hold" all over France, becoming a favorite melody for satirical couplet of all kinds used in French vaudevilles of that period. Later it became so closely associated with the French that Beethoven used it in a Battle Symphony in which it was cleverly contrasted with "Rule Britannia" and God Save the King."

The tune was likely used first by the British at Gibraltar in '872 to the words "D'Artois returns from Spain." It did not take long for the melody to win the people of England. It became a great piece for violin or flute and later a teaching piece for the harpischord. Somewhere about 1830 somebody coupled the air to the "We Won't Go Home Till Morning" with "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" for the second verse. From that occasion on the song went everywhere and today the sun never sets upon it.

MUSIC HELPS SCHOOL WORK.

Rather than prove a hindrance, music should tend to help school work, for anyone seeing the eagerness with which children get out their singing books, could but feel that to them it was no lesson, but a recreation, which sends them back the fresher to their work! as a great writer says: "Recreation is not being idle, but easing the weary part by change of business."

A clever principal, given a fair chance, should be able to make music avitalizing force in his school, and by its means create among his pupils that esprit de corps and pride and love of their school which could only have an all round good effect.

DEBUSSY, THE INNOVATOR.

Much interesting reading has been provided by the writers in musical magazines and periodicals through their varied criticism regarding the works of the recently deceased French composer, Claude Debussy. Whether he had or had not given all his best will never be known, but certain it is that his death is a serious loss to modern music. It has been said that he produced nothing of any importance since the war began—but how many of our composers have written anything which can be called their best, with the war as an inspiration. The fact that none have done so seems to prove indisputably that beautiful thoughts and divine fancies cannot draw their being from cruel, horrible and heartrending sources. It will be with Debussy's music as of that of all other composers—but time alone will prove the true value of his work—but as an influence upon musical compositions he will surely always be accorded a place of honour. It has been said of him that he gave a new voice to the piano and a new freedom to the orchestra. He has been called an innovator because he abolished the key, but again it has been shown that he was doing in reality only what the ancient Greeks had done in the days before Christ and what the monastic composers were doing until the middle ages. It was said of his wonderful and finest works, the opera Pelleas et Meliasande, by Maeterlinck himself, that in it the singer has nothing to sing and the orchestra had nothing to play! But as a well-known critic writes "This statement will not be endorsed by any one who thinks the soul is something. The music and drama of this opera represents the states of the soul. What Claudel has succeeded in doing in his plays Debussy has succeeded in doing in "Pelleas" and the opera is a unique achievement which will be honoured as long as men honour the mystical in art."

MAKING MUSIC UNIVERSAL.

Much is the one language every living thing understands — man and beast are soother by it, even flowers are said to be susceptible to its strains. Infants are readily quieted by it.

"As the things that are seen are greater than the things that are unseen, children, even when very young, should be taught to find the beautiful within," said a well-known woman recently.

And music will teach children to seek and find the beautiful within. It will beautify them and bring colour to their lives. It will impart grace and refinement and the kindred virtues so closely associated with good music to the child who learns to love and appreciate it. Give our children all the music they can drink in and we will soon have a new race of people in this country. We should all know and love good music, and the way to reach this is to begin with the child. To-day the home without an instrument to reproduce the voices of artists, the genius of musicians, is like a house without a library. In ancient days few men—only the rich — could own good books. Each book was written by hand, illustrated by hand. Men travelled thousands of miles to visit the library, and the burning of a library was a misfortune for the whole of civilization. To-day the poorest man may own the greatest books. The intellectual genius of all ages is on the shelf, asking only to be taken and made part of the owner.

As it was with books and the thoughts of the greatest writers, so it was, until recently, with music and the genius of the great musicians. Music was for the few, the knowledge of the best music throughout the country was practically nil.

To-day, thanks to the invention of the instrument that speaks, not only the greatest music, but the greatest musicians, singers and players, of musical instruments are at the command of every family. It is impossible to predict the wonderful results that will come to the human race in a few generations from this making good music universal. Wherever the father and mother will it, the children may hear from their infancy the works of genius, the greatest composers, the most wonderful artists.

THE EVIL OF HACKNEYED VIOLIN PROGRAMMES.

The reiteration by violin soloists of hackneyed programmes is an evil that cuts several ways at once and calls for serious attention. While it may be conceded that the bulk of the public welcomes numbers with which they are familiar, it does not follow that they will not listen with pleasure to works with which they are not familiar, and it must be conceded that the constant repetition of well-known numbers is a handicap to the advance of musical education. But its most serious result is that it works to the detriment of the creative artists by closing to a large extent one of the few avenues to which it is possible for him to reach the public ear. There is a tendency to throw the blame for this condition on the creative artist and to dismiss the matter lightly with the remark that soloists do not play new pieces because they cannot find new pieces good enough to play. As a matter of fact, any composer who is trying to bring his work, published or in manuscript, to the attention of a soloist, can testify to the difficulty of getting any soloist to listen to his work and even, if the soloist takes the trouble of examining them and is pleased with them, he will usually decline with regret to play them, on the grounds that the public does not like new things.

The wonder is that under the circumstances, composers, who themselves, do not play their own compositions, take the trouble to write violin pieces at all. And if under such circumstances so many composers do write such good stuff for the violin, it is easy to imagine how much more fruitful they would be if they felt that they had a reasonable prospect of securing a hearing. If violin soloists generally would make a practice of presenting a certain number of new works during the season, the result would be very healthful.

THE FUNNY PAPERS' TREATMENT OF MUSIC.

"Wanted—A wife, one who can play some musical instrument, preferably the violin, guitar, banjo, horn, piano or any other, the more the better. She must be between the ages of 40 and 60 and a good cook." Apply to box number so-in-so etc. This advertisement, quoted verbatim, appeared in one of the papers recently. Fun-pokers might accuse the advertiser of needing a professional entertainer rather than a wife. But levity cannot easily put aside the fact that men prefer wives with some musical education, and further they prefer wives who keep up their music after marriage.

The husband knows what it means to go home from a day of irritable routine grind, a bit tired and likely peevish. And then after the dishes are done, the flowers watered, the kiddies to bed, and after she has talked with him over the evening paper, to have his wife sit down at the piano to play and sing a little is relaxation, and rest and joy and home. So practical is this music in the home that the funny papers' jokes and yarns in one way fall far short of the mark. Indeed it is the idea of gross exaggeration in them, the distortion of the real truth that gives them the humorous turn.

You have seen the picture of the "father with daughters" who caught a burglar in his house. Father stands before the grand piano on which is a book "First steps in Music". Covering the thief with a monstrous revolver the courageous pater issues the ultimatum "unless you want me to call the police you've got to steal that piano!" Now anybody knows that the fond father of daughters considers among the proudest moments of his earthly existence those when his children launch out on a course of music study. When each daughter masters her first piece that really has a swinging melody to it, daddy is simply wreathed in smiles even if it is, as some say, because they will marry better some day.

Then there are the old chestnuts of the cornet player next door, the trilling young lady in the flat overhead, the phonograph across the the street still going top speed at midnight, and the fiddler who never gets his locks shorn. Each in turn rings in a funny side of music but after all in analysis of the wit reveals the reveals the place music has in our everyday life. The picture of an enraged group of soldiers demolishing a phonograph because a kind lady who sent some records to the camp quite thoughtlessly included "The Watch on the Rhine' 'indicates a quarrel over a certain offending selection but puts emphasis on that instruments place in the lives of the soldiers.

So, music-lovers don't you frown on the cartoonist's joke! It isn't at all undermining the foundation of music it is a tribute to music. The rapidly growing list of pictures and stories about music and musicians puts the art a step upward into the rank of the foremost topics of the day, alongside the activities of Lloyd George, President Wilson and the great Allied leaders. Even the serenading cats, the basso-profundo bull-frogs, and the friendly-humming mosquitoes join the birds in confirming the truth that nothing is complete without music.

COMPOSERS AND THEIR ART

As things are now, too many composers wae their energy on the mint, anise and cummin, and neglect the larger matters of their art. They are continually absorbed with the means and forget the end, which is really of the most importance. Sensational effects, perfectly smooth pregressions, overstudied harmonies, "musicianly treatment"—all these ideas and original conception. The latter are apt to be turned doen as "crude" and "amateurish" by this dilettante style of composer, who constantly puts manner above matter, the method of cooking above the food itself.

Nor is the attitude of a large proportion of the so-called musical public any more favourable to the rise of a distinctive music. Too often it assumes a supercilious, know it all, frame of mind and refuses to take sediously anything that does not bear the name of one long before the public. There is too much prating-in-technical music terms and too little love of music for its own sake.

The fact seems to be that new music is not to any large extent demanded "So much has been written, why attempt any more?" And this is especially true in regard to productions verging on the classical manner. The sensational is always in demand. Like the weed or the mushroom, it rises in a night, and in a night takes its departure.

SYNCOPATIONS.

"The trombone is too sacred an instrument to be used frequently" is a remark attributed to Mendelssohn.

Did you ever notice in a parade the band's peor cymbal player has no way of carrying and reading a music book? He is obliged to watch the bass drum stick for the beat.

One great benefit from instruction in instrumental music in the schools is that the children of the poor are given at least a chance to show musical talent the same as are the children of wealthier parents.

Two songs of a similar type displaying the same mood should not follow each other on the programme, the effectiveness is lessened greatly from lack of contrast. But when a humourous song for example, follows a dramatic number, the desired result upon the audience is secured.

The special Deputy Park Commissioner appointed by the Mayor of New York to have charge of all the city's municipal music says he is looking forward to the time when they shall have people's concerts all the year around as a regular and important feature of their civic life. The whole continent is waking up to the fact that concerts for the masses should not be confined to a few band concerts during the summer.

An actress in speaking of her work confesses that the operatic star has a decided advantage over the ordinary stage favourites, for the music helps so much. "It is easy to suggest big climaxes," she says, "if you are aided by an orchestra which is playing music which in itself expresses certain motives. I remember that when I played in the 'Bird of Paradise' I was carried along by its Hawaiian music. In a play of that sort music has a very definite place. The day of the so-called incidental music has passed. An intelligent audience doesn't want soft music when the hero makes love to the heroine nor is the plaintive wail of the violin necessary when the mother has lost her only child."

THIS new phonograph brings you a new joy in music. Play it and you will understand.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Mollie's German Spy

By AGNES G. BROGAN

The light in Billy May's eyes deepened as he looked at his sister, hovering over her flowers. In Billy's vernacular, Mollie was "his only excuse for living."

Long years before when the little orphaned sister had piteously held out her arms to him, Billy had pledged her his life's devotion, and she had repaid. It had been no easy task to lay aside the coveted career and to take up as a necessity to her advancement the first opportunity offered in a country village. Being rural mail carrier had made it possible for "Angel" to have her education and the usual accomplishments befitting a modern young woman. That is what Billy had named the girl when her starry eyes spoke their gratitude from beneath a nureole of golden hair, and "Angel" she had remained.

College life had not spoiled Mollie for the village; she but returned with new enthusiasms and plans for his home making. He came to her now across the garden, his hand held wearily against his throbbing temples.

"Angel," he said, unsteadily, "something's wrong. The heat, I guess, yesterday. It was hard riding so long in the sun. The whole place seems to be swimming around and, Angel—"

"Why, Billy," she cried in quick concern, "you must lie down this minute and not stir again today."

There was nothing for it but to obey; passively he allowed himself to be led back across the lawn, gratefully his eyelids closed as Mollie drew the blinds of his room. Then suddenly his eyes again opened.

"The mail route," he fretted. "Delivery at nine o'clock has to be made, Mollie; no one else to do it."

Painfully Billy endeavored to rise, but Mollie forestalled him.

"Well," she answered, cheerfully, "if the trip has to be made, it will be. I'll go myself."

"The road," he grumbled, "is new to you, Angel, just cut through in some places, lonely as—"

"Billy!" she cried, exasperated, "as if I'm not riding alone around the country all the time. Well, see here, if you are bound to be afraid, let me take your revolver. Surely, if I don't slow down I can hold your spy at bay 'in the offing' and speed away."

Billy was laughing with her now, but nevertheless he inspected his weapon of protection and handed it over with a glance of admiration to the little sister.

In the outer room Mollie lifted the gun gingerly, and removed its loadings.

"There," she sighed in relief, "it is safe now. It could still frighten hands off and I'd never pass another peaceful night if I were to shoot even a German spy."

Up and down the broad, winding road sped the small red car. The new mail deliverer was prompt and efficient, not a moment did she lose and the task was most exhilarating. In the wind-blown cheeks the color deepened, about the blue bandeau the fair curls twisted merrily, then all at once Mollie bent desperately to her levers. A figure appeared before the car in the center of the road, and to avoid running the figure down seemed impossible. She must be quick or—Mollie closed her eyes in sick apprehension even as she sought the brakes. When she opened them again the car was panting and throbbing from its sudden check, and the man saved from danger stood near enough to touch her with his hands. He was leaning heavily upon a stout stick, evidently some fallen branch, and his steely eyes looking straight into hers, awakening her to a quick remembrance of past fear. Might this not be a high-handed way of holding up a car—a car and Uncle Sam's mail? The man was certainly foreign in appearance.

The face seemed all at once stamped upon Mollie's memory and while she sat stupidly regarding him, the man spoke brusquely, with a decided German accent.

"If you please," he said, "I must ask to be carried in your car. I have injured my ankle and passing conveyances are rare."

Without awaiting her reply, his hand reached boldly for the knob of the car door; then Mollie came back to reason.

"One moment," she said, sweetly "the opening is difficult," and bent over as if to assist him. But in the moment her hand found the revolver in her skirt pocket and its shining barrel was on a level with the man's astonished face.

"If you move, or try to enter the car," said Mollie, still in that slow sweet tone, "I will shoot."

An instant more and the car flew down the road, leaving the intruder staring at something shining at his feet.

"Jove!" he muttered, dazedly, as stooped to pick up the revolver. Evidently this most unusual girl had dropped the instrument of protection in her flight.

"Jove!" the man muttered again this time in amused perplexity, for the revolver was unloaded; with the harmless toy she had held him for a moment in breathless terror.

And Mollie speeding down the highway, determined to tell nothing about it all. When her better perhaps anxiety might not go trouble him.

He looked up refreshed from sleep as she entered.

"Gee!" he greeted her, "I am glad that trip is over. I am better. You must leave me this evening and go over to Warwick's, as you had planned."

"If it were not such an unusual opportunity to meet a notable," Mollie said, "I would not think of leaving you, Billy." But fancy the privilege of seeing with one's own eyes a great sought-after artist. It is pure luck Anna Warwick happening to be his favorite cousin and thus persuading the personage not only to meet her village friends but to talk to them upon 'Art Across the Seas.'

"He has refused all invitations heretofore and the flattering hospitality of New York. So if you are sure you will not mind my going, Billy—"

And Billy was very sure that he did not mind. Mollie almost forgot the disagreeable incident of the morning as she arrayed herself in her new and modern white gown. She must show that artist from abroad that they were not behind the times in Waycross, even though the grass grew tall upon each side of Main street. But when she entered the Warwick's brightly lighted reception room, disappointment was evident among the assembled guests, for the great artist had not arrived.

"He left the house early this morning," Anna Warwick confided, "promising to return for luncheon. And such a perfect luncheon as I had prepared, my dear. But he did not return. Dinner was also served without him; no excuse for his delayed absence, not even a telephone message. Temperament, I suppose. Wandered all the way to Brayton, no doubt, looking for light and color, and then probably calmly sat down and ate his meal in the hotel, forgetting all about us. Franz is quite equal to do a thing like that, but by this time you'd think he might have a glimmering of returning consciousness. Well, I will show the people some of his sketches and his picture.

"Here, Mollie, dear, is his photograph. Striking likeness. Distinguished looking, don't you think?"

Mollie, the large photograph clutched in her hand, suddenly subsided upon a deeply soft couch. Where had she seen that small uptwisted mustache, those steely clear eyes, that crisply curling fair hair—even the studious frown beneath the fine brows?

There was no need to think. The face had been indelibly stamped upon her memory as its owner had stood that morning on hand reaching for the knob of her auto door. The barrel of Billy's empty revolver had been levelled at that same distinguished countenance. And he, the man had said, he had injured his ankle and could not walk. He, the great adored artist, while she, Molly, the heartless, the suspicious, had actually threatened his life and ridden away! Oh! it was horrible! Perhaps now even as the eager throng awaited his coming, the suffering man lay alone!

"Anna," she said, with a little quick catch in her voice, "I must go home; now, at once."

"Well, dear," her friend agreed, "if it's Billy you are worrying about, of course we will excuse you."

Molly did not wait to see Billy. Her remorseful heart burned to atone. In the garage she found the little red car and turned on its lights. A moment she lingered to sweep into a box the contents of two plates left from the evening meal, then out into the night silently swung the car.

On past the last twinkling house light, noisily over the wooden bridge, heavily through the newly cut roads into the deeper darkness. The headlights showed him at last, a long figure stretched motionless beside the road, his face upraised to the stars.

In a moment Mollie was bending over him. "Oh!" she breathed in relief as his unbelieving eyes looked up into hers. "I feared that you had fainted."

A grim smile slowly spread itself over the artist's whitened face. "The surprising young woman!" he murmured. "Have you returned to carry out your threat of shooting me down? If so, I am completely at your mercy." He pointed to his crudely bandaged ankle. "Couldn't get away if I tried."

"Oh, please," Mollie entreated, her eyes soft with pity and almost incoherent in her repentant haste she told him the day's story.

"And so," he said at last, "you were defending Uncle Sam's mail; you were plucky enough to take the place of an invalid brother, and tonight," his eyes held hers in strange fascination, "you came back alone over the rough ways, through the darkness, to rescue me, a stranger?"

Mollie nodded, and the clasp of his hand was so fervent, so pleasantly disconcerting, that she turned in laughing embarrassment to the emergency lunch she had brought him. And after that, his grateful glance still upon her, she led him heavily leaning upon her shoulder to the waiting car.

At the Warwick's entrance, when she turned to leave, the artist put forth his hand. "The atonement," he said, and the slight accent had now a caressing sound, "is not yet complete. I must exact until the time of my recovery two hours' reading each afternoon."

"As you will," answered Mollie, demurely.

"And at least one hour's conversation each morning."

"That, too," agreed Mollie.

So, in a city art gallery is exhibited a wonderful picture, a girl whose wide eyes are as blue as the band on her hair. Against the artist's name in the catalog is written, "Portrait of Mollie, his wife." But to Billy May the picture is that of "The Angel."

An Educational Problem.

The colony of Mennonites present a real educational problem in Saskatchewan. From the first they have been opposed to public schools and to English as a medium of instruction, fearing that with English there would come also the "hochmuth of the unredeemed world and the gradual disintegration of the community spirit." The tenets of the faith include refusal to participate in civic duties, to bear arms or to take oaths.

Why Percy Sobbed.

Reference at a social affair was made to the subject of conjugal infelicity, when this anecdote was fittingly related by Representative Frederick H. Gillette of Massachusetts:

One afternoon two tramps knocked at the back door of a farmhouse and meekly asked the farmer's wife for something to eat. Instead of giving them bread, she seized a convenient broomstick and began to beat them over the head with such good effect that they precipitately fled for the gate. A mile down the road one of the tramps stopped running and sobbingly dropped beneath a tree.

"Why, Percy," exclaimed the other, solicitously turning to his comrade, "did she hurt you?"

"No," answered Percy, with another burst of sobs; "fortunately, most of the blows went wild."

"What's the matter then, old fellow?" queried the second. "Why those tears?"

"Tears of sympathy," answered Percy. "Sympathy for the lady's poor husband."—Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

Weak women should try it now. Don't wait! Begin today. This woman's tonic and nervine will bring vim, vigor and vitality. Send Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10c for trial pkg., tablets.

Paris, Ont.—"About three year ago I was ill in bed and suffered severe pain. The doctor said I had gall stones, but his medicine did not help me. A neighbor had been taking 'Favorite Prescription' and it had benefited her so much that she urged me to try some of hers, and that first dose helped me so much that I sent at once for a bottle. I was very much surprised at the prompt relief this medicine gave to me after the doctor had failed, and I have never had such a spell since, but whenever I feel the least bit run-down or in need of a tonic I take the 'Favorite Prescription' again for a few days. It has never failed to restore me to perfect health."—Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, P. O. Box 752.

PLANS EQUITABLE COAL DISTRIBUTION

New Order Intended to Ensure Against Discrimination in Deliveries.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—Regulations providing for the more uniform distribution of coal needed for industrial uses in Canada have just been approved by the Governor-in-Council at the instance of the Fuel Controller.

While the Fuel Controller endeavors as far as possible to avoid the imposition of irksome restriction on the coal trade, action was in this case forced upon him through arrangements recently completed for the shipment of United States coal to Canada on a system of regular monthly allotments. Complaints had also been received that many importers were discriminating in their coal deliveries in favor of their most valued customers. The degulations now passed are intended to promote a fair and equitable distribution of industrial coal.

It is reported that all mine operators in Canada and importers of industrial coal into this country shall supply their customers in proportion to their requirements, so that no one industrial consumer shall at any time have advance supplies on hand while others are under-supplied.

A preference list of coal consumers is also outlined in the regulations. These include railroads, military and Government buildings, public utilities, retail dealers and manufacturing plants chiefly engaged on war contracts. These must be given preference in supply over all other users in the order named.

Very drastice provision is also made against the unnecessary hoarding of coal, on the part of industrial useds, and heavy penalties are provided. Those whose operations require large advance stocks at the end of the present year must obtain special permits from the appropriate Provincial Fuel Administrator.

Provision is made whereby mine operators and importers may require certified statements from their customers as to tonnage of coal on hand, and required for each month, so that an intelligent distribution may be made for all coal mined and received in Canada.

British Troops Attacked on a Wide Front South of the Sensee River This Morning and Satisfactory Progress is Being Made Troops Went Over the Top at Five-Thirty in a New Operation—Allied Attack Between Rheims and Verdun is Progressing.

OFFICIAL REPORTS.

LONDON, Sept. 27. — (Official.) — British troops attacked on a wide front south of the Sensee river this morning. First reports indicate that satisfactory progress is being made.

The Sensee river is a small stream flowing to the north-east and paralleling on the south the Scarpe river, which flows past Arras and passes through the important city of Douai, one of the principal German bases on the Artois front in France. It is probable that the British attack is made for the purpose of driving a wedge between Douai and Cambria, about 15 miles to the south.

Lines Advanced.

The British lines were advanced slightly north of the Sensee in a local operation during the night and there were successful local attacks in Flanders. The text of the Field Marshal's report follows:

"At 5.20 o'clock this morning our troops attacked over a wide front south of the Sensee river. First reports indicate that satisfactory progress is being made. During the night successful local operations were carried out, in the neighbourhood of Arleux, northwest of La Bassee and south-west of Fleurbaix. Our line was advanced in these localities and prisoners captured.

Are Pushing On.

The Franco-American attack between Rheims and Verdun is progressing satisfactorily, according to despatches received here to-day.

The armies of Generals Gouraud, Berthelot and Pershing attained al their first objectives very quickly and are pushing on.

THE NEW FIGHTING LINE IN LORRAINE.—This map shows the area over which the French and Americans are fighting their way towards Metz. It will be worth preserving by those who daily follow the war news.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Successful development of French offensive begun yesterday in the Champagne, is reported to-day by the War Office. Over the entire field of attack by the French between the River Suippe and the Argonne Forest, formidable German positions of a depth of more than three miles were brilliantly carried. The statement reads:

Attack by French troops in the Champagne region developed yesterday with success. From Suippe to Argonne the first German positions, a formidable network of trenches and wire entanglements of a depth of more than five kilometres, which the enemy had not ceased to strengthen since 1915, were brilliantly carried by French troops.

The French have captured Butte nme and the villages of Tahure, Ripont, Rouvroy, Cernay, En Dormois and Servon Melzicourt. More than seven thousand prisoners were taken. French forces resumed the brilliant action this morning, and despite unfavourable weather conditions, satisfactory progress is being made.

TRICK FAILED.

(United Press.)
(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, Sept. 27.—Although the Germans in the Champagne region tried to adopt the trick utilized by General Gouraud in July—withdrawing secretly from first lines just before the attack—all indications point to the fact that the Americans, on their front, caught the enemy by surprise yesterday.

The French likewise, scented the German move and showered their lines and back areas with shells.

Montfaucon, the "little Gibraltar" of the Meusienne Valley, was the scene of heavy fighting before the Americans outflanked the height which dominates the village and commands the entire countryside in that neighbourhood.

DEATH.

Bombs Fell Near Kaiser

German Emperor Ran Into Air Raid While on Visit to Rhine Towns.

Special to The Examiner:

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—Emperor William, Field Marshal Duke Albrecht of Wurttenburg, and Prince Stephan of Schaumburg Haslippe were in Mannheim last week when British airmen raided the city. The Royal party were staying in the Royal palace, and the Emperor and his staff promptly took refuge in a cellar, remaining there twenty minutes. The palace was not hit, but bombs fell in the vicinity.

The German ruler was making a visit to towns along the Rhine to allay fears of their inhabitants following raids of Allied aircraft.

An attack was made on Mannheim at the time of the Royal visit. Heavy bombs landed near the cellar where Wilhelm was hiding.

PACIFISTS AIDED RAILWAY STRIKE

Startling Facts May be Revealed by Investigation.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Investigation of the recent railway strike in Wales is delayed here to-day. It may bring out some startling facts that will link the activities of pacifists and conscientious objectors.

Some railway men claim to have evidence that the pacifists plotted secretly for months to bring about the strike.

CHEQUES FOR PRIZES WON AT EXHIBITION.

Cheques for the prizes won at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are now ready, and Mr. F. J. Hall, secretary, will be at R. Denne's store on Saturday afternoon and evening for the purpose of paying them.

War Minister Has Resigned

General von Stein Jumps Off While the Going is Good.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Lieut.-General Von Stein, Prussian War Minister, is reported to have resigned, according to advices to the papers from Copenhagen. General Von Stein became Prussian War Minister, succeeding Lieut.-Gen. Wild Von Hohenbern, who was placed in command of an army corps on the west front. General Von Stein had been in command of the 14th Reserve Army Corps, after having served as Quartermaster-General. Before his appointment as War Minister he was in command of troops on the Somme front in France. General Von Stein tendered his resignation as Prussian Minister of War on July 13, 1917, but it was not accepted.

The Last Call to the Men of Peterborough

Two More Days to Secure a Regent Suit or Overcoat for $17.50.

Attention is drawn to the advertisement of the Regent Tailors on page 8 of this issue which is a last call to the men of Peterborough and district advising them of the fact that to-morrow and Monday are the last two days on which they can secure a suit or overcoat for $17.50 at the Regent Tailors 186½ Charlotte street.

On October first they are compelled to raise their prices and urge the men of the City to buy clothes not later than Monday.

FRANK JENNE SAYS:

As things are to-day how is a man to know what to buy—how much or how little to pay for his clothing? We do not wish to pay too little to get value for what we pay; nor too much for service we expect. To-morrow you can secure blue serge suits at my shop, tailored by Semi-Ready Limited, which will give you the benefit in quality and price, at $22.50 and $25.00.

NEW RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT

All Regional and Local Governments Have Placed Themselves Under the Authority of Directorate.

THE SLOGAN

(By Joseph Shaplen).

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—A new All Russian Government, with authority to speak and wait for the whole of Russia, and whose chief aim is the renewal of war against Germany, has been formed.

The official announcement of this was made by the Russian Embassy here through the publication of a cable received from the new Government, whose temporary seat will be at Uffa.

The new Government was formed, following a great political conference held at Uffa, and attended by representatives of all the political parties except the Bolsheviki and the Left Wing of the Political Revolutionists. A directorate of five men, representing all the revolutionary and democratic elements from the Social Revolutionists to the Left Wing of the Cadet has been named in the new provisional All Russian Government, and the Constituency Assembly have been called to meet on January 1, 1919.

The Directorate.

The directorate consists of the following: M. Avskentieff, Social Revolutionist head of the new Government; M. Vologodsky, Populist Socialist; M. Thaikovsky, Social Revolutionist; M. Astroff, Cadet; General Boldireff, Military Chief. General Boldireff represents no political faction. He will be charged simply with the work of the re-organization of Russia's military resources preparatory to active operations against the Central Empires. In his hands will be the task of training and organizing the new army of 250,000 men already formed in Siberia, with thirty thousand veteran Russian officers commanding them.

The Slogan.

The slogan of the new Government is, "All power to the Constituent Assembly." The directorate will be the represenative of the Constituent Assembly until it meets on the date specified. An attendance of at least seven hundred, more than two-thirds, is expected. The meeting, which will probably be held in Moscow, will be opened up on the general situation in Russia. All regional and local Governments formed in various regions of Russia during the past few months have placed themselves under the authority of the directorate and the Constituent Assembly.

The formation of the new All Russian Government is the result of a remarkable process of reorganization long under way in Russia.

M. Advskentieff is one of the foremost leaders of the Russian Social Revolutionary party. Next to Victor Tchernoff, President of the Constituent Assembly and the great teacher of the Social Revolutionists, he is the leading figure in the party. I met M. Avskentieff last January in the fortress of St. Peter and Paul, where he was at that time a prisoner of the Bolsheviki. M. Avskentieff evinced a remarkable optimism, despite the fact that the Bolsheviki were at the time at the zenith of their power. He predicted the complete failure of the Bolsheviki and the inevitable misfortunes that would follow. "But," he said, "Russia will withstand the disgrace of Bolshevikism. The Revolutionary democracy will regain control and lead Russia forward to a better future."

M. Vologodsky is the head of the Samara Upper Volga Regional Government. He is a populist Socialist, and is regarded as one of the most able and energetic men in Russian political life. He is a lawyer by profession.

M. Tchaikovsky is the world-famous veteran of the Russian Revolutionary movement. He has been an exile to Siberia for many years.

ADVANCE IN MACEDONIA

Allied Advance in Macedonia Has Reached a Total Depth of Seventy-five Miles.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The Allied advance in Macedonia has reached a total depth of seventy-five miles, it was announced in the Serbian War Office statement received here today. "Yesterday our cavalry entered Kochane and is pursuing the enemy," the communique said.

12.50 p.m.—Allied cavalry is believed to have reached the plain just south of Uskub, according to unofficial despatches received here today. The Serbian infantry, the despatches say, is probably from ten to sixteen miles from Uskub.

In a successful continuance of the drive northward, the Serbians have entered Ishetib and captured other important points, says the Serbian official statement of Thursday. A great number of additional Bulgarian and Germans have been captured by the Serbians, who also have taken enormous quantities of war materials. The Serbians now are west of the Ishtib-Veles Road, and have captured the height of Bogoslovots south of the road. North of Demirkapu, in the direction of the Bulgarian border, the Serbs have captured the ridge of Belikamen.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Austria is rushing reinforcements to the hard-pressed Bulgars, according to diplomacy advices received here today.

SAYS SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN HAS NOT FAILED

Special to the Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 27.—Declaring that the German submarine campaign has not failed, Captain Von Mantey, of the German Admiralty, speaking in Westphalia, explained that the reason for America's success in landing so many troops in France is that she has seized neutral shipping. "We will get square with the Americans in Flanders," he is quoted as having said.

THE NEW ALBERTAN

Chief Designer Sends Out His Best Models.

"In the olden days," said Mr. Frank L. Jenne, it was the custom of a clothing designer to hide his models from the public to hide his models to the public with the pride and the temperament of the portrait painter.

In the Semi-ready shops it has been desired to make the new models as open face as their price in the pocket. New designs, intended for the season following, will be shown as soon as the patterns are graded and the opinion of the public will be sought at once through the display windows.

This week the new Model Suit "Albertan" is shown. Only one single garment of this new style, with its slash pockets, its waist seams and its six-pleat back, in a unique and chaste cloth pattern is sent to each Semi-ready Store in Canada.

This single garment is now shown by Frank Jenne in his shop window for the verdict of the well-dressed men. Other models are expected each week.

When this model was shown early in the year at the New York Fashion show it became so popular that all the makers in the United States made sketches of it.

"As well take their measure now and give it to the public," is the way the Semi-ready designers intend to circumvent the espionage of their opposition.

"We want Semi-ready Clothes to be as fine and as true as a good open-faced, full-jewelled watch," is the way one of the artists expressed it.

BULGARIA HAS MADE AN OFFER OF AN ARMISTICE

Offer Was Made by Premier Malinoff of Bulgaria Without Support of Cabinet or the King, Say Despatches.

CAUSED A SENSATION

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Premier Malinoff, of Bulgaria, has made an offer of an armistice to the Allies, according to Berlin messages. The message states the Premier's offer was made without the support of other ministers of the cabinet or of King Ferdinand.

A Berlin message says that Malinoff's offer has created great dissatisfaction in Bulgaria and that military measures have been taken to support the Bulgarian front. According to statements from Sofia by way of Jassy it is added that a counter movement against the action of the Premier has already been set on foot. (This would seems to indicate that a revolution is in progress in Bulgaria.)

Caused a Sensation.

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—The defeat of the Bulgarian forces in Macedonia has caused a great sensation in Sofia. Despatches received here to-day state that the capital of Bulgaria is ready for a revolution.

(United Press.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.— Bulgarian Premier Malinoff's offer of an armistice to the Allies may mean that Malinoff may be attemping to lull the Allies into stopping their offensive until Bulgaria can re-organize her forces with German assistance. This is, of course, a possibility, but it is more likely that he sees the doom of German ambitions and is attempting to save his country as Venizelos tried earlier in the war to align Greece with the Allies. The German report that the Czar of Bulgaria and members of the Cabinet oppose Malinoff suggests a striking similarity to the situation at Athens three years ago when Premier Venizelos defied Constantine's demand that Greece wage war against Germany and protect Serbia. Venizelos fell from power, but that was because of the success of German troops in overrunning Serbia. Now that the Allies are progressing against the Turks, Malinoff may be able to bring about a coup de etat in Bulgaria and sign a separate peace with the Entente.

Certainly Malinoff's efforts show there is a large loss of material in the Bulgarian army. A continuing of the Allies' movement to Uskub will increase this condition as nothing else could. It is therefore reasonable to believe that if Malinoff is meeting with serious opposition on the part of Czar Ferdinand, the best thing for the Allies to do would be to redouble their military efforts. A separate peace signed by Bulgaria would have

The G.W.V.A. Will Support Campaign

Toronto, Ont.,
Sept. 18th, 1918.

J. L. Murray, Esq.,
State Deputy for Province of Ont., Knights of Columbus, 95 Murray Ave., Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir,—We who have shared in the mud, blood and misery of trench warfare know the need of such aid to courage and endurance as the Knights of Columbus huts afford to the soldiers over there. We have no hesitation in urging Canadians to support that work.

Our comrades are on the eve of the fifth winter Canadians have passed in Flanders. They need all the sustaining comforts we can give them to maintain victory—making morale during the coming months.

The folk who give the last cent of their last dollar for the welfare of the boys over there have given less than the man who gives his life.

The Great War Veterans' Association in Ontario will support and encourage the money-raising campaign of the Knights of Columbus.

Yours truly,
(Signed) W. E. TURLEY,
Secretary G.W.V.A. Ontario.

British in New Smash

Seven Mile Strip of the Hindenburg Line Has Been Captured.

(United Press Service.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 27.—The British attacking at dawn in the direction of Cambrai smashed toward a thirteen-mile front penetrating more than three miles at some points. A strip of the Hindenburg line seven miles wide, including five miles of the Canal Du Nord, was crossed. Hundreds of prisoners have been taken.

German Interned Steamers Seized

Special to the Examiner:

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept 27. — Chilean Government forces to-day seized four, and probably five, interned German merchant steamers. It was announced that this step was taken as a "preventative measure." None of the vessels had been damaged by the crews.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27TH, 1918.

A NEW WEEKLY.

The Examiner is delighted to have an opportunity of welcoming a new arrival in the field of weekly publications in "Turner's Weekly," a copy of the first issue of which has reached this office. The new journal is welcomed not only for the merit of its contents, but because of the personality of its editor, Mr. Harris Turner, who sacrificed his sight while serving as a Canadian soldier in France. In a foreword "Turner's" says: "We feel that there is not in Western Canada Weekly." It can be truthfully said that there is not in Western Canada at the present time an independent weekly paper which appeals to the general public simply on its merits as an interesting and entertaining literary enterprise. That there is a field for such a periodical, no one can doubt, and it is that field which we intend to occupy."

The first issue shows that Mr. Turner's journal has made a successful start towards the ideals which the foreword sets forth. It contains some crisply written editorials, several most interesting contributed articles, including one on the Victory Loan by Hon. C. A. Dunning, and a couple of clever stories, one a satire upon the freedom allowed aliens in the west.

The Examiner wishes its new western contemporary every success.

TWO EXAMPLES OF THRIFT.

At this time when the Government and press of Canada are urging upon the people the necessity of exercising thrift to the greatest possible extent, it may be pointed out that a local organization, the Patriotic League of Ashburnham has been inculcating the principle of saving among Peterborough citizens in two ways, both of which have resulted in the securing of many comforts for the boys from this city who are serving overseas. Early in the war the League adopted the cent a day plan by which a large number of people pledged themselves to put aside one cent every day for the benefit of the Peterborough soldiers. Saving a "copper" a day does not seem to be piling up a financial reserve very quickly, but the accumulative effect of such a system when spread over a large section of the community is shown by the fact that several thousands of dollars with which comforts have been purchased and sent overseas, have been raised by the League in this manner.

The collection of waste paper is another example of thrift for which the Ashburnham organization is responsible. They inaugurated this method of securing funds, with the result that from what before the war was considered as waste material, with little or financial potentiality, large sums of money have been secured. The Patriotic League was first in the field with this plan of securing funds for war work and the project has been splendidly supported by the citizens. This week the League succeeded in collecting over a car and one quarter of paper.

The Patriotic League of Ashburnham has done splendid work on behalf of Peterborough's soldiers, and is to be congratulated upon the original methods used, which are quite in line with the thrift campaign that is being made at the present time.

KEEP OUT THE MENNONITES.

People in the eastern part of Canada are probably not aware of the widespread indignation in the western provinces over the influx from the United States of the Mennonites. These people are flocking into Canada because, as the Brandon Sun forcibly expresses it, Canada allows conscientious objectors to retain citizenship, while allowing them to repudiate an important part of their obligation—military service. The west is greatly stirred up over the general question of aliens, and more especially over the Mennonite problem, and are calling upon the government to bar these undesirables from coming into Canada.

The feeling is shown by the public meeting called by the G.W.V.A. of Moose Jaw, at which the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

1. Resolved that this assembly of citizens petition the Dominion Government to prohibit further immigration into Canada of such classes of people as refuse to accept the full responsibilities of citizenship.

And be it further resolved that members of such classes migrating to Canada subsequent to the Military Service Act, 1917, be not granted exemption from Military Service, but be made to conform to said Act in the full force thereof.

2. Resolved that the clause in the Military Service Act of 1917, as it applies to exemptions from combatant military service, granted under the treaties to the original Mennonites who came to Canada by way of Hamburg, subsequent to the Order-in-Council of August 13th, 1913, and to the original Doukhobors under Order-in-Council of Dec. 6th, 1898, be maintained in its full force and tenure, but that there be no equivocation from those treaties and that the descendants of these people who are eligible for military service be made to so conform.

There can be little fault found with these resolutions which, in effect ask that Canada should not be made the dumping ground for slackers from the United States.

LIGHTING THE FURNACES.

The report has appeared that the Fuel Controller of Massachusetts has ordered the people of the State not to light their furnaces before the first of December. This is an exceedingly drastic order, and probably there are conditions concerning it which this bare report does not mention but which removes some of its apparent sternness. There must be cases in which the heat of a furnace is essential before that date, as in sickness and for old people. It may be, of course, that the Fuel Controller considers that the use of electric, gas, or oil heaters would provide the necessary heat.

The matter, however, draws attention to the seriousness with which this Fuel Controller regards the coal situation, and is a pretty broad hint to Canadians to conserve their supplies of coal to the fullest possible extent. It is a question whether as a rule Canadians do not keep their houses too hot during the winter. We have heard of people not being comfortable with a temperature less than 70, and of others wanting one even very much higher. Taken as an average the probability is that houses are kept at 68, and in one State the Fuel Controller has ordered only enough coal should be supplied to enable people to keep that temperature up during the winter. We are disposed to think that this is too high, though we do not wish to pose as authorities on the subject. The temperature which from a study of the matter we would suggest as being the right one for an average household in which there are neither old people or sickness, is 65. If this were accepted generally there would be a saving of coal on a large scale.

While on this subject it would be well to mention that the use of "humidifiers" would be found to help in reducing coal consumption. In plain language this means the use of tins of waters on the radiators. There is a very good form of humidifier which can be fastened on to the top of the radiators which has wicks attached to it. The wicks aid considerably in the evaporation of the water. Moisture in the air will increase its warmth. No doubt it has been noticed that people have written to the papers saying how much increased warmth and comfort can be had by simply having a kettle of boiling water on the stove and allowing the steam to moisten the air. This is the principle of the humidifier, and it is a good and a coal-saving one, while it is certainly an aid to health.—Kingston Standard.

WHAT JUSTICE DEMANDS

(London Free Press.)

As a matter purely of revenge, however loudly our anger may call for the ruining upon an equal scale of German cities and towns, the allies would not retaliate upon Germany. There is however, another important consideration, and one that is certain to bring retribution to the Hun. It is comprised in the necessity of punishing the foe; of teaching him the lesson that may be learned only through the infliction of such acts of justice as will burn into his memory.

TOMMY'S TEMPER

(Hamilton Herald)

This characteristic incident is related by a war correspondent: Among the German prisoners captured by a British battalion in a recent engagement were three boys of school age. A loaf of bread was given to each of them and they were sent back to the German lines with a note saying that Englishmen were out to fight men, not schoolboys.

A CHANGE IN THE DRAFT REGULATIONS

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.— Hopes are expressed in official circles here that shortly a series of agreements will be ratified whereby citizens of all the Allied countries resident in Canada may be brought under the influence of the Military Service Act. Canada at first was only able to draft British subjects and now, under the convention with the United States, is in a position to draft American subjects resident in the Dominion who, after tomorrow, have not returned to their own country, there to be subject to their own draft laws.

In the case of certain other allied nations the matter is different. There is no treaty with France to provide for reciprocal drafting, though so far as that country is concerned almost every reservist got away early in the game to his own country. In the case of Italy and Greece, however, both of which countries came into the war much later, difficulties of transportation prevented the taking of the citizens of these countries resident in Canada to their own shores. So that the anomaly has resulted where able bodied men of these countries fighting on the side of the Allies have been immune from serving in any country.

The impression now prevails that treaties will shortly be rectified, the effect of which will be to bring such residents of Canada under the draft laws of the Dominion.

Food Board Flashes

"Extravagance costs blood," the blood of heroes," says Lloyd George.

The sinews of war are gathered largely from thrift. Our standard food resources are munitions of the first order. We must save out of the present products of labour. The British people had to learn, as we must learn, that money, food, and supplies must be saved by all.

Saving must become a permanent habit. War is a battle of resources. Food conservation must be continued. Cables from the British Ministry of Food continue to emphasize the necessity for greater conservation.

FUEL COMMISSION WILL MEET TO-NIGHT

The first meeting of the City's Fuel Commission will be held to-night at the City Hall. It is likely that there will be a conference with the Mayor and the Fuel Committee. In Mr. Wearing, it is understood, that the Commission will have the benefit of his experience as a coal dealer and miner. His father was a miner in England, and coming to Canada Mr. Wearing himself spent some time in the mines in Cape Breton, and coming back to earth engaged in the selling of coal. Mr. Wearing recalled this former work in a humourous way, and with the conviction that it would scarcely be availing in obtaining coal from nowhere to supply the demands of Peterborough citizens who are unprovided for the winter.

NO AUTUMN SESSION OF OTTAWA HOUSE.

Parliament not Likely to be Convened before January 15 Next.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—From all appearances Parliament will not be summoned before January 15th next. The government has not yet disclosed the date upon which the legislators should be convened, and its members seem inclined to the view that an Autumn session is unnecessary. So far there does not appear to be a prospect of a heavy Legislative programme, and the feeling is that it should be possible to call Parliament together in January and to dispose of the business to be transacted before the late Spring.

How a Young Peterboro Soldier Met His Death

Pte. T. H. Goodwin Was Hit by a Machine Gun Bullet.

The following letter was received this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin, 159 Hart avenue:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin:

As officer in charge of No. 5 Platoon, 2nd Canadian Battalion, I regret to inform you of the death in action of your son, Pte. Thomas H. Goodwin. On the 2nd of September this Battalion was taking part in a wonderfully successful advance and in that action your son was mortally wounded by a machine gun bullet in the chest.

He died within a few minutes, without pain, and was buried the same evening at sunset by the men of his platoon.

Later his body will be re-interred in one of the Canadian cemeteries, and you will probably be informed of the exact location of the cemetery.

Any personal effects are being forwarded by one of his comrades.

I should like to inform you of the loss which the Platoon and Battalion have sustained by the death of your young son. He was the finest type of soldier—sincere in his duty, cheery under all circumstances, and always zealous in the performance of any task required of him.

I can say no more than that he was ready to make any sacrifice and died as a true soldier.

On behalf of No. 5 Platoon, may I convey to you and all his relatives and friends, our deep sympathy and assure you of our appreciation of the sacrifice made by your son.

I am, yours faithfully,

GEO. HUNTER,
Officer-in-charge.

Mr. W. Noyes Finds New Mine on Farm

Mr. William Noyes has returned to his home at Madoc, after spending nearly two weeks with her brother, Mr. Chas. Noyes, Ashburnham. Mr. Noyes owns a six hundred-acre farm near Madoc, on which is located valuable mines, the product of which has three special uses in the making of steel for war purposes. Another vein was recently discovered by Mr. Noyes, who believes that will be as valuable as the one now in operation.

Corp. J. Playford is Mentioned for Bravery

The following letter has been received by his wife from Corporal J. Playford:

My dear Wife and Little Ones,—Just a few lines to let you know that I am home on leave at last. I arrived in England on the 7th of September, and I have also been promoted to full Corporal, and expect to be made Sergeant again soon. I have also been recommended for bravery on the field. I can tell you, it is good to be in England again after the heavy fighting we have had this last month. You will no doubt have heard of the splendid record of the Canadian troops in this last drive. I am glad now I was with them. I have two German watches, so I am going to send the best one home to you. Write and let me know if you get it, also the German bank note I sent two weeks back. You better write to the Battalion as I shall be back before you get this, as I have only fourteen days' leave. I am going to have a good time while I am here, as you say dear enjoy myself, so I will now. I must bring this to a close now, with love to you and the kiddies.

MAKING GOOD RECOVERY.

Private Ross Nicholls Was Wounded on September 2nd.

Mrs. Harry Robinson, 286 Sherbrooke Street, has received the following card from her brother, Pte. D. R. Nicholls, who was wounded in France on September 2nd, 1918:

Dear Sister.—Just a card to say I am wounded, but am getting along fine. I was wounded in the right arm, but don't worry about me, for I am alright. I was wounded on the 2nd of September.—From your loving brother,

Ross.

Waists, Dresses and Coats at Special Prices for Saturday Will Create Unusual Activity

We have taken a certain number of garments, put a line through their old prices, marked the new scale of costs, and for To-morrow you are offered THESE UNUSUAL VALUES. It is simply a question of saving several dollars by making selection a few days ahead.

Ending September with a Very Special Selling of Dresses at $20.00

It is easy enough to supply the reason. We are merely setting aside a certain group of our regular stocks and marking these at a saving of several dollars is designed to bring extra lively activity in this department.

The dresses involved are of the season's favored materials, including serge, satin, satin and georgette, satin and serge—trimmings are in an unusually wide range. Embroideries, cording, beads, buttons as well as effective arrangements of two materials.

We might tell you what the former prices were but we do not quote comparative prices. Our policy is for you to read our advertisements, know that when we say that the value is VERY SPECIAL and WORTH YOUR WHILE.

This is in force only until Saturday.

A Collection of Poplin Dresses at $14.40

Poplin is probably the most desirable Fall fabric. Here are styles that embrace all of Fashion's newest features. Models show satin and sash trimmings. Tunics and panels hold first place among the new ideas. So wide a variety that you will probably want to try on several.

Lovely Crepe de Chine Blouses at $5.98

Th crepe de chine is of a very soft texture, but the manner in which the styles here are brought about is the most interesting of this group. Some of the new ideas have round neck and satin trimming, which is very novel. Cuffs are interesting. Colors are: Gun-metal, maize, flesh,

Important---Extra Special Coat Values $39.50

Sometimes it is difficult for you to tell when a value is SPECIAL because you know what you paid quite a number of months ago and it is hard to realize that prices have advanced to such an extent. However, a comparison of this value with any other coat selling at the same price will convince you how unusual this value really is.

The styles are such as you will find only in the highest priced garments. The same thing applies to the trimmings which are novel and beautiful. Fabrics are the favored Velour, Whitney and Plush materials and in many cases the fur collar is of an expensive quality. As a matter of fact, every feature of this collection is unusual.

Smart New Coats of Silver tone and Velour at $19.50

Two favorite materials for Fall. This model has a deep self collar which fits snugly over the chin and buttons in front with a large button. The arrangement is unusually effective. A belt produces a slight fullness above the waist—the coat falls fracefully below. Lined throughout. Some of these coats are trimmed with plush and other furette collars.

FASHION As Applied to the Millinery at This Store, $4.00 to $17.50

Fashion (which assumes so great a variety of forms and which succeeds or fails wholly upon the fancies of the individual) is ever dominantly superior at this store.

It is our ability to understand the caprices of our patrons, as well as the character of millinery that will become them to the greatest degree, that accounts for the recognition given to our new displays of Fall millinery.

OUR FASHIONS ARE ALWAYS NEW, CORRECT, BEAUTIFUL

Velvet Tam, $2.25. Fetching Smart

For the miss of 16 and 20. Several new charming styles. Trimmings are buckles, tassels, beads and ribbons. Several colors and black.

The Situation as Regards Hose and Underwear Is Critical

Prices have over doubled in the last couple seasons and while we have tried to lay aside enough to hold them down to old-time prices, lines are running rapidly out and we are sorry to say shortly it will be quite impossible to get real soft wool vests and stockings we formerly were accustomed to. Here are a few values worth considering to-morrow sure.

Men's Real Wool Cashmere Sox, 75c
$1.25 Child's White Cashmere Vests, 75c.

Three Brothers Killed in Action

Pte. George Rowe is the Third Brother to Make the Supreme Sacrifice.

Lakefield, Sept 27. — Pte. George Rowe is reported killed in action, and Pte. Albert Rowe is reported as having died of wounds.

This makes three brothers who have made the supreme sacrifice—the other brother, William, was killed in action about two years ago.

These were sons of Mr. John J. Rowe, who lived about two miles out in Douro on the Young's Point Rd.

Pte. George Rowe and his brother, William, belonged to C Co., of the 93rd Battalion, and Pte. Albert Rowe enlisted in the 247th. The latter leaves a wife and several small children. Mrs. F. Edwards and Mrs. E. Tighe are sisters of the deceased.

A MISSIONARY MEETING IN LAKEFIELD

Items of Interest From the Northern Village.

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 27.—The missionary meeting held in the Baptist church on Thursday evening was addressed by Miss Priest, a returned missionary from India. It was well attended and was very interesting. Mrs. S. Hunter occupied the chair and Misses Galvin and Quinn and Rev. B. Davies contributed excellent musical numbers.

Lovers of missionary evenings had two great treats this week in Miss Payne's lecture on Japan on Monday evening and Miss Priest's lecture on India on Thursday evening. On both occasions the numerous visitors were made very welcome.

SOLDIER'S NEWS CLUB

The Soldier's News Club held their opening meeting in the Town Hall on Thursday evening at 7.15. Plans for the year's work were discussed and several letters of thanks for gifts received, were read from the Lakefield soldiers overseas.

The missionary meeting held in the Methodist church on Monday evening was a very successful affair. Miss Ada Payne gave a most interesting and illuminating address on her work in Japan and conditions there. Additional interest was given by Miss Payne appearing in Japanese costume.

The committee provided suitable and excellent music which helped to make the evening the success it undoubtedly was.

TRAIN CHANGES

The new train service which takes effect on the Grand Trunk on Monday Sept. 29th will arrive and depart as follows. Arrive at Lakefield 7:25 a.m. and 12:40 p.m. Leaving at 7:40 a.m. and 1:20 p.m. There will be no evening train.

Asquith Wants Clean-Cut Peace

(Special to Examiner)

MANCHESTER, Sept. 27.—Herbert Asquith, former Premier and leader of the Opposition, today endorsed the Labour Federations resolution subordinating everything to the effective prosecution of the war. He reiterated the necessity of "Clean Cut Peace" which will not offend the conscience of our enemies or the rest of the world.

BEAN CROP SUFFERS FROM WET WEATHER

Gardeners who have been depending upon their crops to provide a valuable food for winter are beginning to worry about the effects of the continued liquid weather. Instead of drying gradually under the usual September heat, the stocks and pods are almost as green as they were a month ago, and one gardener stated that his crop is showing signs of sprouting. It is not an encouraging prospect, especially for those whose potatoes failed to return the abundant yield that long green tops indicated in July.

CITY HALL EMPLOYEE KILLED IN ACTION

This week's casualty list included the name of Heber C. Nichol of Rosneath, who prior to his enlistment in 1915, was employed in the office of the Peter Utilities Commission. It is just three years ago this month since he responded to the call for service and threw up the position in which he had shown himself an apt and industrious employee, and had won the esteem of the City Hall staff.

ODDFELLOWS HELD A EUCHRE PARTY.

Names of the Prize-winners.

The euchre party held last night in the I.O.O.F. Hall by the Triple Link Club was a decided success, and was attended by about 80 people. Appropriate prizes were given to the winners—first (ladies) Miss Amy Wise, (gentlemen) Mr. George Bounter, while Miss F. Black and Mr. Fred. Roberts carried off the booby prizes of a box of chocolates each.

NOT BEING CALLED.

MEN OF 20 YEARS OF AGE STILL IN 19-YEAR-OLD CLASS

The Government, it is announced has reached no decision as yet in regard to the calling out of men for military service who have reached twenty years since the first class was summoned. Those men, although twenty years of age, are now included in the nineteen-year-old class. Statistics have been compiled of the number of such men available.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Harvest Thanksgiving Service Held in St. Luke's Church

Rev. C. R. de Pencier, of Oshawa, Delivered a Practical Sermon on Cause and Result.

Rev. C. R. de Pencier of Oshawa preached on the subject "Cause and Result" at the Harvest Thanksgiving service last evening, held at St. Luke's church. His subject was based on the second verse of the 128th Psalm.

"For thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands, happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee."

It was essentially a practical message that fits into every day life. When God said, "Whatsoever you ask in my name you shall have," it was cause and result. "You shall have is the result.

Are you a laborer? Am I? There are three days in the year that I commemorate and one is Labour Day because of the blessing of universal labour. Many people think that the man who carries a dinner bucket is a labourer and that the man who works in an office is not. But where do they get it? The Lord says "Six days shalt thou labour and on the seventh shalt thou rest."

Nowadays if a man does not work he will be arrested by the police. What has filled our penitentiaries and prisons? It is the vacant mind and the idle hand no the labourer. There is no rest without labour. The Son of God laboured. He went ceaselessly from place to place doing good, healing the sick and curing the blind. Everything labours. All nature labours. The tree brings forth fruit. If not it is dead. The coal while in the field stored up energy. Man has by his superior intelligence made nature work for him. We also have it in the relation of the soul of man to his God.

"Come unto me and I will give you rest."

The Evangelistic Party Will Arrive in Peterboro To-night

First Big Practice of the Union Choirs Will be Held This Evening —All Ready for the Opening Gun.

SPECIAL FEATURES

With the arrival in the city to-night of Rev. Mr. Honeywell D. D. the party, which will have charge of the Evangelistic campaign which is to open in Peterboro next Sunday night, will be complete. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Dixon reached the city at noon yesterday from Chicago and Mrs. Russel arrived at noon to-day. As they are to be in the city for a month their desire was, if possible, not to be stationed in a hotel so arrangements have been made for their joint accommodation in a comfortable private residence on Gilmour street.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, athough comparatively young in years have had a wide experience in the conduct of the musical and chorus work under several well known evangelists in fourteen states as well as in Canada. Mr. Dixon has had four years training in voice under a number of noted instructors. He is a high school graduate and also a graduate of the Moody Bible institute, Chicago, where he spend five years. He is a member of the Interdenominational Association of Evangelists and on occasion has occupied church pulpits Mrs. Dixon has had special success in women's and children's work. As a high school graduate with four years experience as a public school teacher and having had piano instruction under strong teachers she is well equipped for the conduct of her part of the services. She, also, has had training in the Moody Bible Institute.

SPECIAL FEATURES

Mr. Dixon states that he is planning to have a number of special features in connection with the services. These will be introduced from time to time as the campaign progresses. In some of the campaigns he has conducted, great success has attended the introduction of a large boys and girls "Booster" Chorus. These choruses have proved favorites everywhere. Special evening song services will be introduced later as well as special chorus numbers and possibly a male quartette and glee club.

Speaking of the work of Mr. and Mrs. Dixon in connection with a campaign conducted in Bainbridge, N.Y. one of the local papers made this comment, "Mr. Dixon, besides directing the work along the musical line and bringing the gospel in solos to the hearts of the people in Union Campaign, has cared for all the details that go to making the work a success. Mrs. Dixon has made many friends in her work. Many of the parents have spoken in public audiences, as well as elsewhere, of how much they appreciated her work with the boys and girls. They have taught them verses of scripture and lessons that will make in the moulding of the future lives of men and women. Her Bible classes have been very popular and her addresses to women and young women have been used of the Lord in many ways."

FIRST BIG PRACTICE

The first big practice of the Union Chorus from the different churches will be held this evening in the Brock Street Rink. The rink was cleaned out last evening, following the work of the carpenters and is now being seated. A fine Heintzman piano has been installed. To-night's practice will start sharp at eight o'clock. The last of the cottage prayer meetings will be held this evening.

Sunday afternoon at half-past four a meeting for prayer will be held in the Reid Street Sunday School Hall to which a special invitation is extended to all the members of the committees who have been working in connection with the arrangements for the campaign. The committee desires that Christians throughout the city and vicinity shall continue in prayer for thecampaign and its success. It is hoped that delegations will attend the meetings from outside points such as Lakefield, Norwood and Havelock.

Enemy Failed to Defend Ground Says Ludendorff

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, Sept. 27.— General Ludendorff in an order dated August 11, declares the defeat at the Avre suffered by the German armies was due to lack of proper organization of a system of defence both in the line and at the rear. The order, which fell into the hands of the French through some captives, says:

"It is absolutely inadmissable that tanks, after penetrating the advanced lines should be permitted to push along the roads or beside them for miles. He declared that the principle that a body of troops, even when surrounded, must defend their ground to the last man and the last cartridge seems to have fallen into oblivion.

FINED $13.10 FOR EXCESSIVE SPEEDING.

Emil Armstrong went for a joy ride last night, but was fined $13.10 in the police court this morning for excessive speeding and reckless driving. Emil had the licensed number camouflaged with mud and the tail light encased in cloth. He did not miss the vigilant eyes of the police, however, and was apprehended after he had returned the car to the garage.

GEORGE STREET PATRIOTIC LEAGUE WILL COLLECT PAPER.

The Patriotic League of the George street Methodist Church is planning to make a collection of paper during the first week in November. Those who are interested in this patriotic endeavour are asked to save their paper and the collectors of the League will call for them.

Family of Five Saves $50 a Week

Munition Workers Who Combat High Cost of Living to Save for "Rainy Day."

All over the country high wages are being earned. Some of the workers are putting by against the inevitable "rainy day." Many are not. In Toronto, where the workers in the munition industry are believed to number nearly 30,000 some exceedingly high wages are being paid.

For example, in some munition factories, tool-makers are getting as much as $1 an hour, with pay at the rate of time and a half for night work and double time on Sundays. Lathe hands get, as a rule, from 50c an hour up, with extra for overtime and Sundays.

Thus some men in munition factories are receiving as high as $60, or $70, or even $80 a week with overtime These are comparatively few. But plenty of them are earning $45, $50, and $55 a week.

Women, too, earn good money in these factories. Most of the inspectors in munition plants are women, and many will earn 35c an hour for an eight and a half hour day, with time and a half for overtime. Women, too, do plenty of other work in munition shops. Plenty of them earn between $20 and $30 a work, though comparatively few get the latter figure.

JOINT EARNINGS HUGE

It is quite common for two, and three, and even four, members of one household to be working on munitions, and to be earning a total pay-roll of an amount that would have been deemed fabulous in the days befor the war. Here is a typical example. It is of a family living in the east end of the city.

Two years ago the weekly income earned by this household was $26. To-day it is over $80. The father and his two daughters are working at munitions, earning respectively $30, $25, and $18 a week, while the boy, aged seventeen, earns $8 a week at another job downtown. The mother looks after the house and repairs the family clothing, making many of the new garments, as she is handy with her needle.

They are exceedingly thrifty people and for the last two years they have saved an average of $50 a week. Their living does not cost them appreciably more than it did in the days when the total family income was $26. They have fought the increased cost of food by economy, and, to a great extent, by the use of substitutes for meat. They have not launched out on any personal pleasures or extravagant fixings for their home.

In the two years that they have been making big money, they have paid off a mortgage of $2,000 on their house, have invested another $1,000, and will be ready to take a big slice of the new issue of war bonds when it comes along.

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

To have raised themselves to comparative affluence in so short a time is a great achievement. It is one in which the mother takes a great pride.

"For the first time in our lives," she said, "we are protected against the future. That is such a relief. You don't know how things will be after the war—some folks think they will be very bad—and it is a great mercy to feel that you have a bit of money back of you. Another thing that spurred me on to save is the high prices on all sides. You can't get anything like proper value for your money in anything. But these times won't last. Later on, when we can get a dollar's worth for a dollar once more, we shall be able to buy more for our money than we would to-day."

Military Cross for Another Local Boy

Captain Frank Sawers, son of Mr. A. Sawers, of Peterborough, and brother of Rev. F. J. Sawers, now overseas, has been awarded the Military Cross. He was wounded in action some time ago. Capt. Sawers is an old P.C.I. boy, and his deeds on the field will be reflected in the honour roll at the Collegiate Institute. He enlisted with the 4th Garry Horse in the first contingent, and has seen long service at the front.

TAKES OVER THE GEORGE ST. ALLEYS

Mr. Will Sharpe, well known to all local bowling fans, has taken over the bowling alleys of Messrs. Yeotes Bros., George street, and will operate them this season, commencing to-morrow. Mr. Sharpe was manager of these alleys last winter, and now has taken them over on his own account. He is planning to organize a big ten pin league for this season and already three teams are ready to spill the wood when the word is given.

OPENING OF CITY FIVE-PIN LEAGUE.

Last night a meeting of the City Five-Pin League took place at the Water Street Alleys. The following are the opening games to be played next week:

Monday—Grocers vs. Shamrocks.

Tuesday—De Laval vs. Canadian General Electric.

Thursday—Maple Leafs vs. Riversides.

Friday—High Rollers vs. Lawn Bowlers.

The remainder of the schedule will appear in a latter issue.

"Invert" Sugar is Actually Sweeter Than Sugar Itself

War Method Has Increased the Sweetness of Sugar—Is in Liquid Form.

NEW YORK,— The chemist has once more come forward with a war time proposition for saving sugar by actually increasing its sweetening power. This information is particularly valuable in view of the further reduction in our sugar rations.

When cane sugar (or sucrose) is subjected to a chemical change called hydrolysis, it is converted into invert sugar, which is a mixture of equal parts of glucose and fructose (fructose is the characteristic sugar of ripe fruits, especially apples and pears). The fructose part of invert sugar is very sweet—sweeter than sucrose, and far sweeter than glucose or corn syrup Weight for weight, it is considered to be about 30 per cent sweeter than the cane sugar.

One hundred pounds of cane sugar make 105.24 pounds of invert sugar which has the same sweetening power as 135 pounds of cane sugar. So it can be readily seen that the conversion of cane sugar into invert sugar is an economy in sweetening. It has no more food value than the sucrose but the use of the latter as a food is almost always a secondary consideration.

The inversion of sugar is a very simple matter and is brought about when it is boiled with an acid. In fact, inversion takes place to a considerable extent in the making of jelly. For many purposes confectioners and manufacturers of jellies and jams boil their sugar with tartaric acid or even cream of tartar in order to invert it. Commercial invert sugar is made by means of acid, but the latter is not detactable in the syrup.

Any housewife can readily follow this recipe for making invert sugar syrup. Take 10 pounds of granulated sugar, 4½ pints of water, and one-fifth ounce of tartaric acid (obtainable at any drug store) and boil slowly in a covered kettle for about 30 to 35 minutes. If boiled longer, the syrup begins to darken in color and develop a taste like corn syrup The result is 14 pounds of syrup from the 10 pounds of sugar and, weight for weight, the two are equivalent in sweetening all sorts of cooking, fruits, cereals, ice cream, etc., although it may not be relished in coffee. It must be borne in mind that this syrup must be substituted for granulated sugar weight for weight and not volume for volume since about three-quarters of a cup of syrup is equal to a cup of sugar.

The one minor objection to invert sugar is that it cannot be obtained in dry form. It is estimated that in spite of the extra manufacturing cost, the same sweetening power can be bought as cheaply in the form of invert sugar as in the form of granulated sugar. The pitcher of syrup may yet replace the sugar bowl on our tables before the war is over.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.—

Sir,—I am amazed that Mr. G. N. Gordon would at the request of Dobbin or anybody else write such trash as he did in his letter to "The Examiner" of Thursday night. He says:

"Mr. Dobbin has instructed me to lay these facts before you and to ask you to withdraw the statements that were made in the "Examiner" that he was in any way responsible for Mrs. McIntyre not receiving consideration in any application she may have made to the Patriotic Committee, as this was beyond Mr. Dobbin's power to deal with the case without the Committee's express authority.

"I wish you would kindly make an explanation of this matter as Mr. Dobbin has asked me to immediately require you to do this.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON."

The following is what appeared in "The Examiner" of the previous day:

"The trouble over this poor little woman's affairs during her husband's absence at the front, has been due to the failure of Mr. F. H. Dobbin to deal with her sympathetically."

It was not a question of "dealing". We all know that he has no power. But he is the Secretary and Mrs. McIntyre in common with many other women has complained to me bitterly of Dobbin's bad manners and brutality. I gave the item to the papers because people want to know about these things and are entitled to know about them. It is the only check on them. I have no doubt that I could make both The Examiner and Messrs. Dobbin and Gordon take back what Mr. Gordon has said, and I am quite sure that I could make "The Examiner" apologise for dragging without my consent my name into it's apology (a proceeding that has a very peculiar look to me) but I do not wish to suppress discussion of these matters. It is the only protection the Soldiers' wives and dependents have. Such an attempt as Messrs. Gordon and Dobbin have made to frighten us all into submission is an outrage, and if these gentlemen want satisfaction they can get it from me at any time. There can be no question but that Dobbin should make room for a man in his position to whom the dependents of soldiers who are far away at the front are not afraid to go. I could say much more but I will content myself with what I have said.

Mrs. McIntyre's reception by Mr. Buller was entirely different she states to that accorded her by Dobbin to whom we could not induce her to go again. Why did not Dobbin bring the matter before the Committee?

Mr. Guise-Bagley was consulted by Mrs. McIntyre and the matter was then put before me.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

Big Programme at The Grand

Pictures and Vaudeville Please Big Crowd.

The superb programme offered at "The Grand" last night drew a capacity audience. Francis X. Bushman and Beverley Bayne in "With Neatness and Despatch" a five reel feature picture proved an interesting drama. The old favorite Charley Chaplin in "Work" kept the large audience convulsed with laughter.

"The Davis" in a clever vaudeville turn consisting of singing and instrumental music on piano and French Horns were recalled several times. That the management of "The Grand" is offering one of the best shows at 10c and 15c prices to be seen anywhere has been evidenced by the quality at the performances since the Grand opened this season.

SWIMMING EXHIBITION AT Y.W.C.A.

With very few weeks' training in the Y.W.C.A. swimming pool, Miss C. Littlefield's band of water nymphs last evening gave a really splendid exhibition of what may be accomplished by expert tuition in a good pool, before a very large audience of interested spectators.

The programme was opened by a short speech by Miss Jones, National City Secretary of the Y.W.C.A., who spoke of the great asset such an institution is to the city as the Y.W.C.A., and of the benefits of the splendid pool.

Miss M. Dickson, president of the Y.W.C.A., also spoke of the work done by the "Y." and commended Miss Littlefield's splendid work as physical directress.

The Races.

The races, which were closely contested and displayed some graceful and strong swimming, were won as follows:

40 foot race—Teddy Connor.
40 foot race, back stroke—Grace Wilson.
Egg and spoon race—Irene Canfield.
Diving—Grace Wilson, Margaret Gear.
Cork race—Dorothy Cook, Margaret Connal.
Candle race—Grace Wilson, Jean Wilgar.

The last race was particularly effective. The lights of the building were put ont and each little girl, clad in her nightie, swam the length of the pool with a lighted candle in her hand.

The Programme.

Interspersing the races a good musical programme was given, and exhibitions creditable to the institution in life saving, proving that any who took part could with ease prevent a drowning accident, if they were about. This exhibition included—

Plunge, Drift (on face), drift (on back.)
First Method, release and rescue.
Second Method, release and rescue.
Fourth Method, rescue (for tired swimmers.)
Resusciation. (Schaefer Method).
Surface dive for 5 ft. object.
Diving.

The evening closed by a clever diving exhibition by Miss Littlefield, which she concluded by a dive from the railing up-stairs.

Presented Bouquet.

As a token of their apreciation of Miss Littlefield's work, the life saving class presented her with a bouquet of roses.

U. S. MENNONITES IN HERE MUST SERVE

Not Exempt From Military Service by Coming to Canada.

Ottawa, Sept 27.—Mennonites who have recently come from the United States to Western Cadana, will not by that change of residence escape military service, it is stated. Recently a number of members of that sect, including 50, who purchased a tract of farm land for $800,000, have migrated into the Prairie Provinces and their arrival has been followed by allegations that they were seeking in Canada sanctuary from the operation of the United States draft law. Hon J. A. Calder, Minister of Colonization and Immigration, during his trip to the West, has been waited upon by a number of delegations urging that the new settlers be not permitted to evade service.

The view of deparmental officials here, which Mr. Calder has voiced, is that the agitation in the West is not necessary. In 1873, when Canada began to seek emigrants, it was agreed that a group of Mennonites, then entering the country, should be exempt from military service. The pledge has been kept with those and also with their descendants, provided they have kept their faith. The recent arrivals from the United States, it is argued, are not entitled to claim exemption under that compact. Under the treaty between United States and Canada they have to decide by September 28, whether they will return to the United States or become subject to the draft law of that country or remain in Canada and submit to the operation of the Military Service Act.

Eggs and Poultry

OTTAWA, Sept. 27—Eastern egg markets strong. Brisk interprovincial trade in small lots. Some Ontario country shippers report having obtained high as fifty fifty-two for fresh extras. Montreal jobbing storage forty nine fifty specials fifty-nine sixty fresh extras or equivalent fifty-three fifty-four.

MISS JEAN HARSTONE ADDRESSED MEETING

Presented a Map of the War Zone.

Miss Jean Harstone addressed the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. last evening on the value and need of such work as they are carrying on in the war. With an easily understood map of the war zone she had visited, the talk was made most interesting and instructive.

WORLD'S BIGGEST LOCK NEARING COMPLETION

Sault Ste Marie, Sept 27.—Work on the new Government lock here which will be the largest in the world and will connect the upper and lower levels of Lakes Superior and Huron, will soon be finished. Only the installation of the 1,100-ton steel gates remain to be done.

The foundations of the lock are built into the solid rock floor of St. Mary's Falls. The work of excavation was begun in 1912. The total cost of the lock will be $3,000,000.

New Russian Government

M. Astroff belongs to the left wing of the Cadet Party who contrary to the Milinkoff group, favored a compromise with the revolutionary democracy. He was until recently Bolsheviki mayor of the city of Moscow.

Gen. Boldirrf is one of the best officers of the Russian army. He is a man of liberal views, a loyal republican and was at one time invited by Trotzky to be Military Advisor to the Bolsheviki Government. He refused to serve under the Government that betrayed Russia to Germany.

The successful formation of a new army of 250,000 men by the Siberian Government will form the nucleus of a new Russian army whose aim will be clearing off Russia of enemy troops.

The first act of the constituent assembly when it meets in January, Russian embassy officials declare, will be to declare war against Germany and repudiate the Brest Litovsk Treaty.

Two Kinds of Dollars

"A dollar thrown away is not as bright as a dollar put away," is an old proverb. Though people no longer hoard money in old stockings, the principle is as true as it ever was. The dollar that is thrown away doesn't stay wholesome and useful. The dollar that is put away keeps its earning power and utility in time of need.

The future of Canada will depend on the dollars that are put away now. The great prospertiy we are enjoying cannot last forever. You may have dollars to throw away now; but if you do you will long some day for dollars to put away. Then the dollars the other fellow has put away will look mighty bright to you. Saving the dollars is common sense; and it is patriotism too, start puting away the bright ones.

SOFT COAL FOR DOMESTIC USE MAY BE BOUGHT

Fuel Administrator for Ontario Planning to Import This Substitute for the People.

Soft coal, suitable for domestic use, will be imported into Ontario if the plans of the fuel officials are successful. This announcement followed the recent conference of dealers with the fuel administration in Toronto on Wednesday. The growing scarcity of anthracite emphasizes the need of substitutes, but it is not altogether certain that even this special soft coal will be available. Mr. Robert Hicks, who represented the local dealers, offered to take 15,000 tons for Peterborough if they are procurable.

In the meantime, consumers are making inroads into their limited supplies of hard coal that were not contemplated a month ago, when a feeble effort was made to popularize a tacit agreement by the people that no hard coal would be used for heating purposes until December 1st. It was then suggested that wood should be used, and sparingly too, in furnaces, but a number of citizens have stated that they have been unable to buy wood. In brief, the first chills have overcome the good intentions of many householders, who have already raided their bins, and December is two months distant. It need not be pointed out that consumers cannot burn their coal and have it too under the present precarious conditions of supply. From the present outlook the provident citizen will save his seventy per cent. of anthracite until winter actually sets in, and severe weather actually demands it. Satisfactory substitutes are obtainable and should be used to dispel the uncomfortable chills of the present unseasonable weather.

a crushing effect upon German ambitions in Mittle Europea. It would at the same time mean the virtual elimination of Turkey from the war. The only direct connection between Germany and Turkey is via Bulgaria. With the Bulgarians refusing a passage through their country to Germany it would be necessary for the Germany to traverse Roumania and take ship on the Black Sea to reach Constantinople. Only meagre war supplies could be handled in this manner and Turkey's inability to help herself would probably result in an early surrender.

The Bulgarian Premier's offer of an armistice was sent to the leader of the Entente troops operating against Bulgaria, according to a Berlin message received here.

A Three O'Clock Despatch.

PARIS, Sept. 27. — The French Commander-in-Chief in Macedonia officially reports to-day that the Bulgarians have asked for a meeting to arrange conditions of an armistice and eventual peace. The French Commander replied refusing to suspend operations, but saying he would receive duly qualified delegates of the Bulgarian Government.

Will Protest.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 27. — Germany intends solemnly to protest against Premier Malinoff's armistice proposal, according to a Berlin despatch received to-day. German newspapers demand the immediate court martial of Malinoff on the grounds of high treason. It is believed his offer was due to Germany's refusal to send reinforcements to Macedonia to meet the present Allied offensive.

Draft Evaders Take to the Woods

Occupy Quarters of Fish and Game Clubs.

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, Q., Sept 27.— That scores of draft evaders, possibly hundreds, have congregated in the woods of the private preserves of several fish and game clubs in the northern part of the province of Quebec, is the information sent in from various quarters to Mr. James R. Innes, secretary of the Provincial Fish and Game Association. From the information received, Mr. Innes believes that probably more than 100 men have built camps and settled in one district, while there may be many more in other parts, as information is constantly coming in from guides that numerous "strangers" have been met in many parts of the woods.

Quite recently a party of sportsmen with several guides had two rifle shots fired at them.

Railways Saving Bituminous Coal

INDUSTRIES ARE DOING EVERYTHING TO CUT DOWN CONSUMPTION

OTTAWA, Sept 26.—A conference and investigation extending over some days has just been concluded, between C. A. Magrath, Fuel Commissioner for Canada and representatives of clay working, cement, phonograph, musical instrument, automobile, enamelware, florists, window glass and brewing industries The conference was also attended by Mr. J. E. Walsh, transportation manager, Canadian Manufacturer's Association, Toronto.

This gathering was called at the instance of the fuel controller, for the purpose of discussing the question of restricting the coal supply of the industries named in the foregoing. Steps in a similar direction have been taken, or are being taken by the United States Fuel Administrator.

MEASURES OF RESTRICTION

It was represented by most of the industries affected that the climatic conditions in Canada were such that the measures of restriction under contemplation in the United States would result in very great hardship, and in certain cases in destruction of property. It was also alleged that severe restriction had already been imposed as a result of several years of war conditions in Canada, and to further restrict some of these industries at this time would be tantamount to destroying them.

At the close of the conference representatives of the various industries submitted written statements dealing with the whole question of fuel consumption and the special conditions surrounding each industry. These representations are now receiving the careful consideration of the Fuel Controller, and after certain further information on the subject has been gathered and compiled he will make his ruling as to the measure of restriction that will be imposed in each case.

FAST PACING.

Single G, the Indiana "wiggler" recently paced the third heat on a half mile track in 2.01, a world's record, and a most remarkable performance. His feat recalls the great 5 heat battle between this horse and Eel Direct, a London pacer at Detroit, 4 years ago. The Eel horse, was having his first trip in fast company, and stacked up against this almost incomparable pacer. They went five heats, all less than 2.10, according to experts, with Single G., a better trained horse, and more experienced horse winning the deciding heat. This beat Eel Direct to a great extent, and he never quite became the horse he should have been.

He gave his best, although it did for him. That's what is needed now. Give the best. It may be only ploughing the fields, but it counts. Get out and plough now. It counts big.

OMAR KHAYYAM ROUNDING TO FORM FOR FALL RACING

Canadian Owned Horse May Upset the Dope.

New York, Sept 7.—It would be unwise for the sportsmen who are prematurely dividing up the spoils of Maryland fall racing to fail to consider Omar Khayyam. That this great three-year-old of last season, the acknowledged champion, in fact until he was beaten at Laurel Park in he $10,000 match by Hourless, will be a factor in fall racing in Maryland there is no longer any doubt Owner Wilfrid Viau says that Omar is fast rounding into conrition, and that he will be ready for the colors towards the end of the month.

TO RACE AT LAUREL

"I do not," said Mr. Viau at the Aqueduct this week, "see any mention of Homar Khayyam in the newspaper stories of late, but Omar is not ready for the discard yet. He is coming to hand nicely. I am pretty sure we will be able to get a race out of him at Havre de Grace, before the horses go over to Laurel Park. At Laurel park, he probably will start in the National Handicap and the Dixie. The Dixie, a handicapat one mile and a quarted for three-year-olds, will suit him right down to the ground and I am confident he will be ready for one of his best efforts before the time for its running arrives.

HAS WORKED HARD

"The other day at Havre de Grace Omar Khayyam galloped three-quarters of a mile in 1.15 2-5, and he has since breezed a fast half. His general condition was never better and he is eating voraciously. Just now he is not ready to go more than three quarteds of a mile or seven furlongs, but it will not take a great deal of work to lick him into shape for a gallon over a distance of ground."

Mr. Viau's announcement that Omar Khayyam is to race again this fall and to race to his best form at, that, will be received with general gratification by patrons of racing. The failure, this year of this brilliant of Marco and Lisma, she is a daughter of Persimmon—to train satisfactorily after early May, has been one of the greatest disappointments of the year. If, indeed, it could not be called a tragedy. It has robbed the great handicaps and cup races of a most formidible factor and the tracks of a box office asset of indubitable value

BLINKERS A MISTAKE

Omar Khayyam wintered at Benning track, and won one race at Pimlico in May. He was beaten, however, by Qudgel and Bondage in the renewal of the $5,000 Pimlico Spring Handicap and later in the Metropolitan at Belmont Park. He wore blinkers again at the Belmont 5morl blinkers again in the Metropolitan for the first time since he was left at the post in the Brooklyn. Blinkers should never have been put on Ivan and Sandy McNaughton will make a mistake if he uses them again.

WORLD SERIES MELON SLICED

War Charities and All First Division Teams Share in Proceeds.

CHANGE IS LIKELY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The National Commission has cut the World's Series melon and distributed the spoils among the teams which finished in the first division in the National and American Leagues. Under this new system four clubs in each circuit share in the money instead of the pennant-winning players taking it all."

The Giants and the Cleveland club, which finished in second place in the major league races, received $6,961.58, after the ten per cent. for war charities had been deducted. As there were about twenty players on each club, they received a little over $300 each.

The Cincinnati and Washington clubs received $4,176.95 for finishing in third place, and the Highlanders and Pittsburg clubs got $2,785.63 for finishing in fourth place.

Although the players on the Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs objected to the other clubs getting any money at all until they received their full share of the spoils, the National Commission did not see its way clear to change the rules all over again at such short notice. Before baseball gets under way again, however, there may be another change. The new conditions were strongly advocated by former President John K. Tener of the National League, and as he is now out of baseball the leagues may revert to the old condition of affairs. The Kilty players, after deducting their ten per cent. for war charities, received about $134 each for their shares of the series. The Giants each got $331.50 for being second.

EXPENSES JUST THE SAME

Despite the act that there won't be any big league baseball next season, the expenses will go on just the same. It is estimated that within the next 12 months organized baseball will have to pay out as much as $700,000, even though nothing will be coming in. Still some of the ball players are trying to make the club owners pay their salaries in full until October 15.

Happiness is always where we find it, but seldom where we go to seek it.

The world has but little use for the man who tells it a disagreeable truth.

Canadian Troops in To-days Attacks on Western Front.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(By Reuter)—Canadian troops pushed forward on the northern flank of the attack this morning. Favourable progress was reported on a front of three miles to a depth of a mile and a half across the Canal Du Nord.

Sixteen thousand German prisoners were taken by the French and Americans in the Champagne drive.

General Byng's army and some of General Hornsby's including Canadians participated in the attack.

By nine o'clock remarkable progress had been made. They had crossed the enormously difficult Canal between Moevres and Havencourt and seven thousand yards of Hindenburg trenches, and deep wire barriers beyond. At 7:55 the British were advancing on the Bourlon spur (four miles directly west of Cambrai), the Germans surrendering in great drovs. Tanks had reached Flesquieres (five miles southwest of Cambrai) at 8:35 a.m. The infantry was pouring in behind them.

Many Deaths as Result of Spanish Influenza

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. HUGILL DOBSON.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Hugill Dobson took place Tuesday from the family residence, Lindsay, to Riverside cemetery.

The funeral services were held and very largely attended. A very impressive discourse was delivered by Rev. Val Tilton, of Cambridge street Methodist church.

The pallbearers comprised brothers and brothers-in-law, Mr. Dan Milligan and Mr. Wm. Neyberry, Midland, Mr. Wm. and Richard White, of Dunsford, Mr. Robert White, Downeyville, and Mr. James Pogue, of Little Britain.

Friends and relatives attended from Peterborough, Midland, Downeyville, Dunsford and Bobcaygeon.

MRS. ANN CUNNINGHAM.

On Thursday, September 26, the call came to the late Mrs. Ann Cunningham, who passed triumphantly and peaceably away in her 79th year at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Harrison, 168 McDonnel street. The deceased was the widow of the late Jno. M. Cunningham who pre-deceased her about 10 years. Mrs. Cunningham was ill for a long time and patiently awaited the end which was not unexpected by a wide circle of inquiring friends. She was a lifelong Methodist, and resided in Peterborough for the past 30 years, in which time she was associated with Charlotte Street and George Street churches. She was highly esteemed and beloved by all who knew her. There are left to mourn the loss of a loving and devoted mother, six sons and two daughters, Jos. F., of Toronto; T. E., of Orillia; R. A., of Hamilton; Bolton, John J. and W. H., all of Peterborough. Mrs. Thomas Harrison, and Mrs. E. Walton, of Peterborough; also two brothers and one sister, Thomas, of Chicago; William, of Oxbow, Assiniboine, and Mrs. E. Ross, city.

ROBERT HUNTER.

The death took place yesterday of Mr. Robert Hunter, of Fowler's Corners, aged 78 years. Mr. Hunter had only been ill for about ten days. Besides his wife, four sons survive — Joseph of Smith Township, Arthur of Emily Township, James of Peterborough, and William at home; also one daughter, Mrs. J. T. Irwin, of Toronto.

The funeral takes place to-morrow to Little Lake Cemetery at 1.30 p.m. Rev. Mr. Cran, of Springville, will officiate.

HENRY FAUX.

The death occurred yesterday of Mr. Henry Faux in Toronto at the age of 65 years, after a lingering illness, following by a stroke. The late Mr. Faux was a highly respected and a life resident of Peterborough. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and five daughters and five sons, namely — Mrs. M. McMahon of Otonabee, Mrs. B. Lee of Otonabee, Mrs. T. Holland, Peterborough; Mrs. L. B. Dowson of Toronto, Miss Lena of Toronto; the sons are Frank, Dick and Will, of Newark, New Jersey, and George and Emmit of Peterborough.

The body of the late Mr. Faux is expected to arrive in Peterboro this evening on the C.P.R. local.

The funeral will be held from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Thos. Holland, 525 Cedar Street, on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 to St. Peter's Cathedral, thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

BIRTH

DORRIS—At St. Joseph's Hospital, Thursday, Sept. 26th, to Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Dorris, Frederick Ave., a daughter.

Peterboro Boys Off to Siberia

Gunner Harlan Skuce, who has been at Petawawa Camp all summer, left yesterday for Ottawa after a short leave spent with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Skuce, Albert street. The artillery camp will be broken up shortly. The men were given a choice of joining the Tank brgade for Europe or of going with the expedition to Siberia. The Peterborough boys are divided between these two forces.

At Ottawa the men are refitted and will leave shorly for the west. They will probably remain in Vancouver for some time before crossing the Pacific. Vincent McCabe and Gordon Deyell are other Peterborough boys with the Siberian expedition.

Gunner Skuce remarked that the books donated by citizens for the boys at Petawawa were geratly appreciated.

WEDDING BELLS

MURPHY—DALTON.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Joseph's church, Douro, when Margaret Loretta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dalton, became the bride of James Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, of Erinsville, Ontario.

The bride's twin sister, Miss Gertrude Dalton, was bridesmaid, while the groom was attended by his cousin, Mr. James Murphy. Lohengrin's wedding march was ably rendered by the organist, Miss Mamie Allen.

The bride was attired in prunette satin, black hat and fur and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. The bridesmaid wore a brown suit with hat to match and ermine neck piece, and carried pink roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond necklace, to the bridesmaid a pearl pin and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

The wedding party returned to the bride's home, where dinner was served to a large number of guests. The presents were both numerous and costly, showing the high esteem in which the bride was held.

The newly wedded couple visited Toronto, Niagara and points west, before going to their home in Erinsville, Ont.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. P. Cournyea, Stoco, Mr. and Mrs. L. Trudeau, Stoco, Misses Mace and Blanche Murphy, Tamworth, Misses Marie and Adwina Murphy, Enterprise.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Sergeant J. B. Scott, brother of Mrs. W. H. Lytle, 484 Gilmour street, is in the city for a few days prior to leaving for Siberia with the Canadian contingent. Sergt. Scott is attached to headquarters.

Miss Evelyn Jay, Cameron street, has returned to the English church Deaconess Home, Toronto, where she will resume her studies.

Mr. W. R. Givens of the Kingston Standard, who was one of the Canadian Overseas Press Party, met Major G. G. Greer of this city, who is now Deputy Assistant Director of Medical Services of the Fourth Canadian Division in France.

COL. BAIN STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

Col. George W. Bain, the veteran Kentucky orator, whose lecture at the Chautauqua here was so greatly enjoyed, was stricken with paralysis while addressing a large crowd at Sarnia, and removed to the General Hospital. For forty years the colonel has been one of the foremost lecturers on the American platform and his life-work counted strongly in the interest of good citizenship. — Barrie Examiner.

THE ONLY MEDICINE THE BABY NEEDS

Baby's Own Tablets is the only medicine a mother needs for her little ones. They are a gentle but thorough laxative which instantly relieve all stomach and bowel disorders thus banishing all the minor ills of little ones. Concerning them, Mrs. Jos. Levesque, St. Simon, Que., says:—"Baby's Own Tablets are a marvellous medicine for little ones. They never fail to cure stomach and bowel troubles and neither my sister-in-law or myself would use any other medicine for our little ones." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Pandora Range Reservoir is and does—

One thing a hot water reservoir should do—heat water.
And one thing it should be—easy to clean.

The Pandora flue system does the one—heats the water by carrying a continuous steady volume of heat to and along the length and depth of the reservoir.

The Pandora reservoir is easy to clean because it is seamless porcelain—enamelled white, with round ends. It can be lifted out with ease and washed as readily as a vegetable dish.

Different from the old-time, dark, built-in metal "tank" that had to be emptied with a dipper and cleaned by guess.

But the reservoir of the Pandora Range is modern, convenient, sanitary and good to look at, just like the Pandora is in every other way.

"The Magic of the Pandora"—Booklet Free

This is one of the many features of the Pandora Range described in "The Magic of the Pandora," a little booklet full of information that every woman will want before she buys a range. Write for it to the nearest McClary branch.

THE PRIZE STORY OF A PICNIC

Mr. G. A. Roberts, some time ago offered a prize for the best story of the picnic of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company policy holders, held at the T. A. S. Grounds some time ago. Four accounts were submitted and it was recided by the ... ment in view of all the circumstances to disregard length. The prize of the superintendant was won by Miss May O'Brien, 50 Wolsley street. Her account of the picnic was as follows:

THE FIRST METROPOLITAN PICNIC

At last, September third, that long waited-for day had come. The day on which the Metropolitan Policyholders were to hold their first picnic.

Dismal enough was the morning, owing to the rain which threatened to fall now and again, but still this did not hinder the boat from being crowded every hour, as each one seemed to know what she or she would miss by being absent.

About noon the atmosphere became clearer and each hour or so the boat returned to the wharf to find a very large crowd waiting to be conveyed to the T. A. S. Park, where they were anxious to share in the good time prepared for them.

Children and grown-ups were not lost for something to do when they reached their destination, as there were plenty of games, swings and refreshments, along with the beautiful Sonora which played constantly. Dancers occupied the pavillion floor frequently as they could not sit still to the enticing music.

Great credit is indeed due to Mr. Roberts, the Superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance, of the Peterborough district, for the very efficient way both he and his staff took in making everything pleasant and comfortable for the large crowd.

About the middle of the afternoon the sun's slanting rays lit up the whole park, and it did not take Mr. Tedford and Mr Tobin of the sporting committee, long to summon the crowd to be ready for the sports which were then to start. Races, such as pole, sack, wheelbarrow, and three legged, along with the exciting ball game, filled the whole crowd with enthusiasm. A prize was offered for the oldest policy-holder on the ground, which proved to be a lady, who had been insured in the company for thirty-eight years. Whole families of policy-holders were present, but after a thorough investigation a family with nine policy holders was awarded the premium.

After the people had disposed of their lunches two pictures were taken one of all present on the grounds and a second of the boat and its passengers.

During the evening persons who were unable to attend the picnic during the day, came and returned on the same boat, for the trip.

About nine o'clock, when the last boat left the grounds, an enjoyable time was spent in dancing, playing and singing on board, in which Mr. Roberts and staff assisted greatly.

Sorrowful, indeed, were the occupants of the last boat when they reached Peterborough, for they knew this day's outing was over. But everyone who attended seemed certainly pleased and enjoyed themselves, and only hope they will have the privilege of attending such a picnic again, under the name of the "Metropolitan Policy-Holder's Picnic," the greatest home gathering of the season.

GRAIN MARKET

Corn market showed further weakness yesterday, under the combined influences of trading restrictions, heavier receipts, and more favourable weather outlook. Oats also showed some weakness, in part from the same cause.

In the local market there is a good inquiry for all grains, while receipts are still light.

CATTLE MARKET

The farms are still being cleared of large numbers of cattle not required for winter stabling. The result is rather heavily congested markets, comprising cattle for the most part of very poor quality. All markets just now apparently are overloaded with a similar class of cattle. The consequence is a wide range in prices between the best grades of good killing cattle and the commoner grades. Choice heavy steers, very few offering, have sold strong from $14 to $15, one extra choice bunch sold by Dunn and Levack at $16, the top price paid in this week's markets. The demand has been steadily good for choice, well finished butcher steers and heifers, for choice fat cows, and for good quality stockers and feeders. In each of these classes supplies have been light. Of the medium and common grades of all classes supplies have been more than ample, with a corresponding steady weakening in prices, as compared with recent high levels, but still good prices considering the numbers and the quality of the cattle offering. A considerable number of Western cattle have been shipped east in the past week, a few cars finding their way to the Toronto market and selling at fair prices, and considering also the strong competition they ran up against in the extra large shipments of Ontario cattle.

There have been heavy runs of sheep and lambs, but with both a good local and export demand the market has held good and strong.

Choice veal calves have been in good demand, ruling at high prices. The proportions of heavy calves, however, has been far too large for a uniformly good market.

The market for choice milch cows and springers continues very strong.

Hogs have held steady and firm at $19.50 to $19.75, fed and watered, but there is talk of lower prices for next week.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 564 cars, with 10,438 cattle, 708 calves, 4,690 hogs, 8,382 sheep and lambs, and 51 horses.

City Cattle Market—36 cars, with 287 cattle, 1,195 sheep and lambs, 380 hogs and 76 calves.

We will not lower the quality of "CEETEE"

THE PURE WOOL UNDERCLOTHING THAT WILL NOT SHRINK

under any condition, nor for any consideration. We prefer not to make it at all, rather than do that.

There is no substitute for CEETEE Underclothing—it is in a class by itself. No other underwear like it is being made in America.

But, owing to the Government regulations regarding wool, which allow a very small percentage for civilian purposes, also the scarcity of available ships, we are only able to supply about half the demand for Ceetee, which is made from finest Australian Merino Wool.

However, if our many friends are unable to secure their usual CEETEE Underclothing, we suggest that they try some other Turnbull brand. We guarantee it will give excellent satisfaction.

Turnbull's underwear in all sizes is sold by most good dealers, for men, women and children.

We have been making high quality woollen underclothing for over 60 years.

CHESS IS NOT SO SLOW.

Fifteen Moves an Hour Is the Rule in Championship Games.

What is the average length of time that a chess player in an international championship contest takes to move?

Among mere human players there are many traditions of how these peers of the game scorn to make a move in less than an hour; nay, more, how they consume whole evenings and oftentimes days in a single move. Such tales are rife in rural chess circles.

Now, in hard fact, these superplayers move more rapidly than the everyday expert. The common limit in international championship matches is fifteen moves an hour; a player failing to get within this limit loses the game no matter how commanding his position; an average of four minutes to the move is considered ample time. Indeed, when Capablanca challenged Lasker for the world's championship he was held to be justified in refusing Lasker's condition that the limit be lengthened to twelve moves an hour.

In championship games a chess clock is always used. This has two dials, each dial controlled by a plunger. Immediately after black has moved white strikes his plunger, which starts the hands on his dial recording time. At the instant he moves he strikes his plunger again, halting the mechanism. Black then strikes the plunger of his dial, starting his clock in turn. The dials thus record the net time each consumes in moving.

Of course in practical play the contestant gets more than the four minutes. The first eight or ten moves are almost always book plays, made in less than a minute each. This allows much time as credit on later moves. Furthermore, even when his opponent is moving, a player studies his own next move, based on the probable move of his opponent. But the day long or even the hour long move exists only in the imagination of the village champion.—Washington Post.

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto-intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rashes, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

HE MADE GOOD.

Work Done In Army by Col. A. E. Ross, M.P.P.

The Canadian Corps will rejoice at the well-merited distinction that has come to Col. A. P. Ross, M.P.P. for Kingston and Deputy Director of the Canadian Corps, who has been offered the high post of Director of Medical Services in the reorganized British Fifth Army. A blunt man, caring nothing for honors and much for efficiency, Col. Ross has won a place in the estimation of Canadian soldiers which few have secured. As Chief Medical Officer of the corps, he has given Canada service which has literally saved innumerable lives. Of all his triumphs, from the practical extinction or "trench-feet" to the discovery of a successful treatment for the terrible mustard gas which is so largely employed by the enemy—nothing surpasses the marvel of the evacuation of the wounded during the Passchendaele operations.

That great series of battles which closed the 1917 campaign, on the western front, won a triumph for Canada not less than the triumph of "second Ypres," the Somme and Vimy Ridge. Many grave problems had to be overcome to insure victory. There was desperate lack of communications. From Wieltje and St. Jean to Abraham Heights, and so on beyond to Bellevue Spur, Cliff Farm and Passchendaele itself, valleys and hills were marshes where men slipped and stumbled on the higher levels and sank to their knees and often to their waists in the slime and shell holes in the valleys. The whole land was a succession of shell holes with cannon lodged on treacherous spaces between them. For sound men to walk the miles that had to be covered to reach the firing line was an ordeal, for wounded men it was a problem and a torture. Canada was sure of victory. It is the way of the Canadian Corps to win. But could the wounded be evacuated or were they to lie in No Man's Land bedded in mud until death relieved them or until, in their agonized tramps back to dressing stations, some water-filled shell-hole trapped them onits slippery edges and they died by drowning? Men who considered these problems wore grave and anxious faces. Men who had been facing them immediately before shook their heads and questioned the possibility of getting the wounded out. Col. Ross examined the situation and promised successful evacuation. The promise was fulfilled.

No medical services in the history of the war achieved a greater triumph than the C.A.M.C. under Col. Ross. The succor of the wounded as in the Passchendaele operations was accomplished by marvellous organization, by exhaustive preparations, by heroic, tireless endurance that got men out of the shambles despite tremendous difficulties. Ross did it; Ross and his staff; Ross and his able medical officers of divisions and O.C.'s of ambulances and stretcher-bearers that worked four to a stretcher and ambulance drivers who drove through the valley of death, over shell-shattered plank roadways, every time they went to the advanced dressing stations. With them were heroic medical officers who worked unceasingly at regimental aid posts at advanced and main dressing stations. All these in heroic service saved heroic lives for Canada. The driving power of the medical machine was Col. A. E. Ross.

Earning a Spanking.

A lady who had company to tea reproved her little son several times, speaking, however, very gently. At last, out of patience, she said sharply: "Jimmy, if you don't keep still I'll send you away from the table!"

More Speed More Speed More Speed

SPEED UP! Speed up! This is the slogan everywhere. In factory and warehouse, in office and store, at work and at play, it is more speed, more speed.

There are orders to be filled, and the goods must be turned out. Help is scarce, so those who are on the job must be speeded up.

The men at the head are working, yes, and worrying, strenuously. And so it is among the men and women all down the line. They must make more money, and so there are long hours of overtime.

It is this continuous strain that is breaking so many men and women, both mentally and physically. The hours for sleep and recreation are cut short, and so there is little chance for the restoration of the depleted nerve cells.

Nerve force is necessary for the healthful working of the heart, the lungs, the stomach and other digestive and eliminating organs of the body. If the nerve force is consumed in mental and physical work, in worry and anxiety and continuous nervous strain, the action of these vital organs must surely lag.

And so it is that you begin to lose appetite and relish for food. The stomach fails to digest the food because the nerve force is lacking that should control the flow of gastric juices. The liver, the kidneys, the bowels lack vigor and strength to perform their necessary functions.

You are driving the human machine too hard. Energy is being consumed more rapidly than it can be replaced. Physical bankruptcy is certain.

But what are you to do? The cost of living is high. You cannot afford a long rest.

There is a way in which the nervous system can be restored. That is by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You can help this treatment by taking things easier. Get all the rest you can. Refuse to be worried and excited. Persist in the regular use of this great nerve restorative, and you will soon find yourself gaining in health and vigor.

If your nervous system is greatly run down a little patience is necessary at the beginning, but once you begin to feel the tingle of new energy and vigor through your system you will be encouraged to keep on with this food cure until your health and vitality is fully restored.

You are protected against imitations by the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, which are on every box of the genuine Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

AVENGED HIS BROTHER.

Sequel to Famous Story of German Brutality.

The sergeant of the Canadians whose reported crucifixion after the second battle of Ypres in 1915 aroused such interest, has been amply avenged. His brother joined the Newfoundland regiment where he is now sergeant-major. He received what he considers ample confirmation of the crucifixion, which actually took place, having seen the man who took the bayonets from the body which was fastened against a door.

This brother has shown the most extraordinary daring in winning decorations and promotion by his passionate offensives at every opportunity against the Germans. During a period of trench war he went out night after night, crawling up to the German lines, bombing and sniping. During the Somme fighting he received the D.C.M. and Croix de Guerre for his conspicuous gallantry and resource.

On October, 1916, near Guedecourt, when reaching the enemy's parapet, he saw a hostile machine gun coming into action and threw a bomb which killed three of the crew. Then up jumped upon the machine gun crew, bayoneting the remaining six despite serious wounds, and finally bayoneting one giant German before he himself, blinded and almost helpless from loss of blood, fell to the ground. He received thirteen wounds before the fighting finished.

"Whenever he sees Germans he sees red. The vision of his crucified brother is ever in his mind," said one of his officers.

A Scottish Wife.

Two "kilties" from the same Scottish town met in a rest camp "somewhere in France," and started to exchange confidences. "Whit like a send-off did yer wuman gie ye, Sandy, when ye left fur France?" asked Jock, presently. Sandy lit a fresh cigarette before replying: "Says she, 'Noo, there's yer train, Sandy; in ye get, an' see an' do yer duty. By jingo, ma mannie, if I thocht ye wod shirk it oot yonder I wnd see ye was wounded afore ye gang off!' That's the send-off she gaed me, Jock."

Veteran Has Earned Rest.

Joseph Hunter, C.E., of Victoria, B.C., has determined to take a rest. For sixty years past he has been worked at top speed as engineer, surveyor, mining engineer, railway builder and manager, legislator and colliery superintendent. He started as a mining man in the Cariboo, later helping to build the C.P.R., delimiting the British Columbia-Alaska boundary, building and managing the E. and N. Railway and running the Dunsmuir collieries and the Vancouver Island railways.

ORDERED TO BE SOLD.

Property of Mrs. Busch to be Put up at Private Sale.

Washington, Sept. 27. — Real estate and buildings on Riverside drive, New York city, owned by Mrs. Lilly Busch, wife of the late Adolphus Busch, millionaire brewer, of St. Louis, are to be sold by the federal custodian of alien property, at private sale. Authority for the sale is given in an executive order of the president, made public to-day, at the custodian's office. All of Mrs. Busch's property in this country valued at many million dollars, was seized by the alien property custodian while Mrs. Busch was in Germany, but since her return to America she has filed a petition asking for its return on the ground that she is an American. No action has yet been taken on the petitions, and the President's order explained that it was for this reason that the property in New York could not be sold at public auction. An offer for the purchase of the Riverside property was made before the President's order was issued, it is disclosed, and Mrs. Busch consented in writing that the sale be made.

IRON DISCIPLINE MUCH WEAKENED

Lack of Confidence Between Officers and Men Becoming Mutual.

With the French Army in France Sept. 27.—The replies of prisoners recently interrogated show that the lack of confidence between the German officers and men is becoming mutual. Officers complain of declining discipline in the ranks. Soldiers whose loyalty was unquestioned a year ago, they declare, are now deaf to patriotic harangues.

"We can no longer have confidence in our men," said one officer. "Patriotic exhortations are now lost on them. They think more of their stomachs than their country."

On the other hand the soldiers say that the officers think only of their own safety when the line breaks under pressure of the allied forces; that they leave behind for their own safety, rearguards, who during the early phases of the retreat were sacrificed without knowing that they had been deliberately abandoned by the rest of the forces.

In the fierce fighting on the advanced line protecting the Hindenburg position, officers remained in the rear, the men declare, leaving subalterns to keep those on this line from yielding or surrendering. The resentment caused by the spread of this conviction among the rank and file prisoners is evidenced at the prison camps. German soldiers, under protection of French guards, stand no longer in awe of their officers, who are prisoners with them.

DISCIPLINE FADING

"The discipline spirit of our men is no longer what it was," said a German officer. "At the first prisoners' camp to which I was taken, one of our men appeared before me in a neglectful position and refused to rectify it, saying 'We have no more use for all that here.'"

An officer captured in front of Laffaux, in a quarry cave, with a number of men, complained that they had refused to use their machine guns, when the French attacked, saying it was useless to fight on. When the men filed past the enclosure where the officer was waiting to be sent to the rear he cried out to them: "Swine! Swine!"

A colonel taken with another group of prisoners had neither coat nor blanket, while many of his men had both. They all refused to give up anything for his comfort.

There are still many units in the German army that fight with the utmost courage, such as those facing General Mangin's men, west of the Chemin des Dames, and there are officers who still stick to their forces to the last minute, as shown by the number taken prisoner recently. But the proportion of the latter to the former in the front line is evidently smaller and the evidence of those captured leads the French command to the conviction that on the whole, the old iron discipline in the German ranks has been weakened greatly during the retreats in the past two months.

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

FACE IT BRAVELY.

Death borders upon our birth and our cradle stands in the grave. "Men most endure their going hence, even as their coming," and to these left behind with affliction should be one of the wholesome souls of virtue, where faith, fortitude and patience take root and flourish. During the past few months the thought of death not as something far away in the hazy future, but real in the minds of the mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers of the men we have sent "over there" in answer to the call of right and humanity. Our young men have been called upon to go into battle and offer their bodies and their lives. The call was a glorious summons and it was gloriously answered. These young men have seen death, others are yet to see it, on every side, in every form. They went knowingly and in surety that there was a point of danger to be faced and that the "going hence" might be for them. Yet none faltered.

As the great struggle proceeds the list of casualties—deaths — in the ranks in the American armies will grow. Even now it is gradually lengthening, and later it doubtless will contain the names of those near and dear to many readers of this newspaper. The inevitable cannot be avoided. Whatever of grief there may be at the loss of a loved one surely may be assuaged, lightened, by the thought of a splendid ending of a life heretofore given over to the practice of kindly deeds and civic virtues.

THE HOME.

Married people would be happier—

If home trials were never told to the neighbours.

If they kissed and made up after every quarrel.

If household expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be as agreeable as in courtship days.

If each would try to support and comfort the other.

If each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

If women were as kind to their husbands as they were to their wives.

If fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer work.

If both parties remembered that they married for worse as well as better.

If men were as thoughtful for their wives as they were for their sweetheart.

If there were fewer "please, darl- costumes for the street, and more plain tidy house dresses.

If there were fewer "please, darlings" in public, and more polite manners in private.

GO HOME, BOYS.

Boys, don't hang around the corner of the streets. If you have anything to do, do it promptly, right off, then go home. Home is the place for boys. About the street corners and at the stables they learn to talk slang, and they learn to swear, to smoke tobacco and to do many other things which they ought not to do.

Do your business and then go home. If your business is play, play and make a business of it. We like to see boys play good, earnest, healthy games. If we were the town council we would give the boys a good, spacious playground. It would have plenty of good grass and trees and fountains, and broad spaces to run and jump and play suitable games in. We would make it pleasant, as lovely as it could be, and we would give it to the boys to play in, and when the game was ended we would tell them to go home.

MAKE HOME ATTRACTIVE.

Have good papers and magazines; let the boys and girls subscribe for them. Have music of some kind; and never consider that you have performed your duty to your children unless you give them the advantages of education. Let the children that have talents for music take music lessons; even if you can't afford to let them take lessons until they are good musicians, why let them take a few lessons and get some knowledge of music, and by practice and study they may become experts. If some of them show a talent for drawing or printing or any other of the arts, why cultivate that talent to the best of your ability.

Always have your home well lighted. Oil or gas is very much cheaper than having your children wander off, you know not where, and they naturally want to go where it is bright and attractive.

Let them invite their friends to their home and then let the parents assist in entertaining; but don't try to monopolize all the time, but remember it is the children's company.

When the toils and cares of the day are over, and the children are at home from school, the most delightful hour to the family circle. The outside world is dismissed, and father and mother and children are together in sweet communion and unshaken trust. There is no vacant chair. There is not a face missing. Death has never visited this home. The hour of retiring comes, and blessed with father's instructions and mother's prayers, the little group retire for the night. May it not be that angels hover over such a home during the silent watches. All homes where the family circle is unbroken can be just such a home as this with a slight effort on the part of each member of the household.

Suffered Since Childhood

Kidneys at the Root of the Evil

Think of it! The joys of youth marred by agonizing pains, and all hopes of a bright future blotted out by thoughts of a life burdened with Backache and other sufferings.

Such was the case of Mr. A. Cail until a good friend advised him that there was a remedy for his trouble and he would find it if he used Gin Pills. Read what Mr. Cail says:

"I was troubled with my Kidneys since childhood and spent a large amount of money on doctors trying to get cured. Instead of getting better I kept getting worse until a friend of mine advised me to try Gin Pills. I did so, and after taking one box I was able to get out of bed and walk around. Two more boxes relieved me completely and since then I have had no return of the trouble."

This remarkable testimonial was written by a man whose statement cannot be doubted. Mr. Cail's reason for writing this history of his case was—gratitude for the relief that Gin Pills brought him. Wouldn't you do the same if your case was similar? If you suffer now—don't suffer any longer. Use Gin Pills and obtain relief from Kidney or Bladder Trouble, and the pain, suffering and inconvenience that they cause.

Sealed Tight Kept Right

THE MAZURKA ROSE FROM LOW TO HIGH PLACES.

Oppression instead of crushing out a nation's national music, often cultivates it. That is at least partly true of poor buffeted Poland. Years of subjection have served to stimulate Polish forms of music the two most notable of which are Polonaise, the stately dance of court functions, and the Mazurka which sprung from the country people. The Mazurka may have had a lowly birth, but it was destined to make its way into higher places. The derivation of the name is really Mazur meaning a native of the Province of Mazovia. The founda- tional part of Mazurkas originated in national songs which were features of Polish dancing.

The music of the Mazurka is written in 3-8 or 3-4 time usually consisting of two groups of eight bars, each group being repeated. A strong accent is often found on the second beat of the bar. One writer on Polish music refers to the early Mazurkas as having a drone-bass, a single note, and they were for either four or eight couples to dance to. But after the subjugation of Poland Russia took up this national dance which was afterwards performed by any number of couples. Later it became quite fashionable in England and France. In its native setting the Mazurka must have been one of the liveliest of dances, but as we know it the tempo is slower than the ordinary waltz.

It was the work of Chopin to reach the highest attainment in composing Mazurkas. He is said to have produced 56 of them, and something new in each one.

Coke, a Substitute for Hard Coal

But one fuel can successfully take the place of hard coal, and that fuel is coke. By coke we do not mean the ordinary gas-house coke that has so often been used, unscreened and unprepared in any way, but a domestic coke, made by a special by-product process, screened and assorted in sizes like hard coal.

What is Coke?

Coke is the coal that is condensed by a special process to a form approaching, as nearly as possible, pure carbon, and that is further made more combustible by its light and porous structure. It is the solid part of the coal left after the volatile matter has been driven off.

In distilling by the retort-oven method, coal is placed in a closed chamber heated by the combustion of gas in flues, arranged in the wall of the chamber. In such a chamber the highest grade of coke possible is produced, and all the by-products that rise in the form of vapors are recovered.

The heat-producing qualities of coke surpass those of hard coal. A ton of coke can be made to go further than a ton of hard coal, because it is pure fuel, contains less waste—less incombustible material—and about one-third as much ashes.

How to Use It.

A coke fire will "come up" more quickly in the morning than a hard coal fire, at the same time holding just as well overnight; it is all a matter of damper adjustment. Then, too, cooke can be stored out in the open better than any other fuel, and handled without depreciation. It is clean; for there are no clinkers.

A coke fire must be checked to keep down the heat; a hard coal fire must be poked into activity. A great deal depends on how the fire is kindled, but once the fire is started, coke burns hotter and faster than coal does. Care should be exercised in regulating the draft, for a beginner often blows out a fire before it is well started.

To start the fire, kindle it as you would hard coal; but as fast as the flames appear, cover them with smaller pieces of coke, thus closing in the heat and deepening the bed of coals. This is important. Coke kindles best from its own heat.

What to Remember.

When the fire is once started shut off all drafts, especially the chimney draft, to keep the heat from going up the chimney.

Do not shake or poke a coke fire half as much as you would a coal fire.

Keep the bed of the fire deep, with the coke well piled up.

Remember, that a large body of coke, burning with a gentle glow, will give more heat than a small quantity burning fiercely.

Use nut size for ranges, egg or stove size for furnaces or heaters, pea bein gthe favortie sizes.

Coke, being lighter in bulk, and of porous body, thus admitting air readily, must be fired in larger mass than hard coal, and it has been found best to use as small a size as will readily stay on the grates, stove, nut, and pea being the favorite sizes.

Remember that coke takes more space than its fuel equivalent in coal and arrange your bins accordingly. —B. Kaye, in Popular Science Monthly.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE WHITE ROSE

(By Lieut. J. B. Morton.)

Before the war the estaminet of the White Rose looked out over broad fields and a peaceful countryside. There were orchards, too, and the farmers of the neighbourhood were prosperous men. The estaminet was always their meeting place in the evening. Men with heavy boots and tanned skins came in for a drink and a smoke, and the old patronne's daughter served them. Often the men sang quaint old songs in their harsh voices, and the rafters shook with prodigious laughter.

Then came the war, and the men carried their quaint songs far away south to the Ardennes. Other men, strangers, sat at the wooden tables. They, too, had tanned skins and heavy boots, and they sang strange songs loudly, and their laughter was infectious. They called the old patronne "Mother" and joked with her, until she would have done anything in the world for them.

The Germans were reported to be advancing, and one evening their guns were heard. The inhabitants of the village gathered their belongings and left their homes. The last to leave were the old innkeeper and her daughter, for they knew no world but the little world of their village.

The German advance wavered and broke before the fury of the British counter-attack, but the German guns had done their work. It was a sad little estaminet, window-deep in rubble that looked out over fields scarred with shell-holes, and muddy wastes on every side. But the men in khaki were still there, singing their songs as if nothing had happened. The orchards were wrecked, and the church spire leaned over, and in front of the village ran trenches with masses of barbed wire before them; and Staff Officers worked in the front room of the little inn by candle light; for the sandbags darkened the house.

One day a violent bombardment demolished nearly all that remained of the village, and the Germans attacked. Hardly one stone was left standing on another, and only the cellar of the estaminet remained. There was bitter and bloody fighting in and out of the village, and a great crater yawned in the main street. "A" Company officer worked in the cellar, and in the evenings there were still songs. Sometimes one side gave a little ground, sometimes the other, and the cellar underwent many changes, but always there were men in khaki there with their songs.

Then the British began to advance, slowly at first. A Colonel slept there where there had once been rats and rows of bottles. The line moved forward, and an Aid-Post sprang up in the cellar, the wounded were brought in on their stretchers, and attended by candle-light, and there were still the same songs. Then the sound of the guns moved further away, and an Engineer Dump was established in the village. The cellar was filled with coils of wire, and bits of wood, and the men sang as they worked.

One day, when the dump had moved forward, a party of men came to the village to build. A strange new house rose above the old cellar, and men gathered there again in the evenings. There were some Frenchmen among them, many without an arm or a leg, back from the Ardennes, and they sang their songs again, mingling them with the British songs; and the old woman and her daughter returned. "Mother" they called her still, until she grew to be at home in the new house.

Some men rummaging in the rubble found the old sign board, discoloured and chipped. They put it up over the door, and the estaminet of the White Rose, full of old songs, French and British, looked out once more over the newly ploughed fields.

CHAPLAINS LOSE INSIGNIA.

Will Be Designated Only by Cross Giving Up Sign of Rank.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Orders have been issued by the War Department depriving chaplains in the army of their insignia of military rank. Hereafter they will wear only the insignia of chaplain as well as the letters "U. S." on their collars.

This action was recommended by those in charge of the American Expeditionary Force abroad. There is a strong feeling among officers in the overseas army that chaplains should not wear insignia of military rank. It is asserted to be the opinion of officers there, and this has been adopted by the War Department, that chaplains can be of greater service to the men if they do not wear military insignia.

It is argued that the wearing of military insignia does not give the men the same sort of attitude toward the chaplains that would exist where only the chaplain's insignia is worn. It is asserted that where the insignia of higher military rank is worn the men seem to show a reticence about going for spiritual advice, and that where the military insignia is not worn there is a readier disposition among the soldiers to treat the chaplains as chaplains rather than as military officers.

Life When Past Fifty

(Los Angeles Times.)

When you have passed, say, your fiftieth birthday anniversary, foxy old Mr. Time puts the skids under you and greases them good and plenty.

It is appalling, then, how quickly the days and the weeks and the months pass. You start in on Monday morning, and before you know it, it is Saturday night again. Even the years slip by as though you were riding through life on a roller coaster.

The thing to do then, brother, is to put on the brakes. Slow up and get a little more enjoyment out of the scenery.

Some men think that just the other way is the best method to adopt, but we are convinced that they are making a mistake. Their idea is that the thing to do when one grows gray and bald is to keep up with the procession, wear pinch-back clothes, silk socks and a sailor hat with a polka dot band.

But, if you do that, all you achieve is an acceleration of the pace. It is a pathetic form of camouflage that deceives no one, and yourself least of all. When you are 50 and over, you know it and everyone else knows it.

When a man is 50 he should have a home in the country, or at least out of the town. He should awake before dawn and say good morning to the sun, sip his glass of water deliberately instead of gulping it down, move serenely, take his time.

When night comes he should be able to say, "Well, this has been a fine, long day," instead of saying "For the love of Mike, where has this day gone to?"

Then, when old age comes, you will be able to say with the sage "Old age is the night of life, but is the night not beautiful with stars?"

WAR GROWS SAVAGE

Present Methods Contrasted With Those of Twenty Years Ago

One night, twenty years ago, I sat in an army camp in Cuba, during the Santiago campaign, listening to a discussion of war weapons. That day, some 2,000 men had been killed and wounded, in a three hours battle, which involved all of Shafter's army corps at San Juan Hill and at El Caney. The matter which created the most comment was the very small per cent. of mortalities in the casualty list. The wounded would nearly all recover and except here and there without permanent injury. Two American staff officers were discussing it and praising the Mauser rifle, which the Spaniards were using. I remember substantially the words of one of the staff officers. He said: "It is a more merciful weapon than the Krag, which we are using, because it is of smaller bore, makes a cleaner wound and puts the other fellow out of business just as effectively as the Krag does, without inflicting as dangerous an injury."

I remember that they both agreed that the science of modern war was to knock the other fellow out without slaughtering him. I thought of that odd American conception of that 20 year-old period, while visiting yesterday a hospital where Americans were being brought in from the field. Some of the men are indescribably mangled; some wounds lie open as though they had been made with a cleaver—others are of the crushed ragged kind. I went from this dangerously wounded ward into a neighboring tent, where 200 gassed men with bandaged eyes tossed restlessly. As I thought of the desperately wounded, I had just left and of the poisoned, men, called upon to defend themselves against an inhuman weapon which gave them no chance to strike blow for blow, I realized the utter savagery to which we have reverted since that gentle day in which we sank the Spanish navy and made guests of the Spanish army, until the hour arrived when we might send the conquered home in chivalry and honor.—Kansas City Times.

Trucks Relieve Freight Congestion

THE interurban highway and the motor truck make a useful combination for solving the short haul transportation problem.

Many business houses have derived material benefits from this method of distribution. Delays through railway car shortage and terminal congestion have been reduced. Delivery costs have been reduced and customers have been served more promptly.

The highway and the motor truck have brought the city nearer the farm and the farmer's products nearer the city. Larger profits have accrued to farmers, and merchants who utilize the motor truck on the highway. The Ford One-Ton Truck Chassis is built for this particular service.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Larry's Grandmother

By ANNE O'HAGAN

(Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

Old Mrs. Doherty's eyes had looked on sorrow, but always dauntlessly. Thus it happened that their humor was as undimmed, their friendliness as unquenched, at seventy as half a century earlier. Out of a network of wrinkles they sparkled cheerfully, their blue luster heightened by the parchment brownness of her weather-beaten skin. And whenever they dwelt upon her grandson, Larry Doherty, they took a new depth of kindness and brightness.

She accounted herself a very lucky woman, she was wont to tell her neighbors. To be sure, her husband, when they had been married only a little over a year, had been killed in an explosion in the old country; but he had left her Larry, her own son Larry, the baby in arms, who had grown to be the best and most stalwart of sons. She dwelt upon Larry's memory with great tenderness, for he was only a memory these many years now. The ship that was bearing him to America with his mother, his pretty wife, and their rosy children, had been wrecked on the Banks. Only one of the lifeboats had ever been heard of again. That one a schooner from Falmouth Cape had sighted and saved; and on it was old Mrs. Doherty with her youngest grandchild, the baby Larry, in her arms.

To some the chronicle would not have seemed one of good fortune; but Mrs. Doherty translated calamity to blessing in her own fashion.

She was a busy creature even after the dreadful struggle of her early years in the new country was past. Her cabin on the hill shone with a cleanliness matching that of her New England neighbors. She was a dairy woman of note, albeit but two cows composed her stock. She had a chicken yard screened from her small vegetable patch and flower bed.

Larry, of course, had no conception of the fact that she was a miracle among grandmothers, but he loved her and depended upon her and imposed upon her and took her as an everyday matter—until the Downings came to Falmouth Cape. Then his eyes were opened to the fact that his relative was not as other women are. Myrtle Downing, blonde, given to giggling, and admitting twenty-three years, enlightened him.

"My!" she said, when their acquaintance had progressed to the point of personalities, "ain't your grandma funny?"

"What's funny about her?" demanded Larry, startled as if it had been suggested to him that some fact of nature was out of the natural order.

"Now, who did you ever see dress like that?" retorted Myrtle unanswerably.

Whereupon Larry, recalling the difference between the customary dress of the community and the neat peasant garb which his grandmother had never discarded, blushed for her. Later he sought with gifts to beguile her into a fashion which Miss Downing assured him was correct.

Mrs. Doherty was outwardly grateful, though unbeguiled. To herself she said shrewdly and sadly:

"He niver found out for himself what I was wearin'. No! An' it's little he'd have cared for annywan's tellin' him, unless—unless"—she sighed heavily. "Well, I could have wished it another!"

And the more Larry's grandmother saw of Miss Myrtle Downing, the more she wished that it might have been another.

She was much alone in her cabin during the days of Larry's wooing; and the light went out of her eyes as it had never gone in all the years of her labor and sorrow.

"It's not his leavin' me for another," she used to assure some inward accuser. "Lord save us, didn't I see me own do that, an' have joy wid him? But this girl—this baggage—what does she know about carin'? He'll niver be happy wid her—her an' her curls!"

It was Myrtle's obviously artificial ringlets to which the old woman took the most violent objection, making them the scapegoat, as it were, for all the girl's shallowness and shams.

Once, in a desperate moment, she made the mistake that wiser ones than she have made. She spoke contemptuously of her grandson's sweetheart; she besought him to give Myrtle up. And she accomplished nothing but the erecting of a wall of silence and antagonism between herself and the boy for whom she lived.

And so it finally came about that she heard from the neighbors and not from himself of his contemplated marriage. Mrs. Downing, it was reported, had bewailed the approaching nuptials. "The Dohertys were no match for the Downings," she had lamented.

Now, though she knew that love would do strange things to the young, blinding them to the beauty of old ways and bidding them shut the windows upon peaceful old outlooks, still the stricken grandmother never doubted Larry's intentions toward herself. Never, she knew, would it occur to him to turn her adrift in her old age. But she herself, could she stay where alien eyes looked coldly upon her?

"But if I go an' live by mesilf," she said, "they'll say he turned me out, they'll misjudge the poor, foolish boy. An' if I go, who's to take care or nim—for that baggage hasn't it in her. 'Deed, an' she doesn't make him happy even now"—which was true enough, as the most casual could observe.

Myrtle, aiming at the witcheries of coquetry, achieved pertness and a habit of nagging, and kept her lover in a state of irritation far enough removed both from the blissful uncertainty which she intended and the comfortable assurance which he regarded as his right.

By and by the March gales began to beat along the coast. The waters of the bay rose and lashed themselves with oceanic fury. The winds threatened the houses, the piers, the railroad. One morning there came a telephone report to the station that the trains from the region west of Falmouth Cape would be unable to reach the cape station and to go on to Falmouth Town on the other side of the bay. Floods had washed away bridges and roadbeds in the interior, and for 48 hours, at least, there would be no traffic. Falmouth Cape settled itself to the excited security of a mere watcher of calamities; but in two hours it ceased even to watch, for the storm had wrought havoc with the telephone wires, and it was cut off from the world.

Two things drove Larry stubbornly to town that morning. One was a boyish pride in the fact that he had never missed a day's work since he obtained a position; the other was that Myrtle had been uncommonly trying the night before with her weak coquetries and her bad temper, and he wished to escape her neighborhood for a while. He harnessed the old horse, wrapped himself well, and drove across the road bridge that paralleled the railroad bridge across the bay and into Falmouth Town.

In the afternoon the section of the road bridge next to Falmouth Cape succumbed to the strain of the winds and the rising billows. Crackling and crashing, it was swept away, and the flooring of the structure terminated abruptly over the seething, tar-black waters an eighth of a mile from the cape shore. The arch still stood, and the wooden girders on which the flooring had been laid.

All that afternoon Mrs. Doherty rushed about beseeching some one to go and save her boy. Every one answered that her boy would not attempt to make the journey home that evening. In the morning, perhaps, the wires would be working again, and the town end of the bridge could be warned of the damage at the cape end. Any way, they said, there was no practicable way of reaching her grandson.

Myrtle, to whom the old woman went in final appeal, scoffed at the notion of Larry's attempting to return in the evening.

"He wouldn't be such a fool!" she said conclusively.

"Fool?" cried his grandmother, in anguish and exasperation. 'Tis us that knows the bridge is broke, not him. All was safe an' well whin he went over this mornin'. Why wouldn't he be comin' home tonight? He'll start, all in the dark an' the wind, an' he'll drive, an' there'll be no seein' the end, an'—are ye goin' to do nothin' at all, at all?"

"What could I do?" demanded Myrtle, sullen, but sufficiently reasonable.

"If it was the man I was goin' to marry," declared the old woman, with red spots in the wrinkled hollows of her cheeks, and glittering points in her eyes, "I'd crawl along the broken wood, over the pillars there, till I could reach the bourded part of the bridge. An' thin I'd walk an' run, an' run an' walk, till I came to Falmouth Town, an' there I'd stand to wait an' warn him!"

"La, Mrs. Doherty, you certainly do make me tired," retorted Myrtle. "I ain't so dead set on keepin' a beau as you'd be, if you had one!"

Something in the brutal egotism which she had uncovered silenced Mrs. Doherty. She started and shook her head in dumb uncomprehension, then turned and walked back to the cabin.

"Maybe I was meant for the say, afther all," she said, as she moved about putting the cabin to rights. Then she went out, a quaint and sturdy figure with her tight, white cap, her short, quilted skirt, and her red shawl crossed on her bosom and tied at her waist in the back. Down to the place where the bridge had been she trudged. Later, one of the cape children came home screaming that old Mrs. Doherty was crawling along the girders that remained on the demolished section of the bridge—he had seen her red shawl.

* * * * * * *

"A nice notion of lovin' you've got," stormed Myrtle, angry tears in her eyes. "Throwin' me over for an old woman—an old scarecrow! Some girls wouldn't put up with it! They'd make you suffer, you an' her, too. But I won't. I don't believe I could have brought myself to marry you, any way. Don't talk to me! I don't want to hear any more about the wind an' the blackness an' the water, an' how the voice was like a ghost's or a banshee's! She's been savin' your life ever since you were a baby, an' you're goin' to make her happy as long as she lives? Well, she'll live forever, an' get more an' more unreasonable every minute, an' I hope—"

She broke off. Down the road a cheerful old laugh was sounding in the spring sunshine. Larry turned from her to listen to it, his eyes alight. A mellow old voice spoke.

"Ah, there was small danger afther all, ma'am! Thim that's born for hangin' ye can't drown, ye know! Sure I was safe enough; but Larry—he mighn't have been!"

Not Accident, But Plot.

Having mastered the secret of vicious psychological suggestion, the Germans made such headway in Russia as to pave the way for the conquest of the world. It is possible that they have even discovered climatic secrets of meteorology hidden from free nations. Battle weather has been on the side of our enemy. Having adroitly arranged the downfall of Russia the Italians were betrayed. Wherever the Italian and Austrian armies met our ally's army showed the better men. But the Papist clericals planted the seed that enabled the socialistic pacifists of Upper Italy and the simple soldiers of certain regiments, wearied with the war, to betray Gen. Cadorna. Self-interest and sensuality were the lures provided by Germany for the corruption and destruction of Russia and part of Cadorna's army. As it was in 1588 so it is now. Not by accident but by design the Province of Quebec fought like a wild cat to avoid conscription at the very moment when the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Melbourne attempted to play the same game. Sinn Fein and Nationalist Ireland threatens rebellion if conscription comes to pass. All part of the same plan. The Irishmen claim to be left with the women and children while the English and Scots are sent to the front. This is a war of purification. It is futile to shut our eyes to the fact that our thirty thousand uninterned sensual civilian Germans are at large to form the business garrison of a conquered England.—"Vanoc" in London Referee.

Solving the Nation's Shoe Problem

A LARGE section of the Canadian public depends upon this company for shoes. Our financial resources and buying power are greater by far than those of any other Canadian manufacturer of shoes; our volume of output is more than twice that of any other. Our sales organization covers the nation from coast to coast, not merely a small section at a time.

Our six branches maintain adequate stocks within the reach of every dealer in Canada, and are now serving more than 5,000 dealers, enabling them to fill orders quickly and to cut down the amount of idle stock on their shelves.

We are making every effort to use this power to help solve the big problem of providing enough good quality shoes to go around. In the face of an actual scarcity of leather, it is difficult; but it can be done if you will co-operate with us. Buy wisely, for service rather than merely for style, and see that the shoes you buy are stamped with the manufacturer's trade-mark.

Kitchener was right

when he said—

"Either the Civilian population must go short of many things to which it is accustomed in times of peace or our armies must go short of munitions and other things indispensable to them."

NOW, the only way we can possibly live up to that obligation is by going without in order that our soldiers may have. For the money we waste is not money at all—it is equipment, clothing, shot and shell that are urgently needed in France.

By denying ourselves, therefore, we enable Canada to procure to the fullest extent the materials and labor which she and our Allies need for the successful prosecution of the war.

What happens when we fail to save?

A pull on labor by the Government in one direction and a pull on labor by the people in the opposite direction. Hundreds of millions of dollars are of no use to the country if goods and services can be secured only to the extent of eighty millions of dollars. So we must do everything in our power to release both goods and labor for the purposes for which Canada needs them.

WHETHER it be food, coal, wool, steel, leather, labor or transportation, the result in all cases is the same. Whoever competes with the nation by freely satisfying his own desires, selfishly appropriates to his own use that which is so urgently required for our fighting men in France.

For the sake of your country and the boys "over there," spend cautiously. Think of what Lord Kitchener has said, and ask yourself first, "Is this something I really need or can I do without it?"

ANOTHER ILLUSION GONE

Army Surgeons Find Many American Indians Physically Imperfect

American verse and fiction have ever favored the country boy Perhaps because the land was largely agricultural in population, perhaps because the poets and novelists, after the manner of their kind, were wont to sing the praises of the large out-of-doors, the nation came really to believe tha tthe country girls were fairer and the country boys brighter than their city cousins.

he illusion passes under the blows of school surveys and physical examinations. Along with it there goes into the discard a kindred fable still more dear to most Americans.

The American Indian, if army surgeons may be trusted, is not the eagle-eyed bronze Apollo of favored fiction. Examination of drafted redmen in a dozen Western States has revealed that the Indian's eyesight, far from being keener than his white fellow-citizen, is generally notably inferior, and that his constitution, instead of being forged of the traditional iron, is weak in an astonishing proportion of cases. The redman, indeed, ranks physically with those unfortunate youths on whom the little red school house's lack of ventilation or sanitation, or the slum's congestion has laid a blighting mark.

The Indian, it appears, is the perfect hunter, only because he knows what to look for on the trail, not because his sight is keener He is master of his fate in the woods, only because he was bred to the woods and has known from childhood how to care for himself in the open.

He is, indeed, much like other Americans, a creature of his invironment. It is safe to say that along with his white brothers, he will profit much by his compulsory military training, and will come out better physically, as well as mentally and morally.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MASONS TO PROTEST.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—Attempts of the Kaiser to use the Masonic Order to abet German peace propaganda were vigorously denounced in a resolution unanimously adopted on Wednesday night by the Supreme Council, Scottish Rite, southern jurisdiction, in convention here.

The resolution states that "German terms of peace shall never be considered by Masons, because it is an inconclusive peace. Only terms of peace ensuring a lasting peace, such as the American proposals shall be given consideration."

The resolution explains that the Masons knew nothing of the German schemes to use the order for peace propaganda last August.

Canada's Share of War Honours

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Of Canada's great contribution as a fighting asset to the great war, some idea may be gained from the number of awards and decorations bestowed on Canadians for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. Up to April 30, 1918, according to the dates official list available 8,331 awards for personal valof in the field had been bestowed on soldiers of the Canadian forces. The total is made up as follows:

Victoria Cross	30
Distinguished Service Order	410
Bar Distinguished Service Order	14
Military Cross	1,361
Bar to Military cross	52
Distinguished Conduct Medal	873
Bar to Distinguished Conduct Medal	9
Military Medal	5,939
First Bar to Military Medal	232
Secon Bar to Military Medal	6

The grand total of war honors awarded to Canadians amounting to 12,240, includes five K.C.B.'s, three K. C. M. G.'s, eighteen C.B.'s, eighty-one C. M. G.'s and thirty-two orders of the British Empire.

Canadian nursing sisters have won 130 Royal Red Cross crosses, 510 meritorious service medals, and 341 foreign orders and decorations.

The "Mentions in Despatches" for gallantry and devotion to duty among Canadians amounted to 2,573 up to April 30.

GERMAN TRIBUTE TO FOCH.

Cologne Gazette Says He is Achieving General Strategical Unity.

LONDON, Sept. 25.—The Allied successes in France, Macedonia, and Palestine have led the Cologne Gazette to anxious consideration regarding future military developments.

"We must do Foch the justice to say he is apparently beginning to obtain on a big scale that strategical unity he has already obtained on French soil," says this leading German newspaper, and after reviewing the situation in the various theatres of war it contends that the prosecution from all sides of an offensive against the alliance of the Central Powers would be a masterstroke. Having mentioned the unity of command and the superiority of the Allies in men and material as conditions favouring them, it continues:

"We have already pointed out the enviable secrecy observed in the manufacture of armoured tanks and the training of their crews, which now number not thousands, but tens of thousands. To these must be added the increase in the number of guns, minethrowers, flame projectors, machine guns, gas and fog ammunition of airplanes of all kinds. No proof is necessary that German industry is unable to accomplish this in similar quantities. Especially as regards the armoured tanks, there is no doubt that the numerical superiority is on the side of the enemy, and that he is bound to utilize it to the utmost."

Allied Troops Begin a New Attack on the Front North of Ypres To-day and Advance Some Points Exceeds Two and Half Miles

British Have Taken Ten Thousand Prisoners in the Cambrai Area —Americans Smash Through Hindenburg Line.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Sept. 28.—Allied troops began an attack on the front north of Ypres to-day and the advance at some points has been more than two and a half miles. The attack is being made by the Belgian army and is on a larger part of the front south from the North Sea. One thousand prisoners already have been counted. Heavy fighting is taking place between Dixmude and Ypres and the battle is severe in the Houthulst Forest, north of Ypres.

The British advance on Cambrai was continued to-day and satisfactory progress was reported by Field Marshal Haig on the whole battle front. The fighting continued throughout yesterday and last night.

The second British army commenced operations in Flanders this morning, in conjunction with the Belgian army, the statement said. (This may indicate the long expected offensive in Flanders.)

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, Sept. 28.—French troops have entered Somme-Py, an important railway point on the Champagne front north of Souain, it is announced here. Reports from the battle field indicate that the battle coninues favourably for the Allies.

At 5.30 o'clock this morning French troops continued the attack and took possession of the village of Somme-Py. They also captured the heights north of Fontaine-En-Dormoise. We took additional prisoners and captured several guns. The battle continues. Between the Ailette and the Aisne the pressure of the French troops continued last night and this morning. North-east of Sancy in an operation we gained some ground and captured one hun-

Bulgarian Bid for Peace Causes Very Little Surprise

Bulgaria is Tired of Her Seven Years Fighting in This and in Previous War—Bulgaria Feared That Turkey Would Beat Her to This Step—Must Present Request to the British Lines.

PARLEY MAY HAVE CHANCE FOR SUCCESS

(United Press.)
(By John De Gandt.)

PARIS, Sept. 28.—High government circles in Paris expressed no surprise to-day at the Bulgarian bid for peace. To the United Press comes information that a request for an armistice came from these facts.

'Bulgaria is tired of her seven years of fighting. There is much discontent against her allies.

"The parley might have a chance for sucess if Bulgaria entirely trusts to the Allies."

There is little likelihood that the Entente will handle the situation with bad feeling toward the Bulgarian people themselves, but Bulgaria must renounce her exaggerated ambitions. "Peace is only possible in accordance with the already well known Allied conditions." Bulgaria feared that Turkey would beat her to this step and therefore acted quickly in her own interests. "There is every reason to believe that Turkey is tempted to make a similar offer."

An armistice to the hard pressed Bulgarians fleeing before the Allied forces in Macedonia has been refused by Gen. D'Esperay, who commands the French forces in the Balkans, but he has agreed to meet some representative of Bulgaria if the flag of truce and a request for an armistice are carried to the British lines.

A Vain Boast.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 28.— "There is no reason to give up the game in Bulgaria," declared Admiral Von Hintze, German Foreign Minister, in an address to the Main committee of the Reichstag, according to despatches received heer to-day.

Parliament Approves.

(Special to The Examiner.)

THE HAGUE, Sept. 28.—The Bulgarian Parliament has approved Premier Malinoff's request for an armistice, and delegates are now en route to the frontier, according to despatch received here to-day.

Foreign Minister Von Hintze declared that the Bulgarian delegates were still in Sofia on Thursday, despite press reports they had left for Salonika on Wednesday.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—An official Bulgarian statement admits that Bulgaria has initiated a proposition for obtaining an armistice and peace.

HEAVY RAINS SET IN THE WEST

American Field Artillery is Bravely Struggling to Keep Pace With Infantry on the Western Front.

ATTACK CONTINUES

By Fred. S. Ferguson—United Press.

WITH THE AMERICANS WEST OF VERDUN, Sept. 28.—The Franco-American attack in the Champagne-Argonne region is continuing. Heavy rains have turned the roads, churned by shell fire, into almost impassable bogs, but the American field artillery is bravely struggling to keep pace with the infantry. Even heavy guns are being moved slowly forward, although with difficulty.

Masses of enemy infantry were reported in the woods near Clerges yesterday, and an artillery barrage was laid down against the centre of our new front line, but no counter attack developed. The surprise element contributing to the success of the Franco-American offensive is emphasized by the identification of German divisions, which makes apparent the fact that the enemy was using the region from the Argonne Forest to the Meuse as a rest sector. They had no reserves in any sufficient number in the rear, although there were heavy forces further south in Lorraine. Prisoners have been taken from 15 divisions, including one of the guards. One of the best Boche armies has just arrived in this region after two weeks' hard fighting in the vicinity of Laon. This is the same army which was thrown into the Belleau Wood region in an attempt to check the Americans in the Marne district. One of the reserve divisions identified came from the Soissons front.

BIG GUANO DEPOSITS

VALUABLE FERTILIZER TO BE DEVELOPED BY GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—Guano deposits in Canada of valuable use as fertilizers are hereafter to be reserved and developed by the Government. At Pelican Island, Alta., one deposit is valued at upwards of a million dollars, and others are located in the far north. The fertilizer has been largely imported from Peru heretofore, but the domestic industry is now to be fully developed.

Serbian Troops Continue Their Flanking Movement

Allies Are Making Rapid Advance on the Macedonia Front—Serbians Have Entered Veles.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

LONDON, Sept. 28. — Serbian troops, continuing their eastward flanking movement, have passed Kochane (15 miles south-east of Stroumitza), it was officially announced in the Serbian War Office statement received to-day.

The capture of Veles, from which the Serbs are pushing northward toward Uskub, was officialy confirmed. "We are now in Badevisto, and have advanced beyond Kochane," the communique said. "We have entered Veles and advance towards Uskub has been resumed."

Veles Captured.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The city and fortress of Veles, one of the important bases of the Bulgarian forces in Southern Serbia on the Vardar River, has been captured by Serbian troops. The Serbian forces are pushing on from Veles toward Uskub. The troops defending Veles were taken prisoner.

CANADIANS ARE EIN ACTION

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(Official) — Canadian troops pushed through Haynecourt and have reached the Douai-Cambrai Road.

British forces have begun operations in Flanderh in conjunction with the Belgian army. Along the whole battle front before Cambrai operations were progressing satisfactorily this morning.

The British forces resumed the battre before Cambrai at daybreak today. They are reported to have captured the villages of Fontaine-Notre-Dame, Cantaing, Noyelles and Sailq.

The Statement Says.

Troops of the 6th and 17th corps continued to make good progress on the front between Flesqueires Ridge and Bourlon Heights. The Canadian division, passing beyond Mayneccurt, reached the Douai-Cambrai Road at nightfall. The eleventh division passing through the Canadians pushed rapidly forward a distance of over two miles capturing Epinay and Oisy-Le-Verger. At the same time the 56th division, pressing northward along the canal captured over 500 prisoners in the defenses northeast of Sauchy-Sauchy. These operations have been materially helped by the admirable work of the engineers. Less than four hours from the opening of the assault, in spite of hostile shell fire, they successfully threw across the Canal Du Nord a number of brodges capable of carrying transport, thus permitting our advance to be continued without check.

STRENGTHEN THE RESERVES

Foch says everything depends on ample preserves; so does Haig; so does Pershing! They mean military reserves, but there are other reserves just as important. These must be provided by the Home Guard—financial reserves, of course.

If Canadians do not pile up financial reserves now, there will be no real Victory for Canada. Peace will find her in as great peril in one way as war placed her in another.

Who is to provide these reserves? YOU. You are in the Home Guard. You are probably making better wages or bigger profits than you ever did in your life. If you waste your pay this week, when you could save, you are exhausting the reserves. Begin to save to-day, if you have not started already. All the reserves will be needed in the final drive. Save!

A Drowning In Anstruther

Mr. Zack Tucker Took a Weak Spell and Fell Out of a Boat, With Fatal Results.

A drowning fatality occurred at Big Serpentine Lake in Anstruther Township yesterday afternoon resulting in the death of Mr. Zack Tucker. The deceased in company with his niece was out on the lake in a boat when he took a weak spell He fell out of the boat into about 30 feet of water and never came to the surface. His body has not yet been recovered.

The deceased was a man of 54 years of age and was a pioneer in that part of the country. His brother William, was Reeve of Burleigh and Apsley for some years. Another brother Esau, is a farmer in the same neighborhood.

Mr. Tucker had an accident some years ago which left his heart in a very weak condition. He leaves a wife and several children, one of whom, Dave, is with the Canadians in France. Mrs. David Miller of Smith Township is a sister. He has two nieces in town, Miss Kate Tucker and Miss Annie Tucker

About 6 years ago Mr. Tucker kept the hotel at Apsley but later moved back to the farm which is about 45 miles from Peterboro.

A BIG SCOW LOAD OF WOOD

Captain White has just arrived in the city with the Naiad. He has on board 125 cords of wood for the Peterboro Planing Mills, the biggest load of wood that ever came through the canal. The wood was obtained in Deer Bay.

CAMBRAI IS LAID OPEN

The Town Can be Occupied Any Time the British See Fit—The Chief Features of Yesterday's Attack.

GROUND MINED

(United Press Service.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 28.—Cambrai has been laid open to capture by the British, where and when the British see fit.

It is unlikely, however, that Cambrai will be taken by a precipitate rush, inasmuch as it is known that the Germans have mined two great tunnels within the city.

Yesterday afternoon Iwas able to follow the victorious British army well beyond the Canal Du Nord to the heights beyond overlokoing Boulon Wood, notwithstanding that in the morning the Germans held the ground on this side of the Canal. This fact is remarkable as, ordinarily ground over which the enemy has just retreated is distinctly unsafe. The Germans always make a practice of covering aproaches to new positions with shell fire, rendering the work of bringing up men and material almost as dangerous as front line fighting. It was not so yesterday. I spent two hours in absolute quietude so far as the enemy was concerned. Only the British guns shattered the atmosphere. Many of these, including advanced field guns, were far behind the points reached by the infantry. The number of those firing was lessened by the fact that many were being drawn forward in an effort to keep in touch with the withdrawing Germans.

Repaired Bridges.

The roads and fields swarmed with British contingents coming up to the front. There was practically no fire to disturb them as they repaired the canal bridges destroyed by the Germans, or built new roads around giant craters in the main road, where the enemy exploded mines as he retreated.

Not until the end of twenty-four hours did the German guns show signs of renewed activity, dropping high velocity shells here and there in the open fields, seeking out the British field guns which were methodically pouring out a harassing fire on the line beyond Cambrai. British shells were not disturbing the city, which was plainly visible. Apparently, it had been little damaged by either friend or foe.

To the right, on the horizons, villages could be seen burning—doubtless the work of the Germans, since no British guns had been turned on them.

The canal itself, and its surroundings, made clear why it was regarded as a critical point in yesterday's operations, yeth made it harder to understand how the Britsih swept across it as fast as they did. Its steep smooth sides offered little hold for the Canadians and others who had

A Shortage of Ford Coupelets and Sedan Models

"There will be no more Ford Coupelets and Sedans for delivery to dealers after the next 30 or 60 days."

The above announcement has just been received by the Duffus Garage from the Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited. The limited number known to be held in stock of these two Ford models, increases the shortage perceptibly and the few left will likely be divided among the city dealers, as the demand in country agencies is not so great.

There will, therefore, be no more of these two models built until after the war is over, so that now is the time for everyone desiring a Coupelet or Sedan to have their orders booked. The sales of these models in Peterborough so far have been rather limited, but Mr. Duffus of the Duffus Garage, has ventured to speak in advance for a good-sized allotment as his share of the present stocks for his Peterborough branch. His announcement appears in to-day's issue.

Arrangements Completed for Opening of Evangelistic Campaign

Dr. Honeywell and His Party Arrived in the City Yesterday Afternoon.

CHOIR REHEARSED

So energetically have the committees that have been in charge of the arrangements for the Dr. Honeywell Evangelistic Campaign, which opens in the Brock street rink to-morrow evening, been looking after their duties that to-day everything was in good shape for the opening meeting to-morrow night. Dr. Honeywell arrived in the city from Ottawa yesterday afternoon. The members of Dr. Honeywell's party are now all here.

The first big rehearsal of the choir under Mr. William S. Dixon, was held last evening in the Brock street rink. The seats on the large platform were practically all filled by members of the choirs of most of the Protestant churches of the city as well as by many other voluntary assistants. Mr. Dixon opened the practice with the striking words, "I love the Lord Jesus with all my heart!" and during the evening again and again impressed on the members of the choir that his desire was that the song service should be used by God throughout the campaign in ways so wonderful none present could estimate their full value. He asked the members of the choir to put God to the test in faith that God will work a great blessing through the campaign. He impressed on all present that he hoped that they would be faithful in their attendance and look on their service as an offering to God.

The Brock street rink will be comfortably heated for the occasion.

ANNUAL RALLY AT MURRAY STREET CHURCH

Murray Street Baptist Church Sunday School will hold its annual rally to-morrow at 3 p.m. A most interesting programme has been prepared and all friends of the Sunday School are cordially invited to attend. Those taking part in the service will be Rev. Mr. Mallott, of Trinity Methodist Church, and Mr. A. T. Madill, of the Normall School. There will be special music by the Primary Division, and a solo by Miss Charlotte Thompson, the youngest vocal pupil of Mr. John Allan.

"If Only the Sweet Moments Could Last"

There were times, in Ruth and Brian's married life, when they seemed perfectly compatible, when their companionship was complete.

Then the storm clouds would come again, and the period of happiness would be over; once more they would find themselves quarreling over trifles and jarring on each other's nerves.

At these tempestuous periods, Ruth would wonder if they had not made a mistake in marrying each other. Brian, too, had these misgivings in regard to the suitability of their marriage.

But wait? Does the fact that there were sunny periods at all, leave just the possibility that there might be sunshine all the time, under the right conditions? Of course it does. And do the right conditions ever come?

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Dixon, the Honeywell Evangelistic party, have had a wide experience in the conduct of musical and chorus work under several well known evangelists in the United States as well as in Canada. He is a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. Mrs. Dixon has had special success in women and children's work, and had four years' experience as a public school teacher. She is also a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute.

A NEW RUSSIAN ARMY.

That Germany will soon have the "eastern front" to deal with again is the effect the meaning of the announcement made public by the Russian Embassy at Washington, of the organization by members of the National Constituent Assembly of a Russian provisional government which is loyal to the allies, rejects the Brest-Litovsk treaty and is preparing, in co-operation with the Czecho-Slovaks, to carry on the war against the Bolsheviki and the Germans. Simultaneously with this announcement, which ranks as a splendid news, there is the further welcome intelligence that the Omsk government has succeeded in mobilizing two classes of soldiers, and that there are now with the National colors more than 200,000 men. It is expected that by next spring an army of more than a million well trained Russians will be available to assist the allies in restoring the Russian front.

HELP THE HUTS AND HIT THE HUN.

Anything that tends to increase the efficiency and improve the morale of the Canadian troops at the front is directly helping to hit the Hun. Therefore it is of the greatest importance that there should be a ready and hearty response to the Knights of Columbus appeal for funds next week to establish army huts among the Canadian troops in France. The project, enthusiastically endorsed by the War Veterans, who recognize how necessary and desirable are such sources of comfort for our fighting forces, means much to the Canadians at the front. The extent of the work to be carried on depends upon the support of the people at home; if those far from the firing line and living in comfort and ease realize their responsibility and give accordingly, there are unlimited possibilities before the Knights of Columbus' plan. Peterborough's campaign opens on Monday, and the local committees are organized and ready for the big drive. The success of the local campagn depends upon the people of Peterborough. There is no question about the merit of the cause, because it is an indisputable fact that too much cannot be done to bring comfort and cheer into the lives of those gallant lads who are living amid conditions of hardship and suffering and who are every hour facing death that the loved ones at home may be safe.

Peterborough's soldiers at the front need the Army Huts; Peterborough has too deep a sense of gratitude to allow them to go without anything they need. For those two reasons, as well as for a multitude of others, the Examiner confidently looks forward to a splendid contribution from this city for the Knights of Columbus' war work.

Our armies everywhere are attacking and winning; surely the people at home are not going to falter when they are called upon to back up these victorious efforts.

HELP THE HUTS AND HIT THE HUN.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY.

Peterborough, in common with other Ontario municipalities will observe Wednesday, October 9th, the date named by the Lieutenant Governor's proclamation as Fire Prevention Day and the Fire, Water and Light committee of the City Council have made the preliminary arrangements for the proper observance of the day. It is to be sincerely hoped that every citizen in Peterborough will enter heartily into the spirit of the occasion and do everything in his or her part to see that there is an improvment in conditions locally. Every citizen should join in this work. Hand in hand with fire prevention goes cleanliness. If Peterboro is made clean and attractive a very considerable source of fire danger will have been removed. Hundreds of fires are directly due to the accumulation of rubbish in the house or around the premises and a general clean-up, might prevent a fire that would prove disastrous to a large section of the city. In this portion of the campaign there is a part for everyone and with no consideration, whatever, to the matter of fire protection, civic pride alone, should be sufficient to insure that the city is thoroughly clean and made attractive. The need of more adequate metohd of preventing fires is unmistakably indicated by the official figures dealing with the loss from fires, the majority of which are the result of carelessness and neglect. It is a fact that in this banner province of Canada, the fire loss amounted to $6 per capita for 1916, $4 per capita in 1917 and $5.50 for the first six months of this year. These figures are truely appalling when compared with the average loss per capita in the principal countries of Europe, which amounts to only thirty-three cents. During the first half of this year there were 5,396 fires in Ontario, which did more than $7,000,000 worth of damage. The majority of these fires were due to carelessness, 3456 of them occurred in private homes, at a los of over a million dollars. 330 farm barns were destroyed entailing a loss of over $369,000. There were 16 fires in mercantile establishments; the damage amounting to over one and three-quarter million dollars and 261 in industrial plants, where the damage amounted to $2,500,000.

A portion of Sir John Henrie's proclamation, which will be read in all the schools on Fire Prevention Day, sets forth the objects of the occasion in the following terms:

Therefore, believing that the loss can be minimized only by awakening in the public mind a universal watchfulness against carelessness, accumulation of rubbish and insanitary conditions, arson and the treachery of those who, living and prospering in this land, would strike secretly for the aid of a government with which we are at war, and because of this great need and in order to arouse a sense of watchfulness, carefulness and cleanliness and to create a great personal reponsibility in reducing the number of preventable fires.

We have though fit, by and with the advice of Our Executive Council for Our Province of Ontario, to name and we do hereby name Wednesday, the ninth day of October, 1918, as Fire Prevention Day.

And we do hereby urge that on this day throughout Our Province of Ontario, attention be called in schools and public places to the conditions that exist and to the need of immediate action and co-operation on the part of everyone, and special exercises, addresses and other means be employed to impress the public mind lessons in Fire Prevention.

It is hereby further urged that the people generally be directed to the need of refraining from exposing themselves to unnecessary risks, which are liable to cause injury and death.

That there be a general cleaning up of rubbish and waste about all property, public and private, in order to reduce fire hazards and promote health.

That general educational exercises be held to emphasise the need for protection of life and property against loss by fire.

That all heating apparatus and electrical wiring and chimneys be inspected and repaired for use during the coming winter.

That hotels, factories, theatres and all private and public institutions, where a number of persons are housed be carefully examined for dangers which may hazard the lives of their occupants.

That wherever necessary, watchmen be engaged to guard against fire and other destructive agents that might be employed by a secret enemy.

That municipal bodies give attention to the need of building regulations, fire prevention ordinances, systematic inspection by the uniformed fire-fighting departments or other officials, and to the importance of adequate apparatus and equipment everywhere for fire-fighting purposes.

That the press lend its great power and impetus to the lesson in carefulness, by giving proper publicity to the purposes for which this day is set aside.

That fire drills be held on this day and frequently thereafter in the schools, factories and all public buildings where a greater degree of safety can thus be assured by acquainting the occupants with the best and quickest method of exit in time of danger.

That great precautionary measures be taken to prevent forest fire by settlers, campers, hunters and other, and that the law and regulation regarding the setting out of bush fires, slash and bonfires be strictly maintained so as to protect the great wealth of our timber areas.

That to insure the success of this great "Clean-Up Campaign" it will be neccessary to have the hearty and harmonious co-operation of the newspapers, leaders, (both men and women in all civic and public-spirited movements, the mayor, reeve, councillors, fire and health departments, churches, men's and women's clubs and societies, insurance interests, labor organizations, boards of trade, merchants associations, farmers' institutes, women's institutes, rotary clubs, the Ontario Fire Prevention League and the Provincial Fire Marshall and all organizations which have for their objects civil, social and industrial betterment.

Cramps and Pains In The Stomach

QUICKLY CURED BY

DR. FOWLER'S

EXTRACT OF

WILD STRAWBERRY.

Mrs. J. Fawcett, Hopewell Hill, N. B., writes: "I am writing you of my experience with Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Last summer I was taken so very sick with cramps and pains across my stomach that I sent for the doctor. He said I had summer complaint and gave me some medicine, but it did me very little good. As I was reading your B. B. B. Almanac, I saw Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry advertised, so I asked my sister to go to the store and get me a bottle, and before I had taken all of it I was a well woman, and have not had the slightest return of the trouble since. I cannot say enough for your valuable medicine, and always keep a bottle in the house."

You run absolutely no risk when you buy Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, as it has been a standard remedy on the market for the past 72 years. Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on getting it, as the cheap imitations are dangerous to your health. Price, 35c. Put up by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

Two Peterboro Girls Had a Big Time in the Flax Fields

Miss Agnes Carmichael and Miss Kathleen Dunsford Tell of Some of Their Experiences—Conditions at the Camp—Ground Was Softer to Sleep on Than a Board.

"Somewhere in France" presently an aeroplane will float on the wings of which Miss Kathleen Dunsford and Miss Agnes Carmichael are indirectly responsible by passing up a summer at some desirable resort. The two girls spent their vacation picking flax enough for the plane.

The girls were delightfully frank and eager in telling all about their summer, and when one was asked for some idea of the work, between intermittent consultations of a brand new watch she had bought with "part of her earnings," she covered practically all the summer in a few minutes.

"We went," one of the girls said "because we wanted to do something worth while towards the war. Both our brothers had offered their lives for the Empire and we thought it was up to us to do our bit, so we volunteered on the flax fields.

Perhaps you didn't know that flax pulling was practically dead in Canada until the war came, and when it was really begun the Indians did the pulling, as the white man found the work too hard. We didn't.

Worked in Mill.

Well, we arrived in Drayton one afternoon and to our disgust we found that the two hundred and thirty of us were two weeks too early as the flax was not yet ripe. This was decidedly embarassing to some of the girls, who had not provided themselves with enough money to keep going. Some went home, some others went into the flax mills, which came to the rescue with an offer of $2 a day. We tried it for one day, but that was enough. All day long we toiled and could hardly breathe for the dust of the mill. When we came out at night we felt like dust clothes and looked like millers. We decided to board till the flax was ready.

MISS AGNES CARMICHAEL,

Who spent the summer with the flax-pullers at Drayton, Ontario. She is a daughter of Dr. Carmichael, 132 Brock Street. The picture shows Miss Carmichael in the regulation costume of the flax-pullers.

Regular Uniform.

There is no way of describing what we felt like when 'the day' arrived. We donned the regulation uniform of smock, bloomers, leggings, tan boots and scout hats cheerfully and didn't take time to be embarassed, but cheerfully went into the fields to work. Flax is not picked, it is pulled, and when you strike a dry, hard field you know it. The first day we were out we pulled for six hours, the second the same, and by the time that was done we crawled to the camp bent double. Can you picture one hundred young girls all curled over like old women dragging their weary feet across the ground.

But, however tired we were in the day, and by and by we commenced working from 6 to 1.30, 4 to 6 and 8 to 10 in the moonlight (the pauses in the middle of the day because of the intense heat), we were never too exhausted for a dance at night. The kinks in our backs soon straightened out to the tune of "Over There," etc., on the piano or violin.

The Girls.

The girls were the jolliest set possible, and included splendid talent. Professional pianists, elocutionists, singers and college girls formed our party and we saw to it that none of them neglected their practice, but put it to good use. Miss Winnifred Haggis, the famous elocutionist and actress who, by the way, was a 'camp mother,' trained us and arranged a series of successful entertainments in the neighbouring towns. Two concerts at Drayton netted $345, one at Fergus $107, and at Fount Forest $120. (On these programmes Miss Agnes Carmichael's name appeared for six different items.) Wherever we went the people gave us a thoroughly good time and we appreciated it. The biggest impression we ever caused was by our 'church parade' when escorted by the boy scouts we marched in full uniform to the Methodist church at Drayton. But to get back to the work. After we pulled the flax we tied it in neat little bundles and stooked it ready for, when in about three weeks times, the manager had them gathered to be threshed at the mill. Presently the flax is spread out to rot in the sun. If you had gone to the Toronto Exhibition you would have seen the "field to wings of the aeroplane" exhibit we put on.

The Conditions.

Conditions at the camp were not all the most desirable. After a long, hot day of hard work, instead of a bath, we depended on what rain water we could catch as there was no creek and the well was dry. We cooked our own meals and we washed our own dishes, and we slept on improvised beds under the trees. Once, we ransacked an old house we were stationed at and found a bedstead. For one night only we used it as it was minus springs and mattress. The ground we found is softer than boards. Well in all we did our bit. In six days (when we were broken in) we picked an acre and earned $15 for it, and besides having an easy conscience we had a little money to the good.

The Pathetic Side.

It wouldn't do to finish without telling of the more pathetic side. In our bunch was a soldier's wife who came out with her children to earn enough to buy a set of dishes to entertain friends when her soldier husband comes home. Another family had neither home nor money and hoped to cover themselves for the winter with what they could earn from flax picking.

LEMON JUICE TAKES OFF TAN

Girls! Make bleaching lotion if skin is sunburned, tanned or freckled

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle, sunburn and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very, small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons, and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles, sunburn, windburn and tan disappear, and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

PREPARING FOR THE LAUNCHING OF THE NEW VICTORY LOAN

A presage of the new Victory Loan was conveyed in Mr. Felix Brownscombe's request to the Property Committee last night for three of the old desks that served the aldermen before the present oak furnishings were installed. The request was granted. Mr. Wallace B. Cuming, of Toronto, will be organizer for this county, and Mr. W. H. Bradburn, the chairman of the local committee.

On a motion by Alderman Edgar, seconded by Mayor Duncan, Plumbing Inspector Thompson will be asked to explain why he does not apply the smoke test in all his work.

The Peterborough Canoe Company were granted permission to build a storage shed on the east side of their property for the protection of their lumber. It will be 110 feet long, 20 feet wide and 14 feet high.

The committee decided that the garbage collectors are not expected to collect leaves except within the fire limits. It is assumed from this action that throughout the rest of the city leaves may be burned, although Fire Chief Grange was opposed to this practice a year ago.

It transpires that the city's rifles are not so valuable as might have been understood from previous reports. They are only of 22 calibre. Several of them have already been sold by the Mayor and Alderman Saunders at the flat price of $5.00.

When money is right a man should keep sober.

City to Prepare for Damage Suits by Taking Photographs of Properties on Hunter Street

Claims Are Expected on the Ground That the New Bridge Will Depreciate Values—Board of Works to Ask Council to Rescind Resolution Permitting Sewer Connection With Mount St. Joseph.

COMMITTEE'S FINANCES SOUND

Of its $23,700 appropriation, the Board of Works had spent $16,000 up to August 31st, Alderman Weir, the chairman, announced last night. The fractions of time and money expended coincide exactly. There is no fear of an overdraft by this committee from the present outlook.

Shadow of Approaching Change.

City Engineer Parsons was authorized to advertise for tenders for snow plowing during the coming winter. At Mayor Duncan's suggestion the path through King Edward Park used by De Laval employees and many other citizens will be included in the contract for that district. A new steel plow will be added to the equipment.

Photograph Hunter Street.

Alderman Dobbin's suggestion that the city obtain photographs of the property on Hunter street that will be affected by the new bridge anticipated claims for damages that will likely be entered by the owners. His proposal includes both sides of the river, and with it linked a similar suggestion that the City Engineer make a record of all the present grades on those sections of Hunter street.

To make this precautionary evidence lawyer-proof, the photographs will be attested by one or more citizens, and the Engineer's records will be adequately fortified.

Sewer Question Returns.

The question of providing a sewer connection for Mount St. Joseph was further considered, and on a motion by Alderman Edgar, seconded by Alderman Dobbin, it was decided to ask the Council to rescind the motion passed a few nights ago, and also that Rev. C. J. Phelan be asked to discuss with the Board the suggestion that the property of Mount St. Joseph be annexed to the city. It was stated that Mr. G. W. Hatton intended to apply for sewer connection to his residence on the extension of Charlotte street in North Monaghan, and that other residents would likely petition for a similar service.

Must Pay For Approaches.

Citizens requesting approaches over the sidewalk to their properties are reminded that they must be prepared to pay for the work. This will be the answer to Mr. W. M. Lang, and also to Mr. H. Rishea, who applied for an entrance to his lot on the south side of Romaine street immediately west of the G.T.R. This practice was established years ago, but it seemed to have lapsed. Its apparent desuetude, Mr. Parsons explained, was in reality the effect of a long period passing without any requests for these alterations to the sidewalks for the purposes of entrance.

Simcoe Street Drain Needed.

The Hydro-Electric Commission complained of the need of surface drainage at the east end of Simcoe street. In the spring and after heavy rains the water lies on the street and floods the gas plant and its garage.

City Engineer Parsons agreed that this request was well founded. He was asked to prepare a report for the Board as to most efficient and cheapest means of draining the street.

Will Build Crossing.

It was decided to lay a crossing to St. Vincent's Orphanage on Rubidge street.

Sherbrooke Street Problem.

Alderman Edgar prevailed upon the Board to make a boulevard on Sherbrooke stret to prevent the water from running over the sidewalk. It was decided to unload the required quantity of earth on the south side of the street from the catch basin near Penrose avenue to Mr. Rightmeyer's lot. It was suggested that a curb should be built on that street, but the boulevard must suffice for the present.

Gravel will also be spread on Patterson street to fill a hollow in front of No. 508.

Mayor Duncan urged the City Engineer to demand of the railway companies that they keep the parts of the streets between the rails in a condition satisfactory for traffic. One of the worst crossings was reported to be on Hunter street in front of the Quaker Oats Co.

Must Pay for Approach.

City Engineer Parsons reported that the approach to 417 Sheridan street is as good as can be provided without constructing a concrete apron. The house is owned by Mr. W. M. Lang and occupied by T. McNamara. The report was received.

"It's a question of money," Alderman Dobbin commented.

Mayor Duncan suggested that the Engineer inform Mr. Stewart at the corner of Hunter and Sheridan street that his present work of erecting a concrete retaining wall along Hunter street will be rendered useless by the new bridge.

"We may have to pay damages for it," the Mayor remarked.

"Why not inform him that the city will not be responsible for any work done by Mr. Stewart which the Council regards unnecessary," Alderman Edgar suggested.

"Some friend of his ought to tell him that it is useless to spend too much on this," it was remarked, but Alderman Weir remarked that Mr. Stewart should make enquiries in his own behalf. It was believed that the city would not be responsible for this present work, but the City Engineer was instructed to examine the premises and report to the committee.

Parnell Street Sidewalk.

The sidewalk on Parnell street in front of Mr. Gibson's property, No. 483, has heaved, and part of it is so low that the water flows from the street into his yard.

The City Engineer recommended that the water tabling be deepened for a distance of 75 feet east of Mr. Gibson's house. Alderman Saunders said that this improvement would overcome the difficulty.

Mr. Bagley's Porch.

Mr. J. Guise Bagley's request for permission to put up a porch to his office on Water street was considered. It was found that Mr. Bagley had already erected his porch which he said was built around the step encroaching on the sidewalk near the corner of Brock street.

Mr. Parsons stated that Mr. Bagley said he had built the porch in order to show the committee what it looked like, and that he would enter an agreement to indemnify the Council against any damage claims that might arise. On this understanding the request was granted.

Peterborough Boy Scout News

The formation of the Local Association is now an accomplished fact, and in a short time Peterborough will have several troops of Boy Scouts, judging from the enthusiasm that is rife among the boys.

The seventh consecutive wet meeting night of St. Alban's Troop did not dampen the Scouts' ardour last Wednesday, as twenty were on parade, besides three recruits and several applicants.

These last came from remote parts of the city, north and west, but as soon as troops are organized in their home district they can be transferred.

There is apparently a lack of Scoutmasters, and if there are any men in the city willing to undertake the work they should get in touch with Mr. Whiteside, Brownton P.O., the secretary of the Local Association.

Qualifications for Scoutmasters are:

1. A general knowledge of the official handbook for Canada.
2. A full appreciation of the religious and moral aim underlying the scheme of scouting.
3. Personal standing and character such as will ensure a good moral influence over the boys and sufficient steadfastness of purpose to carry out the work with energy and perseverance.
4. Age not less than twenty-one.
5. Must obtain the use of some club-room for Scout meetings.
6. Three months' probationary service with a troop.

Scoutmasters are nominated by the Local Association, and must be approved by the Provincial Council before receiving a warrant from the Chief Scout for Canada (the Governor-General).

St. Alban's Troop are now busily qualifying for their second class badges. To secure these they must pass tests in first aid, signalling, tracking, Scouts' pace, fire lighting, cooking, understand the compass, have a dollar in the bank, and one month's service as a tenderfoot.

St. Alban's Troop meet next Wednesday at 7.30 p.m. sharp at the Mission Room, next May's School, and will have a march out through Byersville and the South-End.

Skin Without Wrinkles Now Easy to Have

There's no excuse for any woman having wrinkles now. It has been found that a simple mixture of saxolite and witch hazel has a remarkable action upon the deepest wrinkles, no matter what their nature, whether caused by worry, habitual frowning, a debilitated condition or the ravages of Father Time. This harmless remedy, which anyone can easily make and use at home, acts both as an astringent and a tonic. The combined effect of tightening the skin and heightening its vitality is to immediately affect every line and wrinkle, keeping the cuticle smooth and firm as in youth.

The proportions are one ounce saxolite (powdered) to one-half pint witch hazel, ingredients which are found in every drug store. The solution should be used as a wash lotion. It is equally effective in disposing of flabbiness of cheek and neck, as well as sagging below the eyes.

Brick, terra cotta and copper are popular colors.

There are times when a dollar bill goes further than a wagon load of sympathy.

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

TELLS SAFE AND SIMPLE WAY TO TREAT AND RELIEVE AT HOME.

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phlegm drops in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easy, while the distressing head noises, headaches, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., should gradually disappear under the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, defective hearing and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which may often be overcome by this efficacious treatment. It is said that nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh and there must, therefore, be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple, harmless, home treatment.

KINMOUNT SHOOTING IS CLEARED UP

County Crown Attorney Hatton, of Peterborough has written the Lindsay Post re the accident sustained by the Williams children who reside at Kinmount. In a recent issue of the Post a despatch stated that the children were mysteriously shot. Crown Attorney Hatton writes as follows:

The Lindsay Post, Lindsay, Ont.

Dear Sir,— It is suggested by the Superintendent of the Ontario Provincial Police that publicity should be given to the supposed shooting in connection with the Williams children at or near Kinmount.

There is nothing in the statement made by the children. Investigation has been made by a representative of the Ontario Provincial Police and the little girl, Carol Williams, the elder of the two, aged eight years, after some time in questioning her, acknowledged that she had been hitting a shell with a hammer and it exploded and that was how she was hurt and not as a result of anyone shooting her. The children have evidently been left alone for hours, with no one in charge, and doubtless, as a result, this accident was caused.

It is a matter of local interest that this matter should be cleared up, as I am advised that families are nervous in regard to sending their children to school at the present time.

Citizens Get Permission to Remove Trees

Sentence was passed by the Board of works last night on a whole grove of trees, considered collectively, that have outlived their usefulness. J. E. B. Paquette desired to remove six trees from the corner of Brock and Downie street, but their removal had already been carried out. City Engineer Parsons informed Mr. Paquette that he would approve the desired thinning out, but that his report would have to be adopted by the Council. Mr. Paquette interviewed the Mayor and a majority of the members of the Council who individually gave their consent on the condition that the City Engineer was satisfied. Last night's resolution was simply a formality of sanctioning the removal that Mr. Paquette had lost no time in expediting.

Andrew Davidson was granted permission to cut down three trees on Benson avenue; James Runnett one tree on Sherbrooke street; R. W. Reid two trees at the corner of London and Water streets; D. J. McLeod one tree at 257 Lake street; A. Mesley one tree.

A PRESERVING SUGGESTION.

"In the use of honey in fruit preservation," says Prof. Inga M. K. Allison, of the Colorado Agricultural College, "from three-fourths to one cup of honey may be used instead of one cup of sugar. If corn syrup is used, one and two third cupfuls must be used to give the equivalent sweetness of a cup of sugar. The supply of both of the above substitutes is, however, limited, so the housekeeper must count on canning much of her fruit without any sugar. For the fruit that is of necessity canned in larger sections the limited sugar should be reserved.

"Rather than make up any considerable quantity of jellies using corn, syrup or honey, it would be advisable to bottle or can the fruit juices for jelly making without adding any sweetness. It is probable than in the early winter more sugar will be available, which can then be used in making up jellies."

Peterboro Bakers Make Good Use of the New War Flour

Local Doctors Report Very Little Trouble—The Allied 20 Per Cent. Substitute Will Produce a Darker Loaf.

The bakers in the city have apparently hit upon a happier method of handling the new standard flour than those in other cities from which reports are constantly coming in of stomach and intestinal trouble caused b ythe new bread.

Little Local Trouble.

Several doctors said to-day that while they have attended lately to a large number of patients suffering from such trouble, it had been attributed to the use of green tomatoes and fresh fruit. One doctor only had any complaint, and he said that in his opinion the trouble had arisen from improper cooking of the new brand. He thought, however, that when the bakers become more familiar with the use of the standard flour the trouble will be eliminated.

Darker Loaf.

With the new "Allied loaf" of 20 per cent. substitutes for flour the public must be prepared for a darker loaf than before, as corn flour will most likely be substituted for the present rye substitute, and it is impossible to produce with corn flour as white bread as with rye and white flour.

Rye Flour.

Rye flour was an excellent substitute for white, but is actually higher in price, while corn flour is lower, being quoted at $5.20 against rye, which is $6.15 a bag. If left to themselves the bakers would have preferred to continue the use of rye flour, but it has been found, apparently, that there is not enough top to go around, thus compelling the use of another substitute.

YOU CAN CAN FRUIT WITHOUT SUGAR

Housewife Need No Longer Worry Over Winter Preserves.

Householders need no longer let the sugar shortage worry them. For a solution has been found to the problem and fruit can be canned to keep for at least two years without using any sugar.

Mrs. C. L. Scarlett, a Toronto woman has come forward with the bright idea and is offering her solution to distracted canners who have been worrying for the past week about their peaches, pears and plums. For however can they can when there is so little sugar?

The process is to take the fruits and prepare them in the ordinary way, cutting the pears in half, if desired. The jars must of course, be sterilized. When this is done, the fruit is put into them without water or sugar, covering the jars with the glass tops with out the rubbers so that the steam from the water can get at the fruit and kill the bacteria and the spores.

A boiler can be used to receive the fruit. The bottom must be filled about three or four inches, with boiling water. A latticed frame of wood or wire must be set in the boiler for the jars to stand on. When the water has boiled below the jars for 45 minutes the jars can be removed. Of course the fruit will have sunken in its own juice, which makes it necessary for the housewife to take the fruit from one jar to another until they are filled. Then the rubbers must be put on and the tops screwed down tightly and set away for winter use. When taken out the fruit is as good as when it entered the jars and then the sugar can be added.

Why not call them hay widows? Hay is grass with the greenness sweezed out.

FORMER PETERBORO BOY WELCOMED BACK

Son of Mr. William Taylor of This City Occupies Pulpit of Rochester Church.

The following is taken from the Rochester Bulletin of Rochester, Minnesota and refers to Herbert Taylor, an old Peterboro boy. He is the son of Mr. William Taylor of 279 Sherbrooke St. City.

Rev. Herbert Taylor, D. D., and family were made to feel at home by the people of the Presbyterian church and pastors of the city. A reception was accorded the new minister in the church parlors, Friday evening. Addresses of welcome were made by Rev. B. M. Southgate, Rev. C. E. Burgess, Rev. Robert A. McMullen, Dr. I. B. Wood, representing the churches of the city and O.M. Diehl, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. They were most cordial in their greetings and gave some advice and information as to the character of the audiences which distinguished Rochester churches.

Dr. A. H. Logan presided and introduced the speakers who had been selected to honor the occasion. The church parlors were decorated with astors and patriotic colors

Vocal selection were sung by Miss Ruth Darrow and much appreciated by her auditors, for she has a charming voice of much volume and sweetness. During the hour of sociability which followed the formal program, coffee and wafers were served, Mrs. J. T. Collin and Mrs. S. C. Furlow presiding at the tables.

Though Mr. M. Taylor has been in Rochester for several months, he has never been formally presented to the congregation, he has become a part of the church life and has taken up the work with vigor He is an earnest thoughtful preacher, well endowed mentally and the Presbyterians feel that last night's reception was a happy starting point for a winter of renewed activity —Rochester Daily Bulletin, September 20 th

Socks Sent Overseas by Peterboro Chapter

Letters of Acknowledgment Received From Peterboro Soldiers

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Regiment Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held in the Green-Room of the Y.W.C.A., with the Regent, Mrs. J. H. Eastwood, in the chair.

A donation of $50 was made towards the Christmas Pudding Fund for Canadian soldiers, and a grant of $50 and 150 pairs of socks was made to the Navy League.

The Chapter proposes holding a rummage sale, the date of which will be announced later.

The meeting was addressed by Mrs. Birdsall, Vice-Regent of the 40th Northumberland Regiment Chapter; Mrs. Bruce, National Treasurer, I.O.D.E., and Miss Constance Boulton. Major the Rev. Canon Davidson also spoke a few words of encouragement and appreciation.

The following is the knitting report:

Food Board Flashes

"The Food Board asks us to use white corn syrup, and we cannot get it anywhere," bemoaned an energetic housewife, who is always up to the latest tip in food conservation.

How many women are asking for white corn syrup? It is on the general retail market, and if a dealer does not handle it the reason probably is that housekeepers have not yet created the demand.

It is an excellent substitute for sugar, and different brands can be had, put up in 2-pound tins at 30 cents, 5-pound tins at 60 cents, and 10-pound tins at $1.15. Ask your grocer for it. If he hasn't white corn syrup in stock, it is time he secured some.

Joseph Scriven's Grave in Monaghan

(Toronto Globe)

The story of the unmarked grave of Joseph Scriven has touched responsive chords. Few Canadians remembered or had known that the man who put on the lips of millions, the hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," lived, died and was buried in this province. He went obscurely through the world, and sleeps obscurely in the corner of a field in the quiet Ontario countryside. "A heart once pregnant with celestial fire" has mouldered there for many years, little noted. Joseph was unconscious that he had "waked to ecstacy the living lyre." He heard few echoes of it in his lifetime, and would have blushed to find its fame. The neglect of his memory is a reproach to Canadians, but there is a promise it will be removed. The Globe publishes with pleasure this letter addressed to it by Commissioner W. J. Richards of the Salvation Army:

Having read your recent editorial on the late Joseph Scriven, and a the letter of Mr. L. F. Clarry in yo issue of this morning, I have be much moved.

In common with the rest of Chri endom, the Salvation Army owes great debt to the writer of "What Friend We have in Jesus," so gre indeed, that the organization wou consider it an honor to be allowed take upon itself the whole cost of pu ing and keeping his resting pla in order.

We feel, however that much as would like to make this small ac nowledgement of our debt, we migh in so doing appear to be arrogati to ourselves a duty which all Chr tian churches feel they should sha We beg, however to be permitte to offer $50 as a contribution to on the purpose indicated

This is a challenge which the chu ches will undoubtedly take up. T lowly spot where Joseph Scriven li may yet be a shrine to which nu erous pilgrimages will be made.

THE BUSINESS WOMAN

To-day more than ever before, is woman's opportunity. Many new occupations are now opened to her, which before the war she was deemed unfitted to fill. And truth to tell she has risen to the opportunity and now shares many business responsibilities in former times confined to men. But as women are subject to more fluctuations of health than men, many will be handicapped early, if they regard their health requirements too lightly.

The nervous strain, long hours and prolonged mental or physical fatigue thin the blood and weaken the nerves. Such conditions as women are now called upon to endure can only be endured by a full blooded constitution. This is as true for men as for women, only weaker women suffer soonest. The woman worker in any line requires her blood replenished frequently. She needs new, rich blood to keep her health under the trying conditions of business life, and to fortify her system against the effects of overwork. This applies also to the woman in the home, who, perhaps, has more worries and anxieties than usual. So let all girls and women take heed and renew their blood promptly at the first approach of pallor, lack of appetite, headache or backache. This can be best and most effectively accomplished by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which make new, rich blood and thus help womankind so perfectly. No woman need fear failure of health if they take these pills occasionally to keep them well, or give them a fair trial if they find themselves run down.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—The real test of anything is accomplishment. Making elaborate plans doesn't count unless we carry them out. The profession we don't live up to is to much wasted breath.

The good resolutions we throw overboard the next day might as well never have been made. The place we mean to visit will always be on the other side of the hill, unless we walk as well as talk.

The prodigal would have died of starvation in the far country had he contented himself with the noble resolve, I will arise and go to my Father. What gives a happy ending to an otherwise sad story is the fact that the poor fugitive suited the action to the word and arose and came to his Father.

I always intended to be a Christian some time, a tottering old man once confessed to the minister who was visiting him. I thought a great deal about such matters when I was younger; and Parkinson and I we clerked in the same store and roomed together. Parkinson and I used to talk it over, and once we had the day set when we'd go and make a public profession of Christ. Parkinson did go, but I dropped out at the last minute. I thought I'd wait till the next Communion, and maybe I'd see some points a little more clearly than I did then. Of course there was another putting off, and another, and another.

Now I can't seem to make myself feel the slightest interest in the subject one way or another. I could therefore through the form of joining the Church any day, but my heart wouldn't be in it. I've waited till it's too late.

The pathetic words serve to illustrate how differently the story of the prodigal might have turned out if he had stopped with the mere resolution to go back home. The father's love would have been just the same. There would have been no slackening in his willingness to forgive and forget, but there would have been no welcoming embrace, no kiss of reconciliation, no joyful feast.

To-day if you will hear his voice harden not your heart is the voice of each of us.

And the spirit and the bride say come, and let him that heareth say come, and let him that is athirst come, and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.—Revelations xxii. 17. The last invitation of that wonderful book of invitations.

Interesting Entertainment Held in Knox Church School Hall

Clever Programme Was Provided Under the Direction of Mrs. Alice Roger-Collins.

Knox Sunday School Hall was crowded last evening, when a clever programme, arranged under the direction of Mrs. Alice Roger-Collins, Mount Forest, was presented. The funds will be devoted to the support of prisoners of war.

The opening scene was particularly pleasing. Five pretty girls, dressed in the costume of the Allied countries, made a striking tableau, while Mrs. Yale, as a Red Cross nurse, and Miss Winnifred Parker, as Peace, gave appropriate recitations. The girls in the tableau were: Britannia, Miss Eva Clarke; America, Ruby Carr; France, Ethel Buckham; Italy, Helen Waterman; Belgium, Lucy Ego. Following this, Earl Waterman, a tiny boy, dressed as Chanticleer, sang "Cock-a-Doodle-doo," an item which delighted the audience, both by his voice and grotesque actions. Miss Caroline Littlefield was repeatedly encored for her famous interprative dance, "The Spirit of France."

The Play.

A clever little playlet, in which two elderly spinsters, Angeline Brown (Ralph Hillier) and Arabella Brown (Mrs. Angus Smith), mistaking a box delivered at their door for an infernal machine, drown it in a bath tub, only to finally discover it to be their new bonnets, was delightfully received, the wit and humour appealing to young and old alike.

A Jaunty Sailor.

The programme was concluded by a charming chorus, led by Master Billie Collins, in a song recently composed by Mrs. Collins. The catchy music and clever work of the song made it an instant favourite, carried away by the audience, who hummed or whistled the fascinating air on their home journey.

Allied Troops Begin

dred and fifty prisoners, including four officers. A German counter attack north of Allemant was checked completely. More to the south the French penetrated the ravine between Jouy and Aszy and captured these two villages.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(Official.) — Prisoners to the number of ten thousand have been captured by the British in their offensive in the Cambrai area, Field Marshal Haig announced, and two hundred guns were taken by the British forces.

The British have captured the towns of Epinoy and Oizy-Le-Verger. The British pressed their attacks yesterday without a moment's let up until a late hour, and in the evening had accentuated notably their progress in the northern portion of the battle field.

HAVE BROKEN THROUGH.

Special to Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 28. — The Americans have broken through the subsidiary defences behind the Hindenburg line on the ten mile front between Dannevoux and Eclis Fontaine northwest of Verdun, according to battle-front despatches received here to-day.

Between Mantillois and Montblainville (a front of about ten miles) the Americans are within a mile of the heads of the enemy's three standard guage railways. They have captured scores of miles of light railways.

Danvoux is near the west bank of the Meuse, fifteen miles north and west of Verdun. Eclis Fontaine is three miles and a half north of Varennes and an equal distance west of Mont Faucon. Nantillois is a mile and a half north of Mont Faucon. Mont Blainville is a mile and a half northwest of Varennes.

HEAVY WEATHER.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH AMERICAN ARMY, Sept. 28. —(By Associated Press.)— Thick clouds and ground mists again hampered the airmen for observation today in the area of the operation now in progress. The conditions, however, did not entirely hinder operations by the pursuit planes of the American forces.

With their backs to the outer edge of the Brunsilde line the Germans today were fighting desperately in an encounter to-day. The Germans were increasing the volume of their fire and indicating anew their determination to resist to the utmost. The line fought for runs through the northern Argonne woods and eastward along a line paralleling the Epinville-Mont Faucon raod to a point near Ivoiey, and thence north-east. The Germans are massed in the Cierges Woods and in the Emont Woods. The Americans are using their artillery freely to break up the enemy dispositions. The eGrmans are depending upon machine gun fire at every advanced point in their effort to check the Americans.

PROPAGANDA SENT HOME BY PETERBORO BOY

Gunner Sidney Armstrong Secures Some Interesting Literature.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Armstrong, 235 Margaret avenue, have received some British propaganda which was dropped on the German lines by British aviators. They were found on the battle field and sent home by Gunner Sidney Armstrong. One sheet is headed, "On the Kaiser's Birthday."

Comrades.—Surrender whenever it is possible. The war may last ten years yet. You have nothing to gain and everything to lose.

Secondly—Don't believe what your officers tell you. We won't devour you. Any battalion or unit to whom you surrender will conduct you safely behind the lines.

Thirdly,—We treat the Germans well. We treat you like our officers and non-commissioned officers are treated.

Fourth.—Don't fight and die for the Hohenzollerns or the other little kinglets. They won't thank you.

The other sheet is headed the "German Daily Review," and contains extracts from the Socialist Arbeiter Zeitung newspaper and the 'Vorwartz' of the Junker party, showing the wide dievrgence of views which hold away in their own country. One extract from the Centrist organ, "Die Zeit" tells of the ravages of disease in Berlin. Two hundred cases of diphtheria and seventy-five cases of scarlet fever have so far been reported to the Imperial High 'Kommandatur.'

A German field card was also sent by Gunner Armstrong and they are very similar to the well known British field card. There is also a German tag, which is attached to the wounded to show the nature of their wounds.

DRUID MONUMENT GOES TO GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—Stonehenge, the world famous Druid monument, which has always been in the hands of private owners, has been presented to the British nation by C. H. E. Chubb, who purchased it on September 21, 1915.

The Government has accepted the gift and will henceforth be responsible for its preservation.

The announcement has been received with the greatest satisfaction for it allays the fear that the monument some day might come into possession of an unappreciative owner, who would allow it to be destroyed or removed.

Cambrai Laid Open

the job of clambering in and out. Yet somehow, they managed to do it under fire from machine guns planted all along the ridges overlooking it, notwithstanding that the element of surprise had been eliminated by the time they reached the canal.

A Stronghold.

It was first necessary to rush down 300 yards of slope and smother the fire of German outposts on this side of the canal. Just beside the main road, a battered brickyard with kilns forming natural dugouts, afforded the Germans a stronghold. But they were only utilized until it became aparent that the British rush could not be checked. Then the Boches cleared out, taking many machine guns with them.

Examination of the kilns, as well as the surrounding emplacements, showed the Germans had carried away practically all the material.

The same was true of other side of the canal where remarkable tunnels found in the ridges among the bank. idges on either side of the road hide machine guns to sweep the approaching British also at will, but when they saw they could not halt the oncomers the machine gunners wilted and fled taking their guns with them.

Early Reports.

Early reports announced the capture of a thousand prisoners, in connection with the taking of Flesquires and Fibecourt while another wave passing through and relieving the first took another 260 and a battery. A Britisher never thinks of Cantaing and Cambrai without remembering last November, when Bourlon Wood changed hands daily Yesterday, the Canadians, after taking Marquion, developed the wood and village of the same name with comparatively little opposition.

I do not intend to give the impression that the fight was a complete walkover. One division was compelled to fight desperately to convince the Germans that they must give up—Anneux, while another found some factory buildings 3,000 yards beyond the canal the toughest kind of problem. Stern defence was met at Beauchamp. The fact remains that the British by putting sufficient power into the blow there is need to disguise the fact that the British put tremendous power in men, guns and tanks into this blow—were able to shatter the finest land defence the Germans have been able to conceive.

Trench System.

The explanation unquestionably can be found in the human equation. In a line of prisoners five blocks, physical non descripts predominated.

I saw two who looked no more than 15 years old and the whole bunch looked far from first class fighting material.

It is difficult to judge an army by a single batch of prisoners, but there may be some significance in the fact that men whom the rapidly advancing British were sending back under escort yesterday afternon were not of the same quality as the trench system they were chosen to defend.

GIRLS! YOU CAN LIFT THEM OFF
Doesn't hurt a bit to lift your sore, touchy corns right out

A noted Cincinnati authority discovered a new ether compound and called it freezone and a quarter ounce of it now can be had for a few cents at any drug store.

You simply apply a few drops of this magic freezone upon a tender corn or painful callus and instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

You feel no pain, not a particle of soreness, either when applying freezone or afterwards, and it doesn't even irritate the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also toughened calluses, just shrivel up and lift off so easy. It is wonderful! It works like a charm. Try it!

Women should keep it on their dressers and never let a corn ache twice.

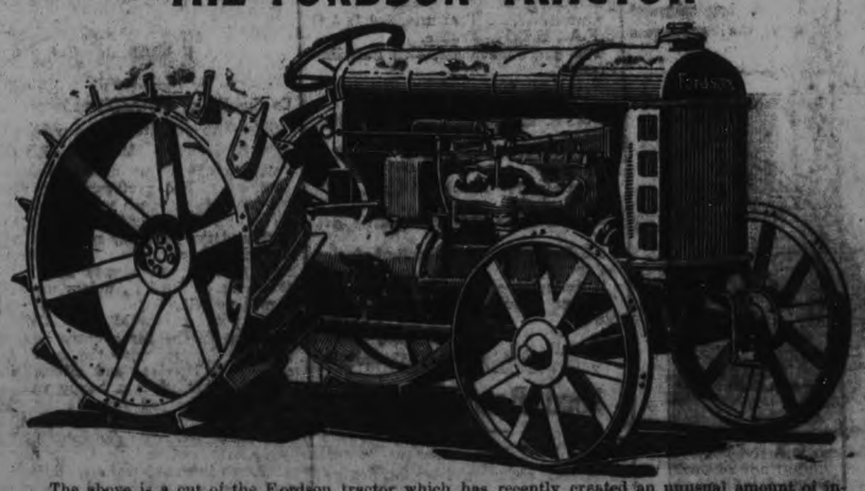
THE FORDSON TRACTOR

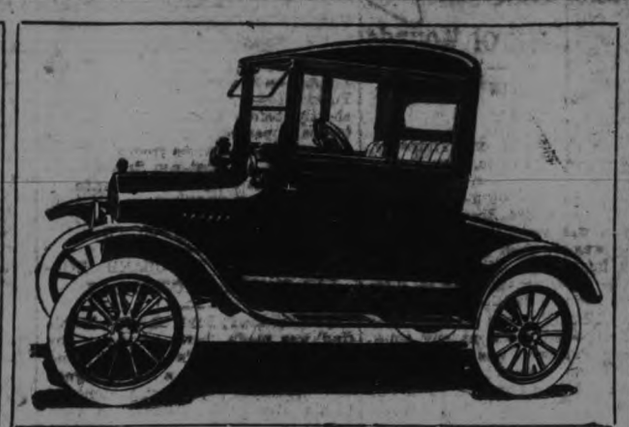


The above is a cut of the Fordson tractor which has recently created an unusual amount of interest amongst the farmers for farm work. This tractor came in for numerous favourable comments at the Ford tractor demonstration and it has recently been demonstrated on several farms by the Duffus Garage. At the present time two of these are working on the farm of Sid Bailey, one mile south of Fowler's Corners in Emily. Monday and Tuesday next on the farm of Mr. Fred Bent, immediately north of Omemee.

Yesterday there were so many Ford cars on the farm of Sid Bailey that in company with the tractors, there was as much activity as is usually seen in the yards of the Duffus Garage on a busy Saturday. Those who attended the demonstration yesterday were agreeably surprised with the performance of the Fordson Tractor, having regard to the fact that the handling of the tractor is more or less new to the operators, it is marvellous the quality of work that was accomplished. The land on the farm of Mr. Bailey has a liberal amount of stones, and it was surprising the excellent manner in which the tractor mandled the plough under such conditions and the excellent manner in which the plow did its work.

One Tractor was operated by Ex-Mayor Duffus, who, with his knowledge of motors, and being an expert plough man, having taken several prizes at ploughing matches, the first at the age of 12 years.

The Fordson tractor, which is operated almost identical to the Ford car, is remarkable for its simplicity and means of operation, and it is reported that it has ample power to do any kind of farm work. After completing the demonstration at Omemee, these tractors will be demonstrated near Peterborough for the remainder of the week. The exact location will be announced later.



Two Very Popular Ford Models

The above two closed models of Ford ve recently become very popular with the Canadia g public, so much so that a very large percentage of h have chosen either one of these models, which by actu rience have proved exceptionally comfortable and ctory for summer driving as well as being perfectly table during the cold days of Fall, Winter and Spring.

It is regrettable however that just n they have become so popular, the Ford Motor Compa e but a very limited number available until after the w e will however be glad to fill any orders accepted wi stock lasts and as a special inducement we have deci tore in our new garage free of charge from now until Spring, any Ford Sedan or Ford Coupelet purchased this Fall. This will give the owner an opportunity of driving his car during the Winter when he so desires, which should prove to be a great convenience.

The material and workmanship on these two models are equally as good as on any $4000 to $5000 car and the riding qualities are exceptionally comfortable, together with being perfectly warm in any weather, explains the reason why these two models have gained such popularity.

Now is the time to purchase for as stated above when the very limited quantity available are placed, there will be no more until after the war is over and the automobile business resumes its normal condition.

THE OLD HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

(REMINISCENSES.)

When I came to Peterboro in 1863 the bridge over the Otonabee river was a wooden structure. It was replaced by an iron bridge. The town council was in that day as they are now. Some of them were true patriots and these suggested that an iron bridge could be built right here at home and that our home industrious should be encouraged, and the town money should be spent so as to do the townspeople the most good. This proposal was adopted and the matter was placed in the hands of a Committee of Council men. This committee went over to Rochester to learn about bridges. They saw the bridge over the Erie canal and that was just the bridge. It was a cast iron arch with heavy wrought iron bow strings, many of these bridges were in use in New York State, over the Erie Canal.

The commit... came home ... result was ... arch and w... made in a ... structure wi... string and ... them, if they ... strain the bri...

On a terribl... away below ... James Stratton ... J. R. Stratton, ... just east of th... off the bridge, ... a fall and a cr... he looked back ... It was lying on ... river in broken ... tense cold had ... the bow-strings and the superstructure went down. When next day the curious people examined the broken fragments they noticed several blow-holes in the castings which had been filled up with lead. I doubt if these materially affected the strength of the bridge. It was a bad design, it was then already condemned by the Americans, and they were shortly afterwards removed from over the Erie Canal. Peterboro has not tried any home made bridges since. When the present structure was erected the contractors before handing it over to the town got half a dozen teams, loaded them heavily with field stone, and galloped them rapidly back and forth over the new bridge. It stood the test and now the city is going to build a viaduct over the river broad enough for roadways, street railway and walks and nearly on a level and at a great cost. Some say $250,000 but at present high prices more probably $400,000. The present grade on both sides of the river is no hindrance to horses, automobiles or street railway. Baltimore, San Francisco, Pittsburgh and other American cities have steeper grades which their cars mount without difficulty, and there is no reason why the present grade should not be used save only that the railway switches to some extent interrupt the traffic. At present a watchman stands on the crossing, but the interest on the cost of the proposed new structure $250,000 or more, would pay the salaries of twenty watchmen. No boats, save barges, will go higher up stream than Quaker Oats Mills and all barges for that Company can be pulled up by cable and electric power to the spot for unloading. The vast expenditure for the new viaduct is wholly unnecessary and should be avoided. The people have adopted the by-law to spend the money $250,000, for this structure, but it cannot be built for the money voted and it should not be begun until it is definitely determined that the voted money will complete it.

Who is to pay for this viaduct? Is it the Quaker Oats Company? the C.P.R.? the G.T.R.? the Street Railway Co? No, none of these, but the tax payers of Peterboro. I think the Street Railway Company should contribute and the Quaker Oats Company and both of the Railway Companies should contribute so far as they use it and not put the entire cost on the citizens.

CALLED IN EXPERTS

The Council has called in experts to revise plans, and supervise work and state terms for their services and from the reports in our local papers I would judge that at least $15,000 will be required to meet the demand of these experts in addition to the charge of the contractors.

We have here our own Mr. Rogers, civil engineer, who has done very extensive concrete work and who is well fitted to advise. The city of Dallas in Texas has completed a very extensive viaduct in concrete. Has any effort been made to learn anything from Dallas experience? Our city let a contract to build the Auburn concrete bridge and when it was partly built the contractor, Bogue, came to the council and demanded his pay. The Works Committee said to him, "My dear fellow, we are ready to pay you but would it not be well for you to finish the bridge before asking for payment?" Mr. Bogue replied, "my contract is completed." The Works Committee replied, "Mr. Bogue, the road way has to be built up, the approaches are not finished, there is no ballistrade or railing etc. and Mr. Bogue replied, "here is my contract, read it." They read it, sent for the specifications etc. the city engineer and all concerned and found that Bogue was right. The money provided by the By-law would not build the bridge so the people were humbugged and only part of the contract let to Bogue enough to eat up all the money raised under the by-law and the result was that thousands of dollars raised out of the taxes for that year were paid out by the council to complete the bridge.

Perhaps this is the first knowledge the people have recieved of this Auburn bridge transaction. Do they want any more like experiences. Before the new viaduct is built the old bridges should be removed to the Dublin street site, and it will require piers, approaches, right of way etc., and all these should be prepared before hand so that the old bridge can be taken down and removed to the new site. Has any work been done on the new bridge site? Or has anything been done to prepare for the new bridge on London street?

What is the estimate for all this work, the viaduct and the bridge on London street? The people should know all about this vast expenditure and know what the total cost is to be or is Mr. Bogue to enlighten them?

Situation in the Grocery Market

Sugar Supplies May be Easier in Ten Days.

Damage to the crop of prunes in California has been very severe, and the growers face a very serious situation, says the Canadian Grocer. In fact, the outlook from the grower to the consumer is by no means one which can be considered bright.

The Government has stopped all shipping until complete information as to the extent of the cargo damage can be reckoned. The report when available may result in the Government taking over the entire crop, or at least such a large percentage that none will be released for Canada at all. New crop prunes for Canadian consumption are a decided uncertainty in the light of existing conditions.

Sugar supplies will, it is thought, be somewhat easier in another week or ten days. Shipments now rolling will help materially. Refineries are now compelled to load 40,000-lb. cars as a minimum car shipment. Unshipped orders will be filled on this basis.

The Tea Market.

The tea market is strong for Japans and Chinas. Black continue a little quiet because of the stocks of cheap Javas in the country. Prices on Ceylon and Indian blacks are all on high basis and are likely to continue so throughout the winter.

There has been no change in prices on coffee this week. The demand continues steady, and supplies are adequate. Cocoa also holds steady. It is probable that sweetened cocoa in bulk will ere long be discontinued by the manufacturers. One large manufacturer informed Canadian Grocer that they were no longer making this line, due to the sugar situation. The demand for cocoa is picking up with the cooler weather.

The market for apples continues to be quite strong. Apples reaching the market are readily absorbed. Nova Scotia apples will likely ze on this market next month, and the arrival of these may make for easier prices.

The wet weather prevailing for the most part of this month to date has resulted in a substantial fall in supplies of potatoes reaching the market. The offerings from New Brunswick have been small because the bulk of the supplies coming forward are being bought up for shipment to the United States. Because of the temporary scarcity of potatoes existing, the market has been very strong, and prices have advanced 40c to 50c a bag of 90 pounds ex store. Tomatoes are not quite as plentiful, and have advanced.

The Hardware and Metal Markets

New Price Changes on a Number of Articles.

New prices have been announced on garden hose: These become immediately effective and apply on spring business as well. Present quotations represent a substantial advance over opening prices of last year.

Lawn goods have been revised to higher levels, a 15 per cent. increase being shown in new prices issued on hose nozzles, sprayers, sprinklers, hose clamps, hose menders and kindred lines. The question of delivery remains uncertain.

Saddlery hardware has also come in for a sharp advance, amounting to about 15 per cent. The lines affected include harness snaps, rope snaps, breast strap snaps, bridle bits, hame staples, hame clips, trace eockeyes and breast strap slides.

Wrought washers have been placed on a new selling list, and manufacturers intimate that orders placed should be specified by size of hole. The present basis provides for a stiff increase.

Heavy increases are also noted in new list prices issued on flashlights, batteries and bulbs. Chemicals, brass and tungsten are employed in the manufacture of these lines, and prices on these raw materials have reached figures which the manufacturers intimate leave them no alternative in the question of prices on the manufactured article. The scarcity of all materials and labour are also contributing factors which have combined to shove prices up from 25 per cent. to even 50 per cent. in some instances.—"Hardware and Metal."

Peterboro Golf Club Will Hold Red Cross Field Day

The directors of the Peterboro Golf Club have nominated a committee to take charge for the Red Cross field day to be held on Thanksgiving Day. Morning and afternoon golfing features will be arranged for that day. Events will be open to both ladies and gentlemen and a programme of the events will be duly published in the press. The proceeds will be entirely devoted to Red Cross purposes. A nominal entrance fee will be charged. The directors have granted permission to the members to invite their friends to the links on that day.

Flatirons will keep hot longer if you have a soapstone near the ironing board on which to rest the iron when not in use.

Bake prunes in a slow oven after they have been soaked over night. They will have a richer flavour than if stewed.

Pte. Max Patterson Died of Wounds

WAS WELL KNOWN IN PETERBORO.

Word was received on Thursday, September 26th that Pte. Max Patterson of the 20th Battalion had died in hospital. Word had been received by Mrs. W. Evans, 304 Boswell Avenue that Max was seriously ill but later a letter was received saying he was rapidly improving. Max was well known in Peterboro and had an elder brother, Norman in the service who has been ill in England for some time and is expected home at any time. Pte. Max Patterson was employed at the De Laval before enlisting. His mother resided on Cameron street but has moved to the Province of Quebec.

ROUMANIAN CROWN PRINCE PREFERS WIFE TO THRONE

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 28.—In answer to pleas that he desert his bride of humble birth, Crown Prince Charles of Roumania has replied that thrones are so unstable nowadays that he preferred the certainty of having the wife he wanted to the chance of losing the succession.

The escapade of the Crown Prince in going to Odessa and marrying Cecilie Lambring, the daughter of a major in the Roumanian army, reopens the question of the Roumanian dynastic succession. When King Ferdinand heard of the marriage he ordered that the Crown Prince be given 75 days' solitary confinement for absenting himself without leave from his garrison.

ON THEI RHONEYMOON

King Ferdinand also sent an emissary to Bender, Bessarabia, where the young couple are spending their honeymoon, with instructions to try to undo the nuptial knot but to no avial. The bride refused to part with her wedding ring, and the Crown Prince declined to leave her.

Crown Prince Charles has not yet voluntarily renounced his rights of succession and the King is reported to be very angry. The Roumanian constitution does not contain a clause barring a morganatically married Prince from succession to the throne.

A PIQUANT FEATURE

The present case has a piquant feature in that in recalls that King Ferdinand in his youth had a love affair with Helene Vacaresco, his mother's lady of honor. Premier Catargiu threatened to resign if the King did not veto the proposed union, and it came to nothing. Should Crown Prince Charles renounce his rights to succession, his brother, Nicholas would become the heir apparent. Nicholas is 15 years old and phisically weak.

There is much excited gossip in Bucharest, according to a telegraph to the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, as to what would happen in the eventuality of Queen Marie, who is strongly anti-German, becoming regent.

LIQUOR AS PICKLES

TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR HAUL AT NORTH BAY

NORTH BAY, Sept. 28.—A valuable find was made here yesterday by some of the officials of the T. and N. O. Railway, when a car consigned to a Winnipeg firm from a Montreal pickle firm was investigated and found to contain instead of pickles a cargo of liquor valued at twenty-five thousand dollars. This is one of the largest hauls yet made.

POLICEMAN INJURED MAKING AN ARREST.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 26.—Sergt. Harmon, of the city police force, had his left leg broken and Police Constable G. Ellis was bruised about the face while effecing the arrest of John Wilson, of this city, at an early hour this morning. Wilson was being arrested on a charge of stealing six bags of sugar from a G.T.R. car. The sugar was thrown out of the car and Wilson was caught near the car. In the scuffle for freedom the accused was responsible for Sergt. Harmon falling upon the track, fracturing his leg. Wilson was remanded to jail for a week, as the Crown was not prepared to proceed. Wilson is 28 years of age and unmarried.

SHORTAGE OF MEN DELAYS THRESHING

More Than Half Done in Southern Manitoba, However.

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 27.— The Manitoba Free Press publishes a report of crop conditions in Manitoba at this time of the harvest. Only a few fields of late flax and green crop on re-seeded land remain uncut in the province. Threshing is more than half done in southern Manitoba and is beginning in the north. Speaking generally, says The Free Press, the sample of wheat will be good. In many places late oats, barley and flax have been damaged by September rests, and this may affect the quality of seed oats for next spring.

The average of estimates as to yields is as follows: Wheat, 18 bushels to the acre; oats, 38 bushels to the acre; barley, 30 bushels to the acre; flax, 10 1-2 bushels to the acre; rye, 17 bushels to the acre.

There is a general shortage of men and threshing gangs everywhere are light.

Fall ploughing has begun in a few places. The weather is ideal for farm work in most parts of the province, with very little frost at night.

The Canadians Won Key to Cambrai After Quick Attack

It's Capture is Very Important—Marquion Trench System Was Almost as Powerful as the Hindenburg Line.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—The director of public information issues the following article by Roland Hill, former Canadian war correspondent:

In capturing Bourlon Village and Bourlon Wood, which presumably includes Bourlon Hill, the Canadians have gained the key to Cambrai. They are only three thousand yards from St. Oile, the western suburb of the great railway junction. If they hold on they can enfilade all the roads which run from Cambrai to the crumbled fortress villages of Fontaine and Cantaing and with these strong points which held up General Byng's tremendous attack when the Canadian cavalry got through, now taken, there is little to stop the British reaching the great railway centre with only moderate fighting, except to the St. Quentin Canal. There are no natural defences to Cambrai besides Bourlon Wood, which is a hill very similar in height, size and shape to Mount Royal at Montreal, and very few trench lines. The eastern end of the wood is a network of tunnels and cement strong points, and although the British Guards gained possession of it they were finally driven out, the Germans never counting the cost of recapture in men, well knowing its tremendous importance. We may thus expect terrific counter attacks on the Canadians now they have gained the position.

Pulling Out in Haste.

From the western end of Bourlon Wood, during the former Cambrai show, I could look down the strong Marquion line of trenches straight into Marcoing, which the Canadian cavalry brigade under Brig.-General Paterson had just captured. Through glasses we could see Hun batteries limbering up and pulling out in desperate haste from Cantaing. A big German aerodrome at Cambrai, had been set alight by the Huns, and was blazing merrily. Another big aerodrome at the Champ de Manoeuvres was also set on fire.

To have gained Bourlon in such a short fight is a marvel. It took Imperial divisions, when the enemy was disorganized by the breaking of the then much-vaunted Hindenburg system, four days to win their way up from Havrincourt and Graincourt. The Canadians have attacked from the north-west through Moeuvres and across the Nord Canal. The canal itself is a tremendous obstacle. At this part down to below Havrincourt the excavation has not been captured and it is a huge dry ravine of uneven ground at least 80 feet deep and about 100 feet across. All the bridges across have been destroyed. When we held this section of the canal last time the Canadian overseas construction corps managed to build a bridge that would take light guns across in less than five houre.

Took Vaunted Post.

To get to Bourlon Village the Canadian divisions have had to storm the Marquin trench system, almost as powerful as the Hindenburg line itself, which branches off from just east of Graincourt. And even with that won they have taken one of the German most vaunted posts in Bourlon itself. There is a long, level plain of about a thousand yards between the Marquion switch and the village. Three old quarries situated half way across give splendid shelter for a defending force and were always a noted nest for German guns.

It is likely the Canadians got through this barrier in the early morning fog. Bourlon Village is a mass of concrete and steel with tremendously strong trench systems at the western end which have been there since 1916, but were always kept in shape. I happened to see air photographs of them taken by a Canadian observer only a few weeks ago. There is a quarry on the edge of the town which held up the British in the last show for over a day. North of it is a wrecked chateau which was once German headquarters and which has elaborate underground tunnels running back into the town itself. The Cambrai railway at this end of the village runs through a deep cutting, another obstacle to attacking infanry.

The Canadians have overcome all these obstacles the line now shows and Bourlon is added to their laurels. It is quite as big an achievement as their other great successes in these happy days.

Even a man of considerable influence is apt to fall down when it comes to quieting a squalling baby.

Food Board Flashes

Every housewife should make a point of knowing prices. That is to say, she should be able to tell at a glance when they are legitimately and when illegitimately high. The lack of such accurate information can keep her from doing her duty to her family, both in the matter of nutrition and economy.

A knowledge of prices comes from careful surveillance of meat and grocery ads and from a study of market fluctuations. Clothes, ads are assiduously followed by most women. Why not food advertisements? Buying at a certain store simply because it is "convenient" is not good business, when you can get exactly the same quality of goods at a lower rate somewhere else. Pay more attention to your household shopping. Cultivate the market and encourage your dealer to handle substitutes; display food posters, and otherwise help along the cause of conservation.

To fry fish properly they should be put into boiling hot fat.

Don't Give Your Children Raw Milk

Clean Wholesome Milk

Once more, it is urged upon the part of parents, not to give their children Raw Milk, but Pure Pasteurized Milk.

The difference between Pasteurized Milk and Raw Milk is exactly the same as the difference between a soft-boiled egg and a raw egg. Who would like a swallow of SOME Raw Eggs?

PASTEURIZING MILK
Destroys the impurities in Raw Milk and leaves to the Milk all of the food qualities.

TUBERCULOUS COWS.

The extent to which tuberculosis exists in all dairy herds is much greater than is generally supposed. In one herd in the United States, in December last, 72 tuberculous cows were found in a herd of 86. This was a "model" dairy where every expense and precaution had been taken, but was not a certified herd. Our Department of Public Health veterinaries advise us that from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. of the cattle supplying milk to Toronto are tubercular.—Chas. J. Hastings, Toronto's Medical Officer of Health.

A CRIME—Dr. Murphy, of Chicago, the greatest surgeon and probably the greatest doctor in this country, declared that it is a crime to use milk raw when pasteurization makes it safe.

Covering capacity and Durability furnish the Correct Measure of Paint Cost

This White Lead is invariably used in the manufacture of B-H "English" Paints

TO arrive at true painting economy, you must base your calculations upon "how much will it cover" and "how long will it last"—rather than on "what is the price."

There is a certain retired merchant of a Western Ontario city who owns a Summer hotel in Muskoka. A friend asked him last Spring if he was contemplating repainting his hotel for this season.

"Well, no," was the reply. "I did think of giving it a coat because it is eight years since it was painted—but when I came to look it over, I found it unnecessary. You see, I used B.B. on that—so it looks almost as good as the day it was painted."

The B.B. he referred to is Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead.

This accurate report of an actual conversation is the strongest way we know of to emphasize the durability of Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead. As to its fineness, its whiteness, ask any painter of experience. They all know B.B. to be the pure article—absolutely unrivalled for covering capacity and durability—therefore, the lead to buy for true economy.

Conversation Is a Mingling of Souls When People Are Speaking Only the Plain Truth Frankly

—Says FERN HOWARD

A great part of the joy in life comes from speaking the truth.

Any restraint upon the free expression of your mind dwarfs your personality, likewise your soul.

Conversation becomes a delight when people are saying what they believe to be true. Then it is a mingling of souls; for no one is posing, and none is afraid of being seen as he really is, with all his weaknesses exposed to view.

"I know a parson who was recently asked to resign from his pulpit because of his chance remark that "Sins are but mistakes on the road to one's higher intellectual development, and should never be referred to by one's acquaintances." He is now teaching psychology and he confided in me that it was the first time, since reaching manhood, that he had been permitted to speak the truth without fear of giving offence. And that he was as "happy as a child."

Children usually speak the truth. Occasionally it is a truth that hurts, but it also invariably teaches a lesson. For instance, if one of these little ones should say to you "I don't like you," you would immediately begin to analyze in order to discover, if possible, what quality you possess that has robbed you of the love of a child. And when you do discover an unpleasant truth, correct it as soon as possible.

It is unpleasant truths that blight conversation, as they wither the beauty of the soul.

Let us retire to the seclusion of our own room and enumerate the virtues of our friends; overlook their weaknesses; remember the advice of that Great Man who said, "Ye that are without sin cast the first stone at her." Subdue your own vanity. Then you will be prepared to go forth and speak nothing but the beautiful, constructive truth.

And let us hold no speech at all with those from whom we expect unkind truths, and reserve our fearless openings of heart for those who will understand us and overlook our failings.

And then you will finally join that little group of people who stand for, and are not afraid to speak, the truth.

TALES OF THE VICTORIA CROSS

SECOND LIEUTENANT RUPERT PRINCE HALLOWES.

4th Middlesex Regiment.

(By Lieutenant J. P. Lloyd.)

While the great battle of Loos was in progress south of the La Bassee Canal, the enemy was being kept busy by less important operations at no fewer than four points between Ypres and Givenchy.

The chosen spots for these "holding" battles were Hooge, in the old cock-pit of the Ypres Salient, Bois Grenier, South of Armentieres, Neuve Chapelle and Givenchy itself.

The attack at Hooge was entrusted to General Haldane's 3rd division and the 14th division under General Couper.

The 3rd division, who advanced South of the Menin Road against Sanctuary Wood, had the advantage of knowing the ground. They had been in the sector for some time, and had taken part in the heavy fighting around Hooge in the previous July. The battle opened at 4.30 a.m., on the morning of the 25th of September, 1915, and at first our arms were everywhere successful. North of the Menin Road, Bellewaarde Farm, and the ridge on which it stood were soon in British hands, while on the right the 3rd division advanced some 600 yards towards their objectives in Sanctuary Wood. But gains in the Ypres Salient are hard to hold. It was not long before the big German guns on Passchendaele Ridge and behind Hill 60, began to speak. The Bellewaarde Ridge could not be held, and before evening our left was back once more in its own trenches. But south of the road the 3rd division clung on grimly to most of the ground they had won.

For several days a bitter struggle raged across that shell scarred waste round Sanctuary Wood. It was for his gallantry in this action during the seven days from the 25th of September to Octoerb the 1st, that an officer of the 4th Middlesex was awarded the honour of the Victoria Cross. Second Lieutenant Rupert Prince Hallowes was in command of a platoon of "B" Company. He had greatly distinguished himself earlier in the campaign, and had already won the Military Cross. On the afternoon of the 25th of September to October the 1st, was at the time holding trenches in support, was heavily shelled. Second Lieutenant Hallowes seemed always to be where the danger was greatest. He walked continually up and down his Platoon front, encouraging his men, and setting them a wonderful example of calmness and courage.

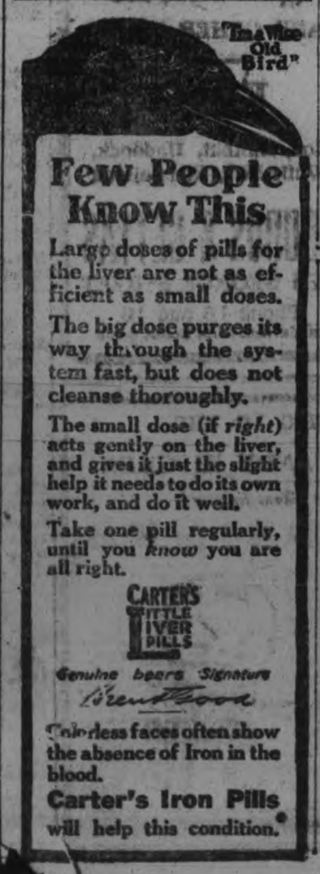
The days that followed were anxious days for the Battalion. Field gun and Howitzer, Trench Mortar, and machine gun, rained death into the ruined trenches. But none of these things could make Hallowes swerve from the path of duty. Several times, when all communications had been cut, he undertook the perilous journey to the Battalion Headquarters with information which proved of the greatest value to his side. In his regard for the safety of his men he never cared what might happen to himself. Once when he and another officer were standing close together in the trench a shell burst but a few yards away. Both officers escaped, but three men were blown to pieces, and the trench was filled in to the level of the parapet. Second Lieutenant Hallowes set to work at once with a shovel, and continued to dig until he was satisfied that none of his men were buried underneath. It was broad daylight and all the time he was in full view of the enemy who were but a short distance away.

Again, when, with a few men he was holding an advance trench fifty yards in front of our line, he saw lying out on the open ground, between himself and the enemy, several men of another regiment, who had been wounded two days earlier and had been unable to get back. Second Lieutenant Hallowes succeeded in rescuing them under a heavy fire, and refused to take cover himself until the last man had been brought in safely.

The end came on October 1st, when he was struck and mortally wounded by a fragment of a shell. He must have known that he was dying, yet, even in the last few hours of life that were left to him, he showed the same superb unselfishness that had marked his conduct all through. He forgot his own agony in his zeal for the Battalion he had served so well. As he lay there in the trench with his shattered leg, he heard them call for bombers to go up to the front. He tried to rise to fetch them himself, but death was very near, and he had not the strength. Just before he died, he said to the men who were gathered round him in the trench, "Men, if you have got to die, die like 'Die-hards.'"

A few minutes later he was dead.

It will be noticed that the last spoken words of this very gallant officer illustrated his jealous love for and pride in his Regiment: The famous "Die-hards."



Few People Know This

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

SON SHOOTS FATHER WITH 'KAMERAD PISTOL'

Trophy Weapon From the War Zone Figures in a Probably Fatal Accident.

New York, Sept 27th.—A French battlefield trophy, known among American soldiers as a "Kamerad pistol," which was brought here recently by Lieut. J. Howard Donaldson, who took it from a German officer, inflicted a probably mortal wound on the Lieutenant's father, John Donaldson, who was shot through the left lung. The shot was fired by Lieut. Donaldson's younger brother, Frank, while he was demonstrating to a relative how the Germans use the "kamerad pistols." The youth was arrested on a charge of felonious assault, but was immediately admitted to bail.

John Donaldson is a quarry owner, living at 626 Hamilton Avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I. His wife was at their farm up state at the time of the shooting. Two of the sons of the family are first lieutenants in the army, Sherman Donaldson being in the aviation branch. Frank who is a student, has been eagerly trying to gain his parent's consent to join the army.

Lieut. J. Howland Donaldson was not at his home yesterday, when Carl A. Wood of Baltimore, a cousin, visited the family and Frank offered to show Wood the trophies his brother had brought. When he came to the "kamerad pistol," he explained that the magazine was empty, many attempts having been made to fire it without success.

"I'll represent a German officer, and show you how they act after crying 'kamerad,' said he, taking a position in front of his cousin, his arms held high above his head, the weapon concealed in the right palm. "When I yell 'kamerad,' you advance as if to capture me."

Just at that moment his father appeared in the doorway. He had gone to his son's room to witness the exhibition of the trophies.

"Kamerad, kamerad," shouted Frank, and as Wood stepped forward, and Mr. Donaldson stood smiling at the scene, Frank suddenly twisted his hand, thrust his finger through the trigger guard and squeezed the trigger. A sharp report followed and Mr. Donaldson sank to the floor. Dr. R. L. McFarland of Jamaica was summoned and found the wound to be of an extremely dangerous character.

New Cases Develop Hourly in City and State.

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 26.—With more than 720 dead from influenza in Boston up to to-day, and new cases developing here and throughout the State hourly, Dr. Eugene Kelley, State Health Commissioner, this afternoon appealed for assistance from the Federal authorities in Washington.

Dr. Kelley sent an emergency appeal by long distance telephone for 500 doctors and 1,000 nurses. Tent hospitals will be erected at once at different points in the State.

It is estimated there are more than 20,000 cases of influenza in Boston and thousands of cases in other cities and towns.

All theatres, motion picture houses, dancing schools, halls and places of assembly in Boston were ordered closed, by the Emergency Health Commission here this afternoon. The order goes into effect at midnight, and will be in force until October 6 or longer, if necessary.

Churches will not be affected by the closing order because they are used only once a week, and are not considered an immediate danger to the public health.

A RENEGADE CANADIAN

"Berlin" Hockey Player Captured in France.

A letter from an Orillia soldier in France, tells of a strange experience that Quinn Butterfield had during the recent drive. A party of Germans were marching to the cages past the 40th Battery, when Quinn was surprised to hear one of them call, "Hello Butter! How's hockey?" Looking more closely, he recognized a member of the Berlin hockey team, whom he knew well. The renegade had a broad smile on his face, but got no friendly reply to his greeting. Another of the prisoners came from Chicago, and spoke English fluently. It is evident some of our hyphenated citizens have succeeded in getting "home" since the war began.—Orillia Packet.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

It's the Law

By [illegible] BAKER

(Copyright, 19[illegible] the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was Monday. Fifteen minutes more and the entire force of John Hamlin, attorney at law, would cease operations until the following red monarch of day had dived behind the western horizon and stuck its nose up out of the east again.

There was a considerable work piled up before the office force, but John Hamlin was young and had a blood-pumping [illegible] inside him that pulsated rapidly and kept time to a tune of sympathy for the human race in general. Consequently, he could not bring himself to driving tactics in his role of employer even when neglect of duties was apparent. Moreover, this same office force had been with Hamlin four and [illegible] years, and that alone spoke of [illegible] tenancy.

Neglect was [illegible]. The office force was gazing at [illegible] nothings that lingered in the outside the window. Her hand resting on the typewriter key but the deft fingers were inactive. A puzzled little frown wrinkled [illegible] head.

John Hamlin meditatively on the rubber of his watched a fly negotiate a journey the ceiling, wondered why fall and break its back, and would, and let his gaze rest on that of jet-black hair. He succeeded in chewing the pencil eraser in two, spat the amputated portion into the waste basket and resumed perusal of the brief that argued for attention against the bright August day.

"Poor Priscilla," he sighed inaudibly as he ruffled his red hair and rustled the document into a position where it shut off the view of the stenographer's back. "I work that girl to death, but I never saw her so detached before."

Priscilla had a right to be "detached." It is not often that a girl in a little town like Pellston receives two proposals from two very nice young men in one day. Then, again, one of the very nice young men was a banker's son.

Let's turn the clock back twenty-four hours and twenty-seven minutes and see how it happened. The proposal program opened at 3:18 p. m. Sunday. Priscilla remembered the exact time, because she was looking at her wrist watch while she sat under the big oak tree in the woods and listened to Cecil Mellville say: "You could make me the happiest man in the world if you would only say—" etc., etc.

It had been one of those "so sudden" affairs. Priscilla had been courted more or less consistently by Mellville for the last six months. He had been extremely nice to her, sending her flowers, bringing her confectionery, taking her to theaters and for motorcar rides and paying her other attentions; but he never had appeared to nourish any deep affection.

Like many girls, Priscilla had cherished visions of marrying wealth; but as she grew older—especially since working in J. Hamlin's office—she had abandoned all such ideas. In the attorney's files were too many histories of unhappiness in which money played a leading part. There were the written records of contented couples, suddenly become prosperous through some quirk of fortune, then—too much luxury, dissatisfaction with each other and as a result—alimony.

Backed by a reputation

Windsor Table Salt

Made in Canada

THE CANADIAN SALT CO. LIMITED

At twenty-three, working to support herself and mother, Priscilla, despite her proximity to the more sordid side of life which constantly thrust itself into J. Hamlin's office, was far from becoming cynical. She appraised money at its real worth, but was not dazzled by its glitter. She believed in love, and that is why she did not accept Cecil Mellville's proposal.

Neither did she refuse his offer of marriage. Instead, she simply said:

"I cannot tell you now. I must have time to think it over. Give me a week. I must not act hastily; it would not be best for either of us."

Priscilla knew that Jerry Hart cared for her. He had shown it more strongly each time they were together during the year that they had been friends. But Hart lacked the funds with which to finance a wooing contest against a person of Cecil Mellville's means. Also he did not have as many opportunities of seeing Priscilla for his duties as passenger brakeman on the railroad frequently kept him away from Pellston for a week or more at a time.

However, Hart had reached that stage where something was bound to happen; and it did Sunday evening. Mellville had insisted on calling on Priscilla in the evening as well as afternoon but she had declined, because she knew Jerry would be at home then after a week's absence.

Jerry led up to the subject with little skill. He would rather have fought four members of the section gang and taken a sound beating at their hands than to be obliged to go through the ordeal of "popping the question." However, after much crossing and uncrossing of his legs and adjusting his tie and running his fingers along the inside of his uncomfortable collar, he finally managed to stammer:

"Priscilla, I—I—wonder, I wonder—if—if—you—that is, do you—do you care very much for me?"

They were seated on the lounge directly beneath one of those painted fireside scenes in which a beautiful young woman and a handsome man are enveloped in a homelike glow from a grate and in each other's arms while they exchange dovelike glances of tenderness.

Jerry kept his eyes fixed on the picture and it inspired him so that he succeeded in getting through the rest of the proposal in fairly creditable fashion. He didn't even neglect the "You could make me the happiest man in the world if you would only say—" etc., etc.

This proposal had been expected by Priscilla, but she was no more prepared for a definite answer than she had been when Mellville asked the same question. She was very fond of both. Mellville, tall and dark, had a very prepossessing appearance and personality, while Hart, of light complexion and more athletic build, appeared possessed of a greater amount of resolution and a more manly character.

The clock struck 4 p. m. and brought Priscilla out of her reverie. She looked at the brief which hid John Hamilton's countenance and wondered what was going on in that keen device that served as his brain. She turned to her typewriter, rattled the keys for a moment, then reversed her position quickly and caught him in the act of staring at her. She laughed.

"Spring fever has caught me, I guess," she said. "I can't seem to concentrate on my work, and I'm about as useful to you as a piano to a deaf man without any hands."

He laid the brief on his desk.

"You need a vacation," he suggested. "I've been working you too hard. With circuit court session only two weeks off I've had to keep you busier than usual. You'd better go out and inhale some summer sunshine and forget all about this little old office for a spell."

"Orders is orders," she laughed, as he helped her into her jacket.

She went toward the door, pinning her hat in place.

"Just a minute, Priscilla," he called. "Is there something troubling you? Can't I help, if there is?"

She rattled the door knob, hesitating.

"Nope, I guess not," she answered. "Good afternoon," and the door closed behind her.

He picked up the brief and didn't notice it was upside down. He sat thinking for perhaps fifteen minutes, and might not have stirred for a full hour had not the door opened and Priscilla stepped in. She was in tears.

Hamlin leaped from his chair and escorted her to it, then stood helpless nearby, as helpless as most men are when women cry.

"I'm so miserable," she sobbed, soaking a tiny handkerchief with a torrent of salt water. "Mr. Hamlin, you're a lawyer, and you ought to be able to settle this case for me."

Hamlin drew a chair close to her, coughed very professionally and said, somewhat whimsically:

"Very well. Give me the details of the problem and I'll try to figure out a solution."

So she laid the whole affair before him, and he sat back in his chair and knitted his brow into a thoughtful frown.

"Of course, Priscilla," he said, "I'll advise you to the best of my ability; but I can't decide for you whether you'd rather be a banker's or a brakeman's wife."

He stroked his chin and looked toward the ceiling, where the lone fly was making a return trip, buzzing amicably. The lawyer bit his lip and hoped the poor fly wouldn't fall and break his back.

"You see," he went on, while the girl sobbed softly, "this puts me in a rather painful position; because—because—well, to tell the truth, Priscilla, I've learned to be rather fond of you myself during our four and a half years' association in the office, and you—you—see—"

Priscilla laughed and the tear flood was dammed.

"'Nuff said, John Hamlin," she said merrily. "Do you know, I've thought all along that I didn't want to be either a banker's or a brakeman's wife. I would much rather be a lawyer's wife."

Hamlin started so violently that he nearly fell out of his chair. The revelation was so unexpected that it upset even his practical mind. He recovered his mental equilibrium quickly, however, and, drawing his chair still closer, said softly:

"Priscilla, you could make me the happiest man in the world if you would only say—" etc., etc.

Entertaining Epitaphs.

In a search for the unusual, one would scarcely expect to come across it on a tombstone. But full justice can in some cases be done to a deceased in a single word.

There is a stone in Leamington Cemetery dedicated to the memory of one J. T. Burgess, who before laying aside the trammels of this mundane sphere edited the Leamington Spa Courier. His career and end are adequately summed up in one word—"Resting."

A departed auctioneer who lived in the city of Worcester had inscribed on his memorial stone as an epitaph, "Gone." Brief, economical, and retrospective. In a Sussex graveyard may be seen a stone on which are chiselled after the name and date of death of the deceased, just two expressive words—"He was." Surely a sermon in a nutshell.

But two of the strangest as well as the briefest epitaphs are to be found on stones in Cane Hill Cemetery, Belfast. On one of them, erected to the memory of a lazy fellow by one who evidently knew him well, are the words, "Asleep (as usual)." On the other, "Left Till Called For."

A certain photographer has this inscribed over his grave, "Here I Lie, Taken from Life."

The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Would you have the world better and brighter?
Then light up the way as you go;
Make some little part of it lighter
With beams from your life's steady glow;
Make the world you live in your debter
As through it you journey along.
Be good and the earth will grow better;
Do right, and the right will grow strong;
Trim the lamp that is left to your keeping,
And fan it with breezes of hope,
Lest shadows your life o'er creeping
Leave others in darkness to grope.

Let us say to benedicts, young and old, if you did but show an ordinary civility toward those common articles of housekeeping your wives—if you would give them a hundred and sixteenth part of the compliments you were married, fewer women would seek for other sources of affection. Praise your wife, then, for all the good qualities she has and you may rest assured that her deficiences are counter balanced by your own.

The family is the oldest and most valuable institution on earth. It begins properly with the first offspring. In reality there is no family until the husband and wife can say to each other, "Two times one are two and one to carry makes three." And the little third party often brings the husband and wife closer together, than anything else could possibly do.

NO GLOOM AT HOME

Above all things there should be no gloom at home. The shadows of dark discontent and fretfulness should never cross the threshold, throwing their large black shapes, like funeral palls over the happy young spirits gathered there. If you will, you shall sit on a throne and be the presiding household deity. Oh! faithful wife, what privileges, what treasures greater or purer than thine.

And let the husband strive to forget his cares as he winds around the long narrow street and beholds the soft light illuminating his little parlor, spreading its precious beams on the red pavement before it. He has been harrassed, perplexed, persecuted. He has borne with many a cruel tone, many a cold word, and nerved himself up to an energy so desperate, that his frame and spirits are weakened and depressed. And now his limbs ache with pain-heat, caused by too much application. He scarcely knows how to meet his wife with a pleasant smile, or sit down cheerfully to their little meal, which she has provided with so much care.

But the door is opened—the overcoat thrown hastily off. A sweet singing voice falls upon his ear, and the tones are so soft and glad, that hope, like a winged angel, flies dight into his bosom and nestles against his heart.

A home where gloom is banished—presided over by one who has learned to rule her household. Oh! he is thrice consoled for all his trials. It is impossible he can be unhappy.

That sweetest, best, dearest solace is his—a cheerful home. Do you wonder that the man is strengthened anew for to-morrow's care.

YEAR OF CAMAGE

The past year has been one of bloodshed and carnage. Men and innocent children have been murdered by the tens of thousands, but yet Christianity is advancing, is rolling on and it is going to warm the hearts of all nations and all nations will bask in its light. Men may shut the window blinds, so they cannot see it, or they may smoke the pipe of speculation until they are shadowed under their own vaporing; but the white light of the gospel made up of all the beautiful colors of earth and heaven, violet plucked from the spring grass, the indigo of the southern jungles, the blue of the skies, the green of the foliage and the yellow of the autumnal woods the orange of the southern groves and the red of the sunsets, all the beauties of earth and heaven are combining to keep the ball of Christianity rolling. Great Britain is going to lead all Europe to the foot of the cross; the United States is going to to bring all America to God; these two great countries will conbine and take Asia for God and then the three with their combined strength will bring Africa into the fold and the world will be redeemed. The good homes of our land are the little yeast cakes that keep the moral influences working. Infidelity and atheism are receiving the death blow from clubs in the hands of the good mothers of our land

THE MOTHERS OF THE WORLD

The first mother of whom we have any knowledge, was the mother of Cain and Abel, the much abused Eve, who has been held responsible for so much of the trouble that exists in the world. It is written that Eve was created after Adam, so woman has always occupied second place in the management of the world's affairs. Yet Eve must have possessed superior mental qualities, or else she could never have led Adam into such evil ways, and the circumstances attending Eve's unhappy interview with Adam all point to the fact that Eve was mentally Adam's superior.

Notwithstanding the fact that in the beginning woman was second in the race, it has been demonstrated beyond cavil that mother love is the holiest purest passion of the human heart. The mother instinct is almost supernatural. Even the brute mother will fight for her offspring and when the light dies out of the mother's eye, no other eye, save the eye of Omnipotence will ever follow the child in all his wanderings as she has done.

I was held as if in prison from going among other people, for I was ashamed of the raw, flaming sores. Doctors could do nothing for me, and I was almost desperate with suffering when I began to use Dr. Chase's Ointment. In one month I was completely cured and think that this was little short of a miracle."

Two Americans Among Canadian Liner's Passengers Drowned

The report that there has been considerable loss of life by the sinking of the Canadian Pacific liner, Missanabie on Sept. 9, has been confirmed by the Canadian Government at Ottawa. The majority of the persons drowned were members of the crew. Two American passengers were lost.

No lists will be made public, but persons with relatives or friends on board the liner can make enquiries at the agents of the Canadian Pacific Railway. As the Missanabie went down in seven minutes after she was torpedoed there was very little time to lower the boats and get them away.

MUNITIONS FACE DELAY

The women are imperatively needed to insure an adequate supply of material and munitions to the fighting men in France. Because of the nation-wide labor shortage, the munition program faces serious delay. This is made plain in the instruction to local boards sent out by the employment service.

"To the extent that we fall behind in the supply of material, we shall have to make up the deficit from the living bodies of our young men," read the instructions. "This is not rhetoric. It is precise, cold military calculation.

"As soon as the facts are realized, Americans are going to ceas carrying on business as usual and swarm into war work."

The use of the term "non-essential employment" in the instructions to community boards has a special significance. Although a man is working in a munition factory, and even is making shells, he still may be classified as a "non-essential worker."

This will occur when the community board's survey show that a man's job can and should be filled by a woman.

The program then, really means the women of the nation are to muster to help turn out the shells with which our soldiers will blast their path toward Berlin.

In making the surveys the boards will lay emphasis on the job and not industry as a whole. The employment service, which now has a corner on all employment in the United States, will assume responsibility for fisting and filling with the women the jobs which its community boards pass on.

Every precaution will be taken to guard the health and safety of the women workers. Two women members will be added to the personnel of each community board. Boards are composed of representatives of both employers and employes

A NEGRO'S PRIZE

An American lying wounded in a wheat field was somewhat taken aback by the spectacle, in slow and stately approach, of a German officer. He was magnificent with medals and he wore a monocle. Every once in a while his impressiveness was spoiled by a nervous turn of the head and the suspicion of a quirm—just as if some one were tickling his tail with a bayonet. Some one who was forlooking beyond the wounded American negro prancing along, showing every tooth in his head. "Hi-yi, boss," he called out jubilantly, "Ah don' know what Ah's got, bupt Ah's bringing it along."

THEY are cutting spruce in British Columbia. The silver spruce forests, long neglected because of lack of market and transportation, have found their place. The straight, fine-grained tough wood is the ideal material for the manufacture of aeroplane parts. The silver spruce grows only on the islands and ocean coast of British Columbia and the north west United States. The American timber of this species is being used exclusively for war purposes of the States, the needs of the other allies in the great war are supplied by the wonderful forests of B. C., this supply being made possible through a splendid organization perfected during the past ten months by Major Austin C. Taylor, director of the Aeronautical Department of the Imperial Munitions Board. The Sale of Miscellaneous and Fancy Meats Discussed

Practical Plan Evolved by the Women of Hamilton—Packers Co-operate on Large Scale—Neglected Delicacies—The Use of By-Products.

September 28 sees the inauguration of a new conservation scheme—one which should arrest the attention of the women of every city and village in the country. The stage is set in Hamilton. The prime mover is Miss Florence Meakins, head of the Women's Trench Committee of that city. The scheme is nothing more or less than an ambitious attempt to popularize meat by-products; to bring them more forcibly to the attention of the modern woman, and to serve to remind her that her grandmother extracted every last ounce of food value from the cow or hog killed by grandfather.

In the evolution of time, the abattoir has taken over the killing of animals and the dressing of the various parts for the shop counter. The prevalence of high-priced roasts and steaks and chops has tended to make women forget the minor parts of the animal which are equally nutritious, much cheaper and as palatable as the prime parts. Pigs and cows still have feet and legs and livers and backbones; snouts and ears, tails and tongues, although, like crinolines and poke bonnets they have rather gone out of fashion.

A little education on the cooking of these varieties of meats, and the judicious buying of cheaper cuts is what is needed for women of all classes and the Food Board heartily endorses the project about to be launched in Hamilton.

Sale Begins Immediately.

Some time ago General Mewburn asked Miss Meakins to take over the organization of the women in his constituency, and she conceived the novel idea of putting on a food conservation meat sale, the proceeds to be divided among the eight societies providing saleswomen for the occasion. They, in turn, were to expend the money upon Christmas gifts for Hamilton men in France. The committees represent 3,000 women, all of whom have relatives in France, and 82 saleswomen have been guaranteed for the duration of the sale. It will be held daily in the butter market from September 30th to October 4th. After that, each committee will hold a weekly sale in the basement of a large store, making a nine-weeks' sale in all.

The packers have generously come to the aid of the committees. They will donate 1,000 pounds of their products the first week, and for every pound they sell to the retailer during the week they will give one cent per pound towards the Christmas gift fund. It is expected that 1,000 pounds will be sold per day. The meat will be supplied by the packers at current wholesale prices, and the average profit to the committees should add materially to their funds for patriotic work.

Huge Wastage Goes On.

The truth of the matter is that about 75 per cent. of the minor portions of the animals is now thrown into the vat for rendering, because women do not ask for them. Figure it out for your own city on the basis of the wastage that goes on in Hamilton.

In that city, with a population of well over one hundred thousand, there are 14,000 pounds of meat by-products weekly. This is based on the killing of 1,500 hogs and 450 head of cattle a week. Various attempts have been made to popularize them but, for the greater part, they have gone to the grease tank.

Think of it! Over 10,000 pounds of perfectly good meat products sent to be rendered into fats every week in a city with a population of over 100,000. And yet women complain about the high price of meat! The rational way to equalize the market is to use all the meat. The average price would be lowered correspondingly.

Popularizing the minor cuts of meat does not mean the introduction of something new and grotesque on the market. It simply means reverting to the thrifty ways of our forbears, and to the full utilization of our food resources. The very meat products that we despise on this continent are considered dainties in Europe.

Neglected Delicacies.

Sheep's head! How often is the broth made with it, the piece de resistance of a Scotch menu. Again, Hamilton housewives could get oxtails for 15 cents a pound. Yet they allow 500 pounds of this delicacy to be sent to the grease tank or exported to the United States every week. Two thousand pounds of neckbones and backbones which could be bought up at 10 cents a pound go the same gait. So do 5,000 pounds of pigs' feet. And 1,000 pounds of brains—counted delicacies among the French, and never known to be contaminated by disease, whatever other parts of the animal may be affected—are thrown away in Hamilton every week. Then again, 400 pounds of the scantily used tongues and sweetbreads, which sell at from 25 to 35 cents per pound, are exported.

How about Toronto with its huge abattoirs, one of them alone capable of handling 1,000 head of cattle, 1,000 sheep and lambs, 300 calves and 2,000 hogs per day? How about Montreal and Winnipeg?

Women Might Organize.

What about the powerful women's organizations in these and other cities, which are doing all in their power to educate and help the woman who is tied down with her domestic cares and duties? If Hamilton's unique step proves a successful one, and nobody doubts that it will, other cities might follow suit. The packers will be only too glad to co-operate, as they are all doing their best to popularize by-products, and some of them have even issued recipe books dealing exclusively with this kind of product.

Wherever Chef Derouey, of the Commodore Hotel, New York, went on his recent visit to Canada, he spread fame of by-products, otherwise termed "fancy meats." He demonstrated, to the satisfaction of all onlookers, that the most delicious and nourishing dishes could be prepared from what we commonly regard as the oddments of meat.

In encouraging women to buy these pieces at an extremely low figure, with the thought that the profits go towards gifts for the men overseas, Hamilton is taking an advanced step in food conservation. Once thoroughly convinced of the palatability and value of the meats, women will go for them to their butchers who, in turn, will relieve the packer of much of the surplus which has now, perforce, to be relegated to the rendering vat.

Improvement in the Metal Markets

New Shell May be Manufactured in Canada.

For the first time in many months it is safe to say that there are signs of a little improvement in some marketing conditions. The plate situation, which has been almost hopeless, shows signs of improving. And the Canadian allotment of material from the United States points has been increased by enough tonnage to make the difference noticeable. The shipyards look to the government for their supplies now. Mills at the big producing points in United States, have been concentrating on plates for some months, and the result is that there are indications of the demand being overhauled.

The war orders this week from American headquarters in France call for barb wire and steel rails. There was a cessation some days ago in the call for barb wire, but it is probably figured out that new gains can be held more readily with barb wire than with men.

Canadian shops hear rumors of a new shell being brought out in the very near future. It will probably be a changed form of projectile at present being made largely in this country. Although there is nothing definite in the plans so for, it seems possible that something resembling a streamline shell may be brought out, the claim being that it will have a greater radius in gunfire.

MACHINE TOOLS

Canadian dealers in machine tools report a normal amount of business, with the usual searching around to to try and get their deliveries attended to. Dealers in supplies are not certain about deliveries of high speed goods It is certain that from now on there will be greater days in this line.

The scrap metal situation is almost at a standstill here. Dealers and consumers tell different stories The latter state they are having trouble in securing enough good scrap to make up for the shortage in pig iron. The dealers on the other hand, claim that the steel mills and the foundries are are full to the roofs of all the scrap they need. There is very little business moving at present through the scrap dealers, yards, but on the other hand there are a large number of sales being made direct from the producers to the melters.

Tin still comes under the dollar mark, and is selling around 95c. This is quite a comedown for this metal. Only a few weeks ago futures in this line were calling for $1.50 a pound, certainly a long call from the pre-war average of about 30 cents.—Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing news.

PERMITTED TO RESUME SERVICE IN CANADA.

International News Service Pledged to Comply With Rules.

Colonel Chambers, the chief press censor, Thursday issued instructions to the telegraph and telephone companies restoring to the International News Service the privilege of using Canadian land line telegraphs and long distance telephones as previous to the institution of the embargo placed upon this news service in 1916. The manager of the International News Service has pledged himself to a strict compliance with Canadian press censorship requirements. The change does not affect the embargo placed upon the admission into Canada of the so-called Hearst newspapers.

PORTLAND MAN GAINS 24 POUNDS

Was Hardly Able to Work Before He Began Taking Tanlac.

"When I started taking Tanlac I was so weak I could hardly do anything at all and it has not only almost made a new man of me, but I have gained twenty-four pounds besides," said Charles E. Shaffer, an employee of the Grant Smith-Porter Building Company, living at 508 West Charleston street, Portland, Ore., the other day.

"A little over a year ago," he continued, "I suffered from a bad case of la grippe that pulled me down till I was hardly fit for a thing. I lost my appetite and what little I managed to force down soured on my stomach and felt as hard as a lump of lead in me, and I was miserable night and day. Then several weeks ago I had an awful attack of tonsilitis that had me so bad I couldn't swallow a bit of nourishment for ten days, and it came near putting me out of business. I felt tired and worn out all the time and lost every spark of energy I ever had. When I went to bed I would roll and toss so much that I never got a good night's sleep, in fact I haven't been able to sleep much in the last three or four weeks, and I always got up in the mornings feeling just as bad as when I went to bed. I lost considerable in weight and got so weak and run down that at last I just had to quit working altogether.

"I read so much about the good Tanlac was doing others that I decided to try a bottle. I began to pick up right smartly from the very first, and in a little while I had my appetite back and was eating and enjoying my meals, and everything now agrees with me. I get as hungry as a bear in three hours after eating a hearty breakfast, and my food is building me up something wonderful. I sleep like a log all night and get up in the mornings feeling just fine and dandy. I am fast getting back my old time energy, and have already got a number of my friends started on Tanlac and expect to keep on boosting it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co. Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co. Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

300 CORDS OF WOOD ORDERED FOR WATERLOO.

To Be Shipped From Algonquin Park During Latter Part of October.

In accordance with the resolution of the Waterloo Town Council passed at its last meeting, three hundred cords of wood have been ordered from Algonquin Park, which it is expected will be shipped the latter part of October or the early part of November. Twenty-five per cent. of the wood will be dry wood and this, it is understood, will be shipped first.

The council has not yet appointed anyone whose duty it will be to receive orders for the wood but will do so in due course. The provincial regulations governing the sale of the wood require that cash must accompany all orders placed by citizens for the wood.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S ONE PIECE APRON.

8862

The very obvious advantage of this pattern, No. 8862, will be appreciated by the housewife who prefers to select her own materials to make a work apron as attractive as can be. In this case white percale with a figure and red wash tape for trimming was chosen. As the diagram shows, the apron is all in one piece, which simplifies the making very much. The neck is cut square at the front, and wide straps are joined at the shoulders. They are brought across at the back and button at the waist. The skirt of the apron. Large patch pockets are stitched at the sides.

The lady's one piece apron pattern No. 8862 is cut in three sizes: 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. For the 36 inch size requires 2⅝ yards 36 inches wide or 2¼ yards 40 inch material and 4 yards binding.

Bulgaria Throws Up the Sponge and the "Fox of the Balkans" Prepares to Leave for Vienna—Armistice Has Been Signed.

THE TERMS

CEASED HOSTILITIES.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(Two o'clock despatch.)—The Allies and Bulgarians ceased hostilities at noon, it was learned from an authoritative source this afternoon. The Serbian Legation confirms the Bulgarian surrender.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The Bulgarian armistice has been signed. The reports said that all military conditions imposed by the Allies have been accepted.

The terms laid down by the Allies were unofficially reported to be as follows:

"Surrender of all Bulgarian forces outside Bulgarian territory, and the demobilization of the army within.

"A complete breaking of relations with Germany, Austria and Turkey.

"Free access of Allied forces to Bulgarian territory."

"A Defensive War."

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30.—The Kaiser, according to despatches received here to-day makes the following declaration: Germany has unbendingly decided to utilize all her forces in the fight and will wage a defensive war to a victorious end so the Fatherland will be protected forever against foreign oppression."

March On Austria.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30. — The Bulgarian acceptance of the Allied armistice conditions spells the end of the Teutons' dreams in the near east, military and diplomatic authorities agreed to-day.

The Allies will now proceed with enlarged plans for putting the finishing touches on the blow against Germany's 'back door."

The Danube front will be re-established according to present plans.

Roumania freed by Bulgaria's cessation of hostilities will undoubtedly re-enter the struggle. Turkey must quit and a blow direct at Austria-hungary can be effected.

That Bulgaria will consider a definite separate peace as a supplement to the armistice is taken for granted. With Bulgarian Minister Panaretoff preparing to see Secretary Lansing it is assumed that the separate peace foundation will have its inception here.

Bulgaria's chief concern now is to have the final territorial adjustments laid on the American-Allied peace table, but whether or not this is granted, it is said certain that the signing of the armistice means the effective definite elimination of Bulgaria from the eastern battle.

Ask American Aid.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Bulgarian Minister Panaretoff to-day submitted to Secretary of State Lansing a communication from Bulgaria asking the United States to use its good offices in helping the conference in the Allied-Bulgar armistice.

Inasmuch as the armistice has been signed it was held by the Government

Paelе Ridge and Dixmude Captured by the Allies—Marshal is Fighting Five Battles Simultaneously and Successfully —Heavy Fighting on the Western Front.

BRITISH ENTER SUBURBS OF CAMBRAI

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, September 30.—Marshal Foch is fighting five battles simultaneously and successfully, a feat unparalleled in the history of the war. Each battle is so timed and placed that each army supports another, all forming an indispensable part of the whole effort. General Grant's idea of continuous concurrent attack by multiplicity of forces on many fronts is being realized by the Allied generalissimo; there are five battles to-day, there may be more to-morrow, all inter-retained and working as smoothly as the cylinders of a well-adjusted automobile engine. All are directed to the same end, to wear down the enemy's strength. Marshal Foch alone knows when the Allies will strike a decisive blow. The enemy is still fighting well. He is still offering splendid resistance west of Argonne, but how long can he keep it up. Expert commentators agree that the enemy's withdrawal to a shorter line, probably that of the Antwerp-Brussels-Megieres and Metz is imminent. Some believe he has hung on too long and that he will have great difficulty in preventing his retreat from degenerating into a rout.

PASSCHENDAELE RIDGE AND DIXMUDE CAPTURED BY ALLIES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 30.—In the capture of Passchendaele Ridge and Dixmude by the Belgians led by King Albert personally the Belgians captured eleven thousand five hundred prisoners and advanced the line from four to five miles on a twenty-mile front.

British, American and Belgian troops have captured forty thousand prisoners, three hundred guns, and immense quantities of war material on the western front since July 18th. The Allies have also taken over two hundred thousand prisoners, three thousand guns, twenty thousand machine guns, and enormous quantities of war material on other fronts.

Progress in breaking the hold of the German invader on French soil is shown by the fact that no longer is any of the French departments entirely occupied by the enemy. This situation was established by the recapture of four communes of the department of Ardennes.

OFFICIAL WAR OFFICE DESPATCHES REPORT PROGRESS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, September 30.—(Official.)—British, American and Australian forces pushed forward last night on a front between Bellicourt and Gonnelieu in the fact of severest opposition.

Four thousand prisoners were taken by the Allied forces yesterday to the north of St. Quentin, and forty guns were captured there.

British forces have entered the northern suburbs of Cambrai.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, September 30.—(Official.)—In the course of the night the Germans delivered a violent counter attack in the region of Urvillers, south of St. Quentin. All their attempts to capture Hill 88 were broken up by French fire. Rather violent artillery fighting occurred between the Ailette and the Aisne. In the Champagne region there was no infantry action during the night. The battle began again at daybreak.

ON THE FRONT SOUTHEAST OF DOUAI THE BRITISH TROOPS WITHDRAWN FROM ARLEUX AND OTHER POINTS

In operations yesterday north of St. Quentin a Midland division alone took 4,000 prisoners and forty-eight guns. Between Bellicourt and Gonnelieu enemy resistance yesterday was obstinate. American, Australia and English troops had heavy fighting until late in the evening. In spite of strong opposition they gained ground and took many prisoners. Heavy fighting also occurred yesterday afternoon on the left of the battlefront. Our advanced troops who had taken Aubencheul-au-Bac had entered Arleux were compelled to withdraw from these villages. West and northwest of Cambrai the enemy was unable to prevent the progress of our troops whose advanced detachments reached a junction of the Arras-Cambrai and Bapaume-Cambrai roads and entered the northern suburbs of the town. Heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy in the repulse of determined counter attacks launched in this sector. Heavy rain has fallen during the night and the weather is still stormy.

On the front southeast of Douai the British have withdrawn from Arleux and Aubencheul-au-Bac.

On the front northwest of Le-Catelet German counter attacks pressed the British back to the outskirts of Villers-Guislain, while to southwest of Le-Catelet similar pressure sent Field Marshal Haig's troops back to the edge of the village of Bony.

BRITISH TROOPS ENTER NORTHERN SUBURBS OF CAMBRAI.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, September 30.—British troops have entered the northern suburbs of Cambrai, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. They have also reached the junction of the Arras-Cambrai and Bapaume-Cambrai roads, on the west edge of the city.

The Champagne offensive after a night without infantry action was resumed at daybreak to-day, the French War Office announced.

Dozens of non-commissioned officers and men of General Boesm's German army have been shot following an attempt at revolt, according to advices from the Swiss frontier to-day. Boesm's army has been severely battered in the present offensive operations of the Allies.

AMERICANS IN THE RUSH

Joint Effort of the British and Americans Results in a Large Breach in the Hindenburg Line.

HEAVY FIGHTING

(United Press.)

With the British Armies in France, September 30. — The Americans have contributed their part to the break in the Hindenburg line. On a front of 6000 yards (about four miles) they caved in the German defences yesterday, making an irreparable breach, and penetrating a distance equal to the front of their attack. They opened the way for the Australians to shove on still further.

Early to-day the Yanks had re-organized their units and swung sharply to the left threatening a greatly increased break in the enemy line through an enveloping movement.

UNUSUALLY SPECTACULAR.

The battle yesterday was unusually spectacular. The flash of guns illuminated the country for miles around throughout the night. The artillery suddenly ceased at dawn. Then silence was broken again by the American barrage.

Behind their own shells dropping in an even line ahead of them, the Americans could be seen clambering over the rough broken line. They advanced in a hundred yard dash, the barrage doing the same.

Five minutes took them into a thick maze of wires, though they had been partially cleared away by the instantaneous fuse shells. Six minutes after the American barrage started (British guns fired the shells) the Germans put down a counter-barrage. They succeeded only in bombing the first support companies however without catching the first wave.

A smoke barrage by the enemy simultaneously hid the whole battlefield for several minutes. When it cleared away, the Americans were revealed, running steadily ahead.

The British guns then apparently smothered the Boche artillery, for that was the last of the enemy barrage. At last the Americans found themselves plunging across the Hindenburg defences. The work of the instantaneous fuse shells had been almost complete. Machine gun nests were wiped out with rifles and grenades and some prisoners were sent back.

A SUPPORTING ACTION.

The Americans on the right were delayed by extraordinary machine gun emplacements in front of the main defences, but they reached the main line soon after their comrades. Their rush prevented them from completely mopping up the ground there, leaving considerable work for the Australians following them.

With the Americans went a large number of tanks as well as a certain number of whippets. Simultaneously the British attacked on a smaller stretch of line to the right, while another British unit moved slightly in a supporting action to the left.

The Americans struck at a point where General Von Hutier's army joins with that of General Von Der Marwitz. They were the 8th, 54th, 121st and 185th divisions, with others in reserve.

"THE WIFE" WILL APPEAR TO-MORROW

"So Brian and Ruth pull apart not quarreling, often, in spite of his jealousy, but each sick at heart —she, because she finally comes to the point where she is not certain whether she loves her husband or her employer; he, because he is denied woman's society, home, children, all to his mind, means happiness."

The sequel to this state of affairs appears in "The Wife," a real human interest story by Jane Phelps, the opening instalment of which will appear in to-morrow's issue of The Examiner. It is a companion story to "The Woman Who Changed." Don't miss the opening instalment in to-morrow's Examiner.

The Harem King is Getting Tired of Hun Domination Over Turkey

(Special to The Examiner.)

GENEVA, September 30.—That Turkey has demanded money from Germany and threatened to break relations if it is not forthcoming was reported here to-day.

It was said that at a recent diplomatic conference in Berlin the Turkish Grand Viceroy Mezier requested a loan and demanded the cancellation of previous Turkish debts to Germany. The Sultan, according to advices said to the Mezier before he went to Berlin:

"I am tired of German domination over Turkey. Get prompt satisfaction for our demands or leave Berlin immediately."

LATE DESPATCHES FROM VARIOUS FIGHTING FRONTS

Heavy Fighting on the American Front—German Forces of Occupation in Roumania Are Leaving the Country—Population is Reported to Have Revolted.

BULGARIAN RETREAT CUT OFF

Special to The Examiner:

MISSOURI, Sept. 30.—Kansas and Ohio troops after four days' continuous fighting, withstood counter attacks on the fresh enemy smashes without budging, then resumed their offensive, gaining more ground. The German artillery is becoming more active, while our 75's are firing point-blank from front positions, sweeping the muddy Argonne hills—"pioneering," for infantry.

GERMANS GETTING OUT.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Sept. 30.—German forces of occupation in Roumania began to retire from the country Friday. Persistent rumours in Switzerland say that the Roumanian population have revolted. German civil authorities said to be removing their archives.

RUMOURS OF RESIGNATIONS.

Canadian Press:

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30. — German papers to-day publish stories of the resignation of Chancellor Von Hertling and Foreign Secretary Von Hintze.

RETREAT CUT OFF.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 30. —The Serbian army has captured Carevofalo, cutting off the Bulgarian retreat, it was officially announced by the Serbian War Office to-day. Serbian and French troops are now twelve miles from Uskub on the west frontier.

FRESH DIVISIONS.

(United Press.)

(By Frank Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICANS WEST OF VERDUN, Sept. 30.—The Germans are constantly throwing in fresh divisions in an effort to hold back the Americans between the Argonne Forest and the Meuse, resulting in increasingly violent fighting.

BULGARIANS RETIRE.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(Official.)— In the heavy fighting around St. Nicholas, in Serbia, near the Bulgarian frontier, east of Veles, the Serbians have compelled the Bulgarians to retire.

MUST BE BEATEN.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Sept. 30.—"There will be no peace until Germany is beaten," Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, stated to-day. "The people know that Germany's aims are contrary to the world's peace."

Peterboro Casualties

Bombardier John O'Dette and Gunner Herbert Dixon Killed in Action—Both Well Known Local Boys.

A few hours after the postman had delivered on Saturday a field card bearing the satisfactory information that he was well and would write soon, came the official news of the death of Bombardier John O'Dette, killed in action on Sept. 17th. His father, Mr. J. B. O'Dette, 39 Crescent street, received the information on Saturday afternoon, blooting out by its formal statement from Ottawa the hope and sense of security that had been built up by the trench card and recent letters of only a few days ago.

Bombardier O'Dette enlisted in the 33rd Battery, three years ago, and had been through a long service at the front. He was well known in Peterborough, having participated in the sports of the city in the pre-war days. He played in the city baseball and hockey leagues; his many friends will regret of his death. His father, Mr. Baptiste O'Dette, is a foreman with the Peterborough Canoe Co.

KILLED IN ACTION

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dixon, 784 George street, have been officially notified that their son, Gunner Herbert C. Dixon was killed in action on September 17th. The late Gunner Dixon qualified as an artillery lieutenant but reverted in order to get to the front. He was gassed on two occasions and subsequently became a despatch bearer. For some time he was a member of the Princess Pats and during the battle last year at Passchendaele the company to which he was attached went into the battle two hundred and fifty strong and came out with fourteen men. He was twenty-two years of age and was well and favourably known throughout the city. He was a graduate of the Collegiate Institute. A brother, Roy A. Dixon is with the American Engineers in France.

REPORTED WOUNDED

Mrs. R. Revoy, 252 Woodbine Avenue, city, received word that her son Bombardier Roy Revoy, had been slightly wounded but remained on duty on September 25.

Bomb. Revoy enlisted with the 26th Battery but was transferred to the 33rd Battery. He has a brother overseas, Quartermaster-Sergeant William Revoy.

MRS. GEORGE PATTERSON BROKE HER HIP

Mrs. George Patterson, 575 Stewart street, was the victim of a bad accident this morning when she broke her hip on the side of a chair. She is doing nicely and is being attended by the doctor.

ENEMY IS RETREATING

Messines-Wytschaete Ridge Has Been Captured by the British —Allies Are Progressing.

AT CHEMIN DES-DAMES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(1:45 p.m. — Pushing the Germans hard on a front north of the Aisne, the French to-day have reached the Oise-Aisne Canal, reports from the battle front show. They are progressing along the Chemin Des Dames toward the east and the enemy is retreating behind the Ailette.

Ridge Captured.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HAVRE, Sept. 30.—(Belgian Official)—A statement to-day says Messines-Wytschaete Ridge has been occupied by British and Belgians, and the Germans have been defeated in efforts to defend the approaches to the River Lys. British and Belgian troops on Saturday and Sunday took more than 9,000 prisoners. They also captured more than two hundred guns, some of a heavy calibre as well as a very considerable quantity of other war material. King Albert's forces at dusk this evening were attacking the Germans at St. Hiter on the Rolers-Menine Road and at Colliemolenholk, two and a half miles west of Roulers.

Fall of Cambrai.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The fall of Cambrai is imminent, but this place already is virtually useless to the enemy. The same statement applies to St. Quentin. With the fall of these two towns the enemy will be compelled to effect a complete readjustment of the entire line between the Scarpe and the Oise.

Allies Advancing.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(12:26 p.m.) —Between the Ailette and the Aisne the French have reached the Oise-Aisne Canal and are progressing along the Chemin-Des-Dames, according to battle front despatches received here to-day.

The Oise-Aisne Canal extends from the Aisne River, six miles east of Vailly to the Ardon River, three miles east of Anizy-Le-Chateau. It crosses the Chemin-Des-Dames near Bray-En-Laonnois, indicating that the French have occupied nearly half of the Chemin-Des Dames.

Line Broken.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The Hindenburg line has been broken to the depth of two miles on an eight-mile front north of St. Quentin, according to battle front despatches received here this afternoon. The French held half of the Chemin-Des-Dames. The Germans are retiring in that region.

TURKEY MAY SEEK PEACE

LONDON, Sept. 30.— Strong belief exists here this afternoon that a peace offer from Turkey is imminent.

BULGARIA OUT.

...The armistice with Bulgaria has ...en signed, which means that the ...lgars are out of the war, and on the ...lies' terms. The beginning of the ...d is in sight. The loss of Bulgaria ...ill mean much to Germany and ...re to Turkey, and the latter will not ...long in following the example of ...rdinand's country. Germany's ...eam of an eastern empire dominat... ...by the Teutons has been shattered ...d the German people will hardly fail ...see the handwriting on the wall. ...Meanwhile on the western front, ...ch's hammer blows continue to pul... ...rize the German defences in many ...fferent sectors and to take an enor... ...us toll of prisoners and casualties ...on the bewildered enemy.

THE BOYS NEED THEM.

The best possible reason for sub...ribing to the Knights of Colum...s Army Hut Fund is that the Ca...dian boys in France need the huts. ...he action of the Great War Veter...s' Association in endorsing the ...oject leaves no doubt as to the ...ct that the comfort and cheer that ...ill radiate from the huts establish... ...by the Knights of Columbus ...mong the Canadian soldiers will be ...the greatest benefit to the boys ...ver there, and for that reason the ...blic should readily respond to the ...ll that is being made.

It is the duty of those that are safe ...home to back up the efforts of ...he brave lads who are fighting so ...allantly for Canada and the Empire ...verseas. It is necessary to buy Vic... ...ry bonds because they provide our ...en with munitions and food; it is ...ecessary to support the Red Cross ...ecause it helps to look after the ...oys when they are wounded or tak... ...n prisoner; it is equally necessary ...o subscribe towards the Army Hut ...und, because it will provide com... ...rt and entertainment for our sol... ...iers, and help them to face hard... ...ips and danger better.

Surely at this time when the fame ...f the Canadian soldiers is re-echo... ...g around the world, when we are ...eading of the astonishing feat of ...rossing the formidable Canal du ...Nord, and the taking of Bourlon ...Wood by Currie's men, with the ...emory of the wonderful fighting of ...he Canadians in front of Amiens, ...nd their smashing blow through the ...Drocourt-Queant line still fresh in ...verybody's mind—surely no one will ...efuse to contribute to a movement ...hat means so much to the lads who ...ave performed such miracles at ...he front.

Our debt to those who are fighting ...n France can never be adequately ...epaid, so that no opportunity that ...s given us of showing our gratitude ...hould be neglected.

Remember the Knights of Colum...us huts are conducted on a non-...ectarian basis. They will be oper...ted by Canadians for all Canadian ...oldiers, and supported by Canadians. ...he more the people at home sub...cribe the more extensive will be ...he work at the front.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

The thoroughness with which our ...eighbors across the line are enter... ...ng into war activities, has even af...ected Santa Claus, with the result ...hat the familiar old slogan, "Do your ...Christmas shopping early," has a new ...eaning this year. The National ...Council of Defence has ruled that ...ift-buying shall be spread over a ...eriod of three months instead of ...being concentrated with a few ...weeks; that useful articles shall be ...urchased, instead of luxuries or ...on-essential things; that the ship... of gifts to distant parts shall be made far in advance of Christmas, and that merchants shall not utilize extra help, as has been customary for the accommodation of those who neglect to buy until the last moment.

There is much in this programme that should commend itself to Canadians, and several of the features outlined could be profitably adopted here. The economic advantage that would follow a system of Christmas buying spread over October, November and the early part of December, is obvious. If in times of peace it was good business to do the Christmas shopping early, it is doubly desirable under war conditions, when the labour phase enters into the problem.

The more people who select their Christmas gifts early, pay cash for them, if possible, and take their purchases away with them, the greater will be the economic gain and the conservation of resources and labour.

Peterboro merchants would undoubtedly delighted to hear that a system similar to that inaugurated by the United States Council of Defence was to be started here. To a considerable extent the business men have the solution in their own hands. An advertising campaign of education, designed to get the gift-buying public into the stores weeks ahead instead of days ahead of Christmas, would undoubtedly have marked results.

POOR ENCOURAGEMENT IN DEFEAT.

Imperial Chancellor Von Hertling has been called upon to discuss in the Reichstag the military situation and the discontent it has aroused in Germany. He has done so in about the only manner open to him so long as the German Government is determined to continue the fight—by minimizing the importance of Teutonic reverses and pointing to the escape of Germany from tight corners in the past four years. His method of reassuring German public opinion is not altogether different from that used by Allied statesmen in the trying period of June and July last, but the foundation for his reassurance is entirely different from that of the statements on the Allied side at the time of the dangerous German pressure.

Two and a half or three months ago the situation for the Allies was very grave. German forces were massed before Paris and before the Channel ports. The Allied peoples were not discontented, as Von Hertling admits the German people now are, so it was not necessary for the Allied leaders to bolster up their spirits; but it was necessary for them to explain the situation at intervals, and to forecast the future; they had to go before the people to urge a speeding up of the sending of reinforcements to the hard-pressed armies at the front. These Allied leaders admitted the gravity of the Allied position but expressed confidence in the outcome, and this confidence was based on the ability of the Allied countries to produce adequate reinforcements, particularly upon the great store of man power in the United States. If sufficient reinforcements could be got to France in time to prevent the Allied line from breaking while the enemy had the initiative victory for the enemy was impossible. His aim was to beat out the arrival of America's millions.

Now, the situation is reversed. The German armies have been driven back all along the line in France. For months they have been out-generaled and out-fought and the drive continues. Von Hertling admits the situation is grave but declares there is no cause for faint-heartedness or alarm on the part of the German people; and it is in the justification he gives for this declaration that he differs from the Allied statesmen. He has no other justification to give. He points to the past and asks the German people to renew their confidence on the memory of past victories. There is nothing in the future that he can point to as salvation for them. He recalls the former Allied victories on the Somme, the great success of the Russians under Brussiloff, the victorious drive of the Italians and other Allied triumphs and says: "We never lost courage but showed our enemies what a resolute will to victory could do." Germany got out of those serious situations by the success of her Russian and Italian intrigues, and in so doing she relieved herself of the necessity for maintaining the Eastern front and thereby brought her military power to its maximum. But there are no longer such possibilities open to Germany. The Allies have attacked her military power at its best and have beaten it. There is no link in the Entente Alliance to be broken as Russia was broken. There is no other Allied country that can be put out of the fight, releasing more German man power for service against France and Britain. On the contrary, two of Germany's allies, Turkey and Bulgaria, are at present suffering almost crushing defeats. And meanwhile, Germany has no new reservoirs of reserves to look to as the Allies had in their time of danger, and still have.

Thus Von Hertling is stalling, and he knows he is stalling. There is not a single thing to which he can point as holding prospect of relief from the present pressure that is slowly breaking the German military machine, but he refuses to admit that the situation is hopeless. The only possibility there remains to the German Government of preventing absolute defeat lies in peace, but of course Von Hertling could not admit that Germany sought peace in order to save herself from defeat.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Before we forget it, here's to the Belgians. Their attack in the north is a blow that will help considerably in the hammering back of the enemy's lines.

It must keep the German General Staff busy preparing plans for retreat.

American forces are fighting side by side with the British north of St. Quentin. That's a combination that even the Hindenburg line cannot withstand.

Austrian troops have arrived to assist the Bulgarians. One of these days, when Foch says the word. Austria is going to need all these soldiers at home.

You don't hear many stories about the Kaiser arriving at the battle front these days. Wilhelm only bobs up when the going is good, and claims all the credit.

The Allies ought to let Serbia dictate the Bulgarian peace terms.

Subscribe to the Army Huts. We can't do too much for the boys who smashed the Hindenburg line, and wrested Bourlon Wood, the key to Cambrai, from the hands of the enemy.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Costly Education.

A railway trunk-buster applied a match to a pool of alcohol at Ottawa "to see if it would burn." It did. The loss to the G.T.R. buildings, etc., is $112,000. It would have been much cheaper for the company to have sent this chap to college for four years to study chemistry, instead of leaving him to pick up his knowledge hand over fist the way he was doing. But he certainly landed a large chunk of information this time.—Toronto Star.

Sugar Prices in Various Countries.

The wholesale cost of sugar per 100 pounds on May 1 was $8.07 in Canada, $12.50 in England, $12.28 in France, and $26.30 in Italy, as compared with $7.30 in the United States. The average wholesale cost per 100 pounds in the Allied countries was $12.52½; so that if the United States had paid the same price for sugar as that paid by the Allied countries their national sugar bill would have been increased by $429,419,364.50. In Sweden sugar is now selling at 14 cents a pound, Spain at 19 cents, Brazil at 25 cents, Portugal at 21.4 cents, and India at 14 cents.—Montreal Herald.

New York's Useless Sunday.

Again Sunday found New York practically 100 per cent. loyal to the Fuel Administration's mandate that no vehicles run by gasoline power be used for pleasure purposes. Fifth Avenue, Riverside Drive, and the bridges and highways leading out of the city into the suburbs were comparatively deserted excepting for horse-drawn vehicles and automobiles carrying physicians' signs. Garages in all parts of the city reported that they had not sold a gallon of gasoline during the day.—New York Times.

Troops and the Ocean.

"Uncle Sam is sending more soldiers across the ocean every month than had ever crossed it before this war in the history of the world."—Florida Times-Union.

Quite so — but do not let a hasty reading of the above obscure the fact that in no month yet has the United States sent across the ocean much more than half the number of the total Canada has sent across since the war started.—Ottawa Journal.

Campaign a Success.

The Herald is pleased to know that the brief campaign of the Knights of Columbus in Hamilton, having for its object the raising of $25,000 towards the Catholic Hut Fund, was successful, the objective having been reached and passed. It is pleasant to learn too, that the Canadian contributions to the fund are sure to exceed the sum expected of this country. It is all for the soldiers, and it is all needed.—Hamilton Herald.

Youngest Colonel.

At the age of 23, Lieut.-Col. John Hay Maitland Hardyman, M.C., the youngest lieutenant-colonel in the British army, has been killed in action in France.

His death cuts short a military and political career of much promise. He had been approached by three constituencies to stand as their candidate at the next general election. He took an arts course at Edinburgh University, where he afterwards became assistant professor of botany. Enlisting in August, 1914, in the Flying Corps, he met with two severe accidents and then transferred to the Somersets as a lieutenant. In three years he won a lieutenant-colonelcy and the Military Cross, though wounded in between whiles.—The London Daily Chronicle.

NORMAL STUDENTS WERE ENTERTAINED

A Short Programme Was Provided.

The "Whatsoever Bible Class" of Trinity church, of which Mrs. P. B. Wright is the enthusiastic and energetic teacher, was "at home" to the Methodist students of the Normal school on Friday evening last in the Reid street Sunday school hall.

A short programme, consisting of a greeting from the class by the president, Miss Marian Dugan, a brief address by the pastor, Rev. F. E. Malott, B.A., B.D., a vocal solo by Miss Greta Lebarr, and selections from Mr. J. M. Greene's 'Edison,' was enthusiastically received. Games followed, and surely the cares of the day were forgotten for a few hours.

War-time refreshments were served, the tables and refreshment room being daintily decorated with the class colours, red and green.

Mrs. Wright's class of thirty-six members is a very live wire in Trinity Sunday school and each Sunday finds new recruits as the result of a week's scouting. The ninety-six present felt that the chain of Christian fellowship had been more firmly cemented.

Music & Drama

THE MILLION DOLLAR DOLL.

With the many bright features that made the production such a popular success on its other appearance in this city, "The Million Dollar Doll" returned to the Grand on Saturday for matinee and evening performances, and mightily pleased two big audiences. While Messrs. Harvey and Harold Orr, who were seen here in the comedy parts of Malvin Meekman and Jasper Jackson, were absent from Saturday's cast, their places were capably filled by Arthur C. Burgess and Jack B. Williams, who proved clever comedians. The musical numbers were well interpreted by principals and chorus, while a male quartette did some effective harmonizing. An illuminated runway gave the audience a chance to view the feminine members of the company at close range and they stood the inspection well. Irene Medora, who was seen here in the title role three years ago is still charming as the million dollar doll. The Leroys contributed some very clever dancing, and altogether the performance was lively and meritorious.

COLONEL BAIN DIED SUDDENLY

Col. Geo. W. Bain, who lectured at the Chautauqua, in Peterboro on "If I had Life to Live Over Again," was stricken with paralysis while lecturing at Sarnia, and subsequently died. For forty years the colonel has been one of the foremost lecturers on the American platform and his life-work counted strongly in the interests of good citizenship.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

RIVERSIDES ARE OUT LOST 14-3 SATURDAY

Kirn Hurt His Arm in First Innings and Local Team Went Under by Handicap—Scott Fanned Seventeen of the Solomon Aggregation.

The Riversides are out of the running for the O.B.A.A. championship, losing the second game to the Hillcrests in Toronto Saturday by 14 to 3. Manager Solomon's team were under a big disadvantage as Kirn hurt his pitching arm in the first innings and could get nothing on the ball. A Toronto despatch says:

Peterborough, suffering somewhat from stage fright and also showing a lack of knowledge of the finer points of baseball, proved easy picking for Hillcrests on Saturday, when they were defeated at Broadview field, in the O.B.A.A. semi-finals, by the one-sided score of 14 to 3. Hillcrests will now meet the winner of the Military Section in the next round.

"Cannon Ball" Scott had the visitors at his mercy, and while they connected for six safeties, yet most of them were scattered, while he made seventeen of the "Petes" whiff at the atmosphere. Kirn, of the visitors, was found hard and often, the locals getting fourteen hits, with Turofsky, Allward and Hennessey getting three apiece.

The Peterborough management were not discouraged at their bad beating, claiming they had gained a lot of experience in the series just closed and that they would be back again next year fighting for the cup.

FIRST INNINGS.

Peterboro—Cherrett fanned. McCarney fanned. Phelan out, short to Spanton. No runs. No hits. No errors.

Hillcrest—Crocker out. Sheehy to Guerin. Michie grounded out to Guerin, unassisted. Nicholson hit by pitched ball. Turofsky doubled to centre. Allward beat out a hit Nicholson scoring. Allward stole second. Spanton walked. The fourth ball was a wild pitch, Turofsky scoring. Hennessey singled, scoring Allward. Spanton out at the plate on a relay from centre. Three runs. Three hits. No errors.

SECOND INNINGS.

Hillcrests—Egan walked and stole second. Scott doubled into the crowd scoring Egan and Crocker sacrificed and was safe on Murray's fumble. Michie fanned. Nicholson flied to centre, scoring Scott. Turofsky safe on Cherrett's error who recovered in time to throw out Crocker at home. Two runs. One hit. Two errors.

THIRD INNINGS

Peterboro—Kirn fanned. Murty fanned. Field fanned. Scott has fanned eight men out of nine that had faced him. No runs. No hits. No errors.

Hillcrests—Allward singled and stole second. Spanton sacrificed, pitcher to first. Hennesy flied to left. Egan out, pitcher to first. No runs. One hit. No errors.

FOURTH INNING.

Peterboro—Cherrett beat out a hit, stole second and then stole third. McCarney laid down a bunt that Tifrofsky failed to handle, Cherrett scoring. Phelan sacrificed, Scott to Spanton, Guerin fanned. Sheehy made first on a fly ball that Hennessy misjudged. Murray out. Michie to Spanton, a grand play by Michie. One run. Three hits. No errors.

Hillcrest—Scott out, pitcher to first Crocker safe on Cherrett's error and went to second on a wide throw. Crocker caught off second. Kirn to Cherrett. Michie flied to Cherrett. No runs. No hits. No errors.

FIFTH INNINGS

Peterboro—Kirn fanned, Murty out, Scott to Spanton. Field flied to Spanton. No runs. No hits. No errors.

Hillcrest—Nicholson flied to centre Turofsky doubled to right. Allward flied to centre. Turofsky took third on a passed ball. Spanton safe on Kirn's error, Turofsky scoring Hennessy singled. Spanton was thrown out at the plate. One run. Two hits. Two errors.

SIXTH INNINGS.

Peterboro—Cherrett out, Spanton to Nicholson. McCarney fanned. Phelan fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Hillcrests—Egan out, Kirn to Guerin, and Scott singled. Crocker forced Scott at second. Crocker thrown out stealing second. No runs. One hit. No errors.

SEVENTH INNINGS

Peterboro—Guerin fanned. Sheehy fanned. Murray fanned. Scott has fanned fifteen batters. No runs. No hits. No errors.

Hillcrest—Michie singled to centre and stole second. Nicholson safe on Fielder's choice. Turofsky singled to right, his third hit, scoring Michie. Allward hit to Cherrett, Nicholson scoring. Spanton singled to left, Turofsky scoring. Hennessy hit scoring Allward. Spanton out on third. Egan flied to third. Hennessy out, running off base line. Four runs. Four hits. One error.

EIGHTH INNINGS

Peterboro—Kirn singled. Murty safe on Egan's error. Solomon (batting for Field) singled to centre. Kirn was run down between third and home, Hennessy to Turofsky. Cherrett safe when Spanton dropped Scott's throw. Spanton was knocked out in the collision, Murty and Solomon scoring. Higgins replaced Spanton at first. McCarney popped to Scott. Cherrett stole second and then stole third. Cherrett out stealing home. Two runs. Two hits. Two errors.

Hillcrest—Scott safe on Solomon's error. Crocker singled. Michie walked Nicholson sacrificed, Scott scoring. Turofsky safe on Guerin's error. Crocker scoring. Michie out at third. Allward singled and stole second. Higgins safe on Sheehy's error. Turofsky and Allward scoring. Higgins out stealing. Two runs. Two hits. Three errors.

NINTH INNINGS

Peterboro—Phelan fanned. Guerin fanned. Sheehy beat out a hit, going to second on Turofsky's throw into the crowd. Sheehy stole third. Murray out, Nicholson to Higgins. No runs. One hit. One error.

that no further step by the American Government is necessary.

Suggests Force.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30.—A special article in the Vossische Zeitung urges Germany to force Bulgaria to continue her allegiance by a military demonstration against Sofia.

Off to the Woods.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is expected to reach Vienna soon, according to a Geneva despatch quoting Innsbruck advices. When two daughters of King Ferdinand reached Vienna late last week they stated that they expected their father to follow them shortly. The two princesses arrived at Vienna Saturday night from Sofia and were met by the Empress Zita. They brought a large quantity of baggage with them.

Bulgarian representatives' agreement to an armistice is probably the first step in Bulgaria's withdrawal from the alliance with the Central Powers, a few days less than three years after she entered the war on the side of Germany. It was on October 8, 1915, that Bulgaria issued a manifesto announcing her decision to cast her lot against the Entente alliance.

She had been fifteen months in deciding that course. In the manifesto issued at the time of her entrance into the ranks of belligerents the Bulgarian Government declared that her trade interests and economic rights were inseparably bound up with Turkey, Germany and Austria.

It was added that Germany had offered Bulgaria in return for her neutrality the whole of Macedonia, including Uskub, Monastir and Ochrida. A still greater territorial expansion at the expense of Serbia was said to have been offered as condition of active military assistance.

Will Occupy Bulgaria.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—It is believed here that one condition of the Allies granting an armistice to Bulgaria is the complete occupation of Bulgaria by Allied troops, with the assistance of the Bulgarian Government.

Reuters despatch states that Bulgaria's surrender was unconditional.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The announcement that an armistice had been signed with Bulgaria after that country had accepted the Allied conditions aroused keenest interest in Paris, and the statement was widely commented upon as soon as it became generally known. The actual suspension of hostilities immediately followed the signing of the armistice, but it is noted this suspension applies only to Macedonian hostilities against Bulgaria and that it no way affects Macedonian hostilities which the Allied armies will continue against Austria-Hungary, Turkey and German contingents sent to that country.

Surrender Confirmed.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—(Two o'clock despatch.) — Bulgaria is out of the war.

Having accepted all of the military terms imposed by the Allies she has ceased to be an active participant.

These facts became known to-day when it was officially announced that an armistice had been signed.

It is learned authoritatively that at Salonika, the Bulgarian and Allied representatives discussed only the conditions of Bulgaria's disarmament and not political questions.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Bulgaria has surrendered unconditionally according to an agency despatch received here to-day.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 30. — The Kaiser, the Crown Prince, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, General Von Ludendorff, Chancellor Von Hertling and Foreign Minister Von Hintze, conferred at great headquarters yesterday, according to information received here to-day. The Government it is said, plans to make a declaration to the Reichstag Committee to-morrow regarding the general political and Bulgarian situations.

Will Be a Good Boy.

(Special to The Examiner.)

(By Raymond Clapper.)

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Bulgaria will be friendly to any Allied moves against Turkey, and will be practically on the side of the Allies for the remainder of the war, Bulgarian Minister Panaretoff told the United Press to-day.

FATHER AND DAUGHTER BATTLED FOR THEIR LIVES ON STORMY LAKE

Terrible Experience of Mr. William Tucker and His Daughter Emma on Serpentine Lake After Mr. Jack Tucker Died of Heart Failure in Their Canoe.

FUNERAL ON SUNDAY

The funeral of the late Zack Tucker at Apsley yesterday afternoon, was attended by friends from Peterboro, Keene, Coe Hill, Bancroft, Hastings and other distant points. It was one of the largest funerals ever witnessed in that community, testifying to the high regard in which the deceased was held by all who knew him. Mr. J. J. Duffus of this city, motored to Apsley and attended the funeral of his old friend and fellow-member of the Serpentine Lake Hunt Club. Mr. Tucker was also a member of the council of the townships of Burleigh and Anstruther.

The particulars of his death reveal the harrowing experience and narrow escape from drowning of his brother, Mr. William Tucker, and the latter's daughter, Miss Emma Tucker. According to the information, the party had been picking cranberries, and were returning home on Serpentine Lake. The water was rolling high, driven by a strong wind. The Tucker brothers were paddling hard to maintain their course when suddenly Mr. Zack Tucker collapsed, and apparently died, in a moment, from heart failure. As his body fell against one side of the canoe, it listed and shipped a large quantity of water. Mr. Wm. Tucker, and his daughter endeavoured to continue paddling, but every moment made their position more perilous. Finally they both dropped overboard, having decided that it was safer to cling to the boat. But the waves soon filled it. Then the lifeless body sank before the eyes of the father and daughter over whose head the waves were beating with a force that had almost exhausted them, when Mr. Joseph Tucker, a nephew of the dead man, drew near them. By some fortunate chance he had noticed the plight of the party nearly 300 yards out in the lake, and stripping himself of outer clothing and boots, paddled out to them. In his first attempt to grab the rescuing canoe, William Tucker missed it and sank. Coming to the surface again, he put his last strength into his exertion to reach the boat and clutched it with a grasp that was not to be denied.

In the meantime Joe Tucker was almost overwhelmed by the waves which every moment threatened to upset his canoe, and Miss Emma Tucker had to witness her father's efforts without being able to assist him. The scene of this tragedy at noon on Friday on Serpentine Lake, may be easily imagined. Father and daughter were eventually towed ashore by Joseph Tucker. Both of them were exhausted by the ordeal they had endured. Mr. Zack Tucker's body was recovered on Saturday morning in thirty feet of water.

Facts About the Catholic Army Huts Campaign

A Manifesto Prepared by Mr. G. A Warburton of the Y.M.C.A. and Dr. Abbott, of Toronto.

The Catholic Army Huts Association erects, equips and conducts Army Huts for Canadian soldiers, which serve the two-fold purpose of recreation huts for all soldiers, and chapels for Catholic soldiers. The work is under the direction and control of the British Imperial Military authorities.

The aim of the Association is to keep Canadian soldiers clean in soul and body. The recreation huts are for the use of any and every soldier. All are welcome. These huts provide a place where men in khaki, regardless of creed, may assemble for wholesome amusement.

The Chapel Huts are gathering centres where Catholic soldiers may receive the fortifying influence of their own faith.

Welcome hostels are maintained in the City of London, where large numbers of Canadians are constantly on leave.

Entertainments are held for the soldiers at which refreshments and comforts are provided.

Athletic supplies, gramaphones, pianos and moving picture outfits are part of the equipment of every hut.

There is a regular distribution of chocolates and other confections and magazines free of charge at the sing-songs and parties held in the Canadian Camp Hospitals.

Hot tea and coffee are distributed free to men coming from the trenches.

Letterheads and envelopes are provided free to soldiers.

Good clean literature, newspapers, magazines and prayer books are furnished regularly without charge.

A Central Information Bureau is maintained, and all possible statistics are there recorded for the service of loved ones at home.

Surely this great work is deserving of all help. It is something that should appeal to every heart, and ought to receive the financial support of all irrespective of creed.

The Catholic Army Huts are an integral part of the successful prosecution of the war. As the Army is one in unity, one in loyalty, and one in work, so let all at home be one in giving.

In France every effort is made to provide them with healthy amusements, decent recreations and to keep them in touch with their homes. But above all it is aimed to give spiritual strength to the men going out to face death for us.

In France and Flanders all denominations labour together in harmony and though their forms may be different each is doing the Master's work.

For the Master's Work.

When Canada calls its young manhood to service, it makes no distinction of creed.

When the young fellows get into camp and 'chum up" to one another, they don't ask their pals what faith they profess.

They train, eat, drink, sleep, play, share hardships and if need be, die, together. They are one big brotherhood, united in the Great Common Cause.

When they get to France they are knit even closer. Their common peril causes many of them to do their first serious thinking about Life—and the Life after death.

It is all very well for us at home to draw distinctions about faiths or communions, but when men are preparing for battle, and death, or when they are in billets, having come through an Ordeal by Battle—what kind of men should we be if for the sake of a few dollars we were to deny to them that form of spiritual comfort to which they are accustomed.

During the terrific fighting along the Yser, a Rabbi stumbled upon a dying soldier—a Catholic. By signs the soldier made known his need for the Last Sacrament, but no priest was near and the man was fast nearing the Valley of the Shadow.

The Rabbi (all honour to him) took two small twigs, fastened them together in the form of a cross, and held it to the dying man's lips.

Jew and Gentile — Catholic and Protestant, Buddhist and Mohomedan, all races, all faiths, all creeds, fight as allies shoulder to shoulder.

All respect each other's faiths and reverence their sacrificial moments.

Inasmuch as Catholics have always generously supported the Y.M.C.A.—a representative Protestant organization—in its work for our soldiers we feel that it is reasonable that Protestant citizens as well as Catholics should give generously in the work carried on by t Army Huts in the serv diers.

While there are diff opinion between Catholic testants there can be n of opinion in regard to most enthusiastically any will make easier the life diers, or minister to the needs.

Father McLaughlin cautioned men that the triple alliance of the world, the flesh and the devil, rrayed against them. "The world ght is just the same as it was a ago, just as insidious and using me diabolical means by which to you from God. You have been ed. The world is a strong enemy st you. The Power of Prayer.

first and ... weapon in ... battle w... ... all ... quoted.

"If you feed the mind with thoughts of Almighty God, then you shall be spiritual men living in a spiritual atmosphere. You must keep God before you. Never desert him. Therefore in the morning your first act should be prayer. There is no excuse. Show me the man who has not even one minute in the morning for God. Hence say your morning prayer and consecrate the day to God. Let everything be for Him. You are working and slaving all day, for what? Wasting your time as far as eternity is concerned. You must pray when temptation besets you, and also close the day with prayer."

"What would you think of the man who gets up in the morning without a thought of God who made him. God watches over him during the night, brooding over him as a mother over her child, breathing into him the very food on which he subsists, and yet he gets up in the morning without saying even, "My God I thank Thee." There is no excuse for the man who falls into temptation. He alone is to blame for he did not ask God to help him."

Attend Mass Regularly.

Rev. Father McLaughlin admonished the men to attend mass regularly, and to receive communion at least once a month. "We are living in times when we need the strength of the Blessed Sacrament more than ever. 'Amen,' I say to you, 'unless you eat of the body of the Son of Man and drink of His blood, you shall not have life in you.' It was Christ said that, and He always spoke the truth. Many of you could go to communion every day. Try to go every Sunday.

Again: shun all dangerous occasions of evil. The persons, places or things that may lead you to sin are your worst enemies. You must absolutely avoid them. Be an an active man in your parish. You should join the Holy Name Society. It is a powerful means of perseverance. It brings you together for special lectures and to communion frequently.

At the close of the sermon the body of men, about nine hundred, promised to be faithful in their prayers, to attend mass every Sunday, to receive the sacraments frequently and to avoid the occasions of sin. In asking the blessing of God for the men and their families, Father McLaughlin in a touching allusion to their service specially mentioned the soldiers overseas.

Bishop O'Brien's Address.

At the conclusion of the mission, Bishop O'Brien addressed the congregation briefly. "I thank God for the splendid scene of a great body of men coming together with pure souls to pay their tributes of love to God for His grace and blessing. It seems to me there were more men than women made the mission, and many of them were from the other parishes. This morning I was almost overcome by the sight of so many men at communion. We have those who go every day and every Sunday, others who could go more oftener than they do, and some I saw to-day for the first time in months. How much would I give if we should never have again a careless man or woman in this parish or city."

Bishop O'Brien emphasized the love and devotion that would thus be paid to God, and also stated that a great influence for good would be exerted in the community.

Interesting Letter Received From a Peterboro Soldier

Pte. W. G. Lockie Was Buried Alive Together With Some of His Companions.

Mrs. W. G. Lockie, of this city, has received the following interesting letter from her husband, Pte. W. G. Lockie, who is at present in hospital in England:

September 9, 1918.
London, England.

Mrs. W. G. Lockie,
Peterborough, Ont.:

My Dear Wife, — No doubt you were alarmed when you received word that I was wounded. I sent you a card from France telling you and I suppose they sent you word from Ottawa. This is a fine hospital. The nurses are all good and kind, and there are American nurses here from New York, which makes it very much like home. I suppose you will be anxious to know how I got wounded.

We went over the top at 5 a.m. and advanced all morning a shower of machine gun bullets from Fritz. I don't know how I went so far without being hit. He put up an awful scrap which was all in vain for we got our objectives about noon. Well, about 11 o'clock a bunch of us got cut off from our company by heavy shell fire and we took cover in a trench which was, before, the German support line. I reported to an officer in the same fix as myself. He told us to dig in, so I dug a hole big enough to sit in. I had just made myself comfortable and was thinking of opening my canteen and having something to eat when over came a big shell and hit the bank above me and the whole thing came in on top of me and a bunch of others, but I managed to scratch myself to daylight. Just as I got my head uncovered Fritz sent over one of thise awful gas shells and I was unable to get my mask on as it was buried along with me, so I scratched with my hands and kicked with my feet until I got myself free. Then I beat it for the dressing station. I was covered with dirt and blood from head to foot and my eyes were nearly blinded from gas and several bits of shrapnel in the face, but my face is all better now, and my eyes are doing fine.

My back is quite stiff and sore, but it will be all right in a short time. I am thankful I got off as easily as I did.

When I think of the hell I went through it seems impossible.

I will say good-bye for now, best regards to all at home. I remain,

Your loving husband,
WILL.

"THE GARDEN OF ALLAH"

A Massive Production—The Original and Only Company on Tour.

"The Garden of Allah," that most wonderful dramatic spectacle, will be the attraction at "The Grand" to-morrow (Tuesday) evening on its sixth annual tour.

This massive production, which is a dramatization of the novel of that name by Robert Hichens and Mary Anderson de Navarro, is the superlative effort of one of America's greatest producing firms—the Liebler Company. Three separate trips were made to Morocco to obtain correct environment and atmosphere for this drama. A troupe of Arabs from the desert, including a Mohammedan priest, several sides to Rasuilla, the famous bandit, and other noted figures of the desert, were brought over to this country. Mme. Faddma, a famous dancer of the Ouled Nailes tribe of Arabs, was also imported, together with real live camels, horses, donkeys, goats, pigeons, etc.

Porter S. White Co.'s Three Hours' Sale

The Special Saturday Night Sale of Groceries advertised in the Examiner of the Porter S. White Co., proved a very gratifying success. The three hours devoted to this event, between 7 and 10 o'clock, found the store a very busy place; and the demand for the goods offered at cutrate prices was quite lively. Many people carried home their parcels, and others left their lists to be filled and delivered on Monday. As an evidence of the benefits of only one-day advertising, it was stated that many saw the Saturday announcement as soon as the Examiner reached their homes, and hurried down down with their orders ahead of the time advertised.

ALL CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING IS payable in advance. The amount of each account is so small that it does not pay to "book" it. When advertisements are telephoned, remittance must follow by mail or messenger.

Demonstration at Y.W.C.A. Was a Great Success

"Y" Girls Put on Interesting Exhibition.

The second demonstration given by the Y. W. C. A., Swimming Classes on Saturday evening, proved as great an attraction as Thursday night's successful exhibition, and the galleries were again crowded by interested spectators.

While the programme of events was practically identical with the previous one a variation was made on Saturday by the presentation of prizes to the winners as follows:

40 foot race—Teddy Connor.

Egg and spoon race—Irene Canfield.

Diving—Grace Wilson, Jean Wilgar.

Youngest swimmer—Jean Robinson.

The latter event was one of the most attractive as, to see the tiny mite, who is only seven years of age, it is hard to believe she would have the courage to go into the water. However, like a small tadpole she swam the breadth of the pool twice to the surprise of all.

The Cork Race.

The cork race was re-run on Saturday and ended in a tie between Kathleen Cuffe and Dorothy Mills. Later it was re-contested, Miss Mills succeeding in picking up the greater number.

Presented with Bouquets.

At the conclusion of the performance, Miss Littleleld, the physical director, was presented with several beautiful bousuets from her pupils. A solo by Miss Helen MacLaren was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Sergt. Heber C. Nichol is Killed in Action

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Nichol of Roseneath.

Word was officially received on the 17th inst. that No. 219776, Sergt. Heber Clinton Nichol, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Nichol, of Roseneath, Alnwick Township, was killed in action on Sept. 2nd. Sergt. Nichol enlisted in the 80th Battalion, Peterborough, on Sept. 28, 1915, and went overseas the following May. After serving a year in the Pay and Record Office, London, England, he was transferred to the 38th, an Ottawa battalion, and crossed to France in the spring of 1917. Sergt. Nichol was chosen in July last to take a non-commissioned officer's course and passed his examination successfully, having taken 144 marks out of a possible 150, being qualified for duty with a company. Although details as yet have not been received it is presumed that he has fallen in action leading his company as in his letter to his parents he stated that his Battalion would be taking part in another "push" before many hours. Sergt. Nichol was twenty-one years of age, a young man of exemplary character and of a quiet disposition. Before enlisting he was employed in the Utilities Commission Company of Peterborough. He answered the call of King and Country, and has paid the supreme sacrifice in far-off France.

LETTER FROM HARRY FIELD

WELL KNOWN PIANIST IS WORKING HARD.

In a letter received lately in the city from Henry Field, the eminent pianist, he says: "I am playing at Lord Harrowby's this afternoon for overseas officers, and again in the evening at Steinway Hall. I played for the British Empire Union at Lady St. Helier's not long since, and shall play in the Albert Hall concert in the Fall, my Liszt concerto. I am working harder than ever before and have improved a lot."

—his Mother, his Home!

OUT 'mid bursting shell and battle's roar; out in the awful abyss of a man-made hell; in a strange land, thousands of miles from home, a brave Canadian mother's son is, this minute, fighting, bleeding, dying—enduring all the agonies of this terrible conflict that the world may be free. There, amid the victorious cheers of our men, the maddening curses of a savage foe, the cries of the stricken and the wails of the dying, his mind goes back to Canada, to the land he loved so well; to a dear old mother's home, to the comforts he found there. He sees her bent in longing for her boy "Over There," and his heart aches to comfort her with a letter of good cheer. Hear him, in a voice with anguish filled, calling, pleading, praying to those for whom he fights, to furnish him with the comforts that they themselves would want.

Just to mention two very attractive models:—

Crepe de chine in a beautiful shade of Havana brown used in a very simple but charming little frock. It has a panier front effect, self girdle and is embroidered in front with silk and silver thread. The price is only.... $29.00

Quite different and distinctively effective is this gown of tank grey georgette over grey charmeuse, with a box-pleated apron front and back. It shows the new collarless front with apron collar in back and a self girdle with fringed ends. The price is $48.00

Fall Coats Are Smart and Very Warm

Chilly October is well-nigh here, so what more timely subject than the discussion of warm out-door toggery? And these new coats are worthy of special attention. They are moderately priced and attractively fashioned in many new styles. In velours and velours-finished materials we have a splendid assortment of modish top coats for women. To describe only one of the many—

So cozy and comfy and stylish looking as only velour knows how to be, and the color is nigger brown. Large collar of nutria, side panels, slip-through belt and buttons form a most attractive trimming. Priced at $42.00

Over Four Thousand Persons Attend the Meeting Held in Brock Street Tabernacle

"Peterboro for Christ" is the Object of the Evangelistic Campaign Which Will Last a Month—Last Night's Meeting Was a Big Success.

REV. HONEYWELL'S OPENING SERMON

Peterborough for Christ.

"A dream come true," said Rev. Mr. Pogue, in reference to the campaign.

Men who have been beacon lights of progress and who have swayed the destinies of nations have been men of prayer.

t would not take long to save this sin cursed world if men would only pray in the spirit that makes prayer acceptable to Christ.

If you only realized and appreciated the efficacy of prayer you could within the next three weeks pray the city of Peterborough into the kingdom of heaven.

I thank God for praying mothers, said Rev. Mr. Honeywell. God pity the boy or girl brought up in a home where prayer is never offered.

Prayer has divided the sea, extinguished the fire and closed the mouths of lions. It has gone down into the grave and brought the dead back to life.

You may pray from childhood to old age, and not one of your prayers will ever reach the skies unless it comes from the heart and not the lips.

Rev. J. E. Honeywell and his party of evangelistic workers went over the top last evening in the first of a series of meetings in which "Peterborough for Christ" is to be the objective. The occasion marked the opening of one of the biggest revival campaigns that has ever been held in this section of the country, and last night's meeting while it did not produce any "trail hitters," was wonderfully enthusiastic and appreciative. The four thousand or more persons that crowded in to Brock St. tabernacle must have been an encouraging spectacle to the group of workers who have come to Peterborough to help in the creation of a new spiritual awakening.

Arrangements Complete.

The arrangements for the meetings and the accommodation of the huge crowd were complete in every particular from the organization of the choir of two hundred voices to the distribution of new song books prepared especially for the occasion.

Rev. Mr. Honeywell lived up to his advance notices as a speaker of exceptional force and ability. There is nothing spectacular about his methods and his presentation of the gospel is quite orthodox.

Rev. A. Thomas, pastor of George street Methodist church, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the campaign, addressed a few words of welcome to the large audience, and was followed by the Rev. R. Pogue pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, who characterized the campaign as "a dream come true." During his eleven years' ministry in Peterborough the Rev. Mr Pogue had often hoped for such an occasion, and he was delighted to witness the realization of that hope. Mr Pogue then introduced the members of Rev. Mr. Honeywell's party, which included Mrs. Russell, who will have charge of the women's work in connection with the campaign, and also Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dixon, who have charge of the musical end of the programme Each of them spoke a few words of appreciation and referred to the opportunities that such an event presaged. The meeting was then formally opened by the singing of the National Anthem, followed by a few song numbers by the choir, after which the Rev. A. J. Doner offered a few words of prayer.

Civic Welcome.

In a few words of welcome to the evangelist and his party, Mayor G. H Duncan said: 'There can be no greater work than that of endeavouring to benefit us spiritually, and the preparations that have been made for these meetings show that those who are most concerned with the spiritual welfare of the people are alive to this fact."

Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church, spoke a few words of welcome on behalf of the committee. The Rev. Mr. Honeywell was then introduced by the Rev. A. Thomas.

After a few preliminary announcements Rev. Mr. Honeywell launched into the subject of his address, which was based on James, fifth chapter and sixteenth verse:

"The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

"It is no new thing to-day," said the speaker, "to find a man who will question the efficacy of prayer. We read of prayer in the Bible and the wonderful results achieved. Job prayed and his captivity was at an end. Paul prayed and his prison was shaken and his jailor converted. Other incidents of prayer are recorded with equally good results. Jesus prayed and taught His disciples to pray. What practice could better illustrate to us the great power of prayer? Read of the various remarkable results of Christ's prayers. "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," prayed Jesus Christ.

Men who have been beacon lights of progress and men who have swayed the destinies of nations have been men of prayer. Thousands have been converted as a result of the power of prayer.

What is Prayer.

It would not take very long to save this sin cursed world if men would only pray in the spirit that makes prayer acceptable to Christ, declared Mr. Honeywell. Prayer is our confession of need, and strength in weakness. It is the wings by which we fly to God It is the first sign of conversion; it is a sign of strength. No prayer ever reaches God unless it comes from the heart. You may pray from childhood to old age and not one of your prayers will ever reach the skies. Prayers that come only from the lips never reach heaven. You might just as well try to live physically without breathing as to pray without meaning and expect to achieve eternal life. When every other avenue is closed we resort to prayer. The gates of prayer are open wide. Prayer and a good man will only part at the gates of heaven.

Talking to God.

"When you pray, do you realize that you are talking to God and that God is listening and is anxious to help you?" inquired the speaker. If you only realized and appreciated the efficacy of prayer you would within the next three weeks pray the city of Peterborough into the kingdom of heaven.

Prayer may be acceptable to God and yet not bring immediate results. answer. If the answer was to always immediately follow prayer the grand end that God has in view would be defeated. When you cry out to God to save you and you get no answer what do you do? Are you going to stop praying? No! No more than a man will cease swimming in order to reach a place of safety. If you pray in the right spirit and give yourself in earnest consecration to God the answer will come. I have faith to believe that it will come after if it does not come while you are living.

Praying Mothers.

"I thank God for praying mothers," said the speaker. "God pity that boy or girl brought up in a home where prayer is never offered. The influence of a praying mother is one of the greatest assets a child can have in the world.

Prayer has divided the sea, extinguished the fire and closed the mouths of lions. It has gone down into the grave and brought the dead to life. Are we to expect answers like that to our prayers in this age and in Peterborough? We do not expect enough. If we expected more we would get more. Is there anybody here to-night who is not satisfied with their Christian experience? Thank God I have got a message for you. If you will only give your life to Christ your prayer will be answered. You can be saved if you will only meet the conditions.

O God that Peterborough will see the most marvellous manifestation of God's power to save, said Mr. Honeywell in conclusion.

The meeting was brought to a close with a short prayer by the Rev. Mr. Greatrix, pastor of St. James' Methodist church and the Quaker benediction, the latter being exemplified by the shaking of hands.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

The executive committee in charge of the Dr. Honeywell evangelistic campaign announce that arrangements are being made to improve the accoustic arrangements in the hall. The attendance was so great last night, some of those at the back of the hall reported that they found it difficult to hear the speaker when he dropped his voice. It is understood that a sounding board will be used and that possibly some of the flags hung across the hall will be raised so that they will not interfere with the sound waves in the hall. Complaints were made last night that boys running around the entrance made so much noise that they at times made it impossible to hear the speakers. Steps will be taken to deal with this also.

While it was proposed that the various churches co-operating in the services should close their churches only on the first Sunday of the campaign several of the churches are now willing to close their evening services throughout the campaign.

In his address last evening Dr. Honeywell suggested that while the meetings are in progress he would like it if the public instead of speaking of the building, as the Brock street rink, would refer to it as the Brock Street Tabernacle.

Voice of The People

Peterborough, Sept. 28th, 1918.
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Mr. Burnham in his letter to The Examiner Friday night, expresses amazement that I would, at the request of Mr. Dobbin, ask The Examiner to lay certain facts before him, and ask for the withdrawal of certain statements made by The Examiner, from information supplied by Mr. Dobbin.

Mr. Dobbin consulted me as a lawyer, and as such I requested The Examiner to withdraw the statements and to give publicity to the explanation because the inuendo contained, reflected upon my client and upon his reputation, and what is more I will continue to act as long as I practice here, in the same capacity for any other man who has reflections cast upon him, if I am retained by him.

Mr. Burnham says that if I want satisfaction I can get it from him at any time. Well, this is just what a large number of people and myself have been wanting for a considerable length of time, and now that Mr. Burnham has invited me, I will try to explain in my own way where I think he could give some satisfaction and where he has signally failed.

Mr. Burnham knew that Mrs. McIntyre was not entitled to receive moneys from the Patriotic Fund, supplied by the ratepayers of the City of Peterborough, because she was a married woman without children, and only married women with children, under the resolutions of the Patriotic Fund, are now entitled to rank on the fund for any benefits. Mr. Burnham knew this, but notwithstanding this, for the purpose of continuing his feud with Mr. Dobbin, started this row, and instead of going to Mr. Dobbin, he rushed to the press, as is his custom, and has the press make an indirect attack upon the man whose scalp he is after.

As to the feud between Mr. Dobbin and Mr. Burnham, I am not concerned. It is none of my business, and I think they can fight it out between themselves, without an undue amount of blood being shed.

What Mr. Burnham should have done, was to do the same as others have done, and I have done, and that was to try to arrange for Mrs. McIntyre to get time to pay her bills or to get them cut down. I have seen doctors and merchants in this city, time and again for soldiers' wives, to get extensions of time to pay their bills or reduce their bills, and I have been extended every courtesy by the doctors and merchants and they have shown a most kindly spirit in trying to assist these women whose husbands are overseas. The doctors particularly have frequently cut down their bills to practically what they have paid out of pocket for medicine. This could have been easily done by Mr. Burnham if he had taken the time and gone about it in the right way, instead of dragging Mrs. McIntyre's name into the press and make her the storm centre of the controversy between him and Mr. Dobbin.

Mr. Burnham expresses the opinion that he could make me take back what I said and could make The Examiner apologize. Mr. Burnham as a lawyer ought to know better, and Mr. Burnham as a man, does know better. As far as I am concerned I will stick exactly to what I said and I will repeat it if Mr. Burnham so desires.

Mr. Burnham says that if we want satisfaction we can get it. I think now is the time that he should give it. He is paid $8.00 a day for every working day, by the Dominion Government, or $48.00 per week, and during the time he has represented West Peterborough, he has drawn approximately $17,500.00, besides his passes on the railway and steamboats, and any other incidentals that come to members. Every woman and child contributes to Mr. Burnham's indemnity, and they should be free to go to him and ask him to untangle their affairs, and he should be willing to do it; that is, as I understand his duties, but he has not done it except in such cases as appeal to him. On the other hand, he has turned down cold on some occasions, the applicants, and told them to do it themselves.

One widow came to me, whose son was languishing in an English hospital, anxious to get home, and who had been crippled for some months. She went to Mr. Burnham, who gave her the address of the Minister of Militia, and said it was nonsense to try to get her son home but to leave him in England. This lady came to me and I wrote Sir George Perley, who very kindly and courteously answered my letter and said he would do what he could, and in a few months the boy came home, and although he is crippled for life he has obtained a position and is doing very well indeed, but it was absolutely impossible for him to ever enter the army again, and Mr. Burnham must have known when he told this woman to write to the Minister of Militia, that the Minister of Militia was the wrong person to write, but he should have given her the address of the Canadian Minister overseas to deal with cases of that kind, and he also must have known that in telling this woman to write to the Minister of Militia it would mean nothing more or less than her application being pigeon-holed, as I believe very many have been.

In addition to that Mr. Burnham ought to take up the case of the aliens who are getting fat on the jobs of men overseas and filling their places at the highest salaries, but as far as I can learn Mr. Burnham has never brought any pressure on the Government to change this intolerable condition of affairs. He was strong on the "Abolition of Titles," but when the vote came up in the House of Commons, he was missing when the roll was called. When it comes to throwing a strong bluff, Mr. Burnham is there, but when it comes to steady persevering service, Mr. Burnham is missing.

Mr. Burnham could very well, as he is not actively practicing law, arrange for the Government to have in this city, a first-class employment bureau, with such men as Sergeant Whatley and Sergeant Cooper or other returned men, in charge, and every manufacturing plant in this city should be called upon to give the returned men the first chance on the jobs, instead of requiring these men to stand at the gates of the manufacturing plants day after day, in the hope of securing work, and a list of all men could be got by a bureau of this kind, with their qualifications, their addresses and a similar list of all plants, the class of labour they employ, wages and qualifications required for such class of labour, and this could be operated in a business-like way, without having things as they now are, tumbling over themselves in a state of confusion.

In addition to that, Peterborough being situated in the highlands of this part of the province, should have long ago had a large convalescent home located near it, on account of its healthful surroundings.

Our returned men from the city and county who number almost four thousand, could be given positions as orderlies, furnace men, superintendents, gardeners and various other positions to which they are now entitled. Practically every one-tank town in Ontario gets some kind of a home or hospital and is able to take care of their returned men, while Peterborough is left in the cold because the local member is in bad with the powers at Ottawa.

I dislike carrying on political fights at any time other than election time, but as Mr. Burnham has publicly, through the press, invited me, saying he would give satisfaction if I wanted it, I am now addressing myself to him, reserving a few things for reply if necessary, in order that he may see what his duty is to the citizens of Peterborough, and particularly to the returned men and the wives of the soldiers overseas, whose very first help and aid should be the sitting member.

As Mr. Burnham has had the advantage of military experience, he knows all the twists and turns, and in addition to that, being a supporter of this Government, he should be able to insist upon his wishes being carried out to a certain extent, and why he does not try to untangle the pension troubles that have arisen from time to time where men have got $2.50 a month pension, and others having their pensions cut off prematurely, is a mystery to the most of us.

I trust that Mr. Burnham will give as active and vigorous attention to the helping of others as he does to the attacking of people who are trying to do their duty, and who have spent quite as much time as Mr. Burnham in trying to assist others and to help those who are entitled to the assistance and attention of every citizen, who properly appreciates his duties of citizenship.

I remain,
Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

Loosening German Grip

Allies Are Slowly But Surely Enveloping Cambrai and St. Quentin.

(United Press.)
(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Cambrai and St. Quentin, two of Gemany's strongholds in France, seem about to fall into Allied hands.

Lille, Douai, St. Quentin, Cambrai and Laon are five great bastions of the Germans' defences. These five cities have been held by Germany like fingers of a hand gripping France. The Allies are prying loose the two middle fingers, Cambrai and St. Quentin, and are reaching toward the others. It will possibly take weeks and months of bitter fighting, and many battles may be necessary before these other fingers can be pried off the Kaiser forced to take a new grip further back, but there is no doubt in the minds of military officials and the people that it can be done.

Continuous Advance.

There are continuous advances at many parts of the line. Attack is piled upon attack. The significance of vast battles, the great outstanding fact that for the first time since the Germans crossed the French frontier in 1914 they are now forced to think hard and fast to retain their grip upon Northern France. Only a week ago, to the public, such a situation would have seemed liable to result only from many weeks and months of campaigning, yet to-day it is an accomplished fact.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD IN NORWOOD.

The regular evening service of the Norwood Presbyterian Church, was withdrawn yesterday, and in the afternoon a memorial service in memory of the late Pte. George Townshend, was held.

Rev. Mr. Wolland preached and splendid suitable music was rendered by the choir.

In the evening at 8 o'clock, in the Methodist church, a similar service was held in memory of the late Pte. Robert H. Chamberlain, who was killed in action on September 2nd. The pastor preached.

Will Purchase Butter Supplies at Creameries

Prices Fixed for Canadian Butter —Shortage in Britain.

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30. — Owing to a shortage of butter in Great Britain, the Canadian Food Board, for the British Food Board will from to-day until November 30th, purchase for export to Britain supplies of creamery butter on the market in Canada. The price fixed is 46 1-2 cents for grade one, 46 cents for grade two and 45 cents for grade three. Some supplies of regular dairy butter will not be affected.

The purchases will in the main, be made direct from the creameries, and probably the agents of the Federal and Provincial Agricultural Departments will be employed to make purchases and forward supplies to central collecting points. Official announcement giving details will be issued at once.

FIGURES AS TO MOTORING ON SUNDAY

A citizen who resides on one of Peterboro's principal streets and whose condition of health requires him to be in the open air as much as possible has been passing his time counting the automobiles that pass his residence on Sundays. Two weeks ago, the first "motorless" Sunday between 9:30 in the morning and 9 in the evening twelve passenger cars and one motor truck went by. A week ago the figures were 50 automobiles of which only one was apparently a doctor's car. Yesterday the total had increased to 36 cars, two of which were driven by doctors and one by a milkman. The others apparently being of the class which should have been left in the garage.

City's Assessment Increases $2,483,006, Population 305

Facts of Peterboro's Progress as Disclosed by Assessor Henry's Rolls for 1919, Which Were Transferred to the City Clerk To-day.

The assessment rolls, returned to-day by Mr. W. J. Henry, upon which the 1919 taxes will be based, the city's total assessment is $18,265,566, an increase of $2,483,006 over last year's total. The population during the year has increased by 305. This is for the municipality of Peterborough alone, and does not include the many residents in the township who work in the city and are virtually residents of it. The vital statistics for the year show a decrease in the number of births and an increased number of deaths.

Assessor Henry's recapitulation of the facts in his voluminous rolls is as follows:

WEDDING BELLS

PAQUETTE—RAY

At the church of the Holy Trinity Trinity Square, Toronto, on Saturday September 28th, 1918, Bessie Georgie second daughter of Mr. Samuel Ray, 687 Water street to Eugene J. Paquette, of Toronto, formerly of Peterboro, Rev. Ralph L. Sharman, rector, officiating.

GERAGHTY—SHAVER

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Peter's Cathedral on Monday, September 30th., at 7 a.m., when Helen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Shaver, became the bride of James W. Geraghty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Geraghty, Campbellton, N.B. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Guiry. The bride was attired in her travelling suit of midnight blue serge, with taupe picture hat wearing a corsage bouquet of pink Killarney roses and maiden hair fern, and ermine cape, the gift of the groom. She was attended by Miss Julia Mulvihill of Rathburn, who wore a suit of taupe velour with hat to match and a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses. The groom was supported by Mr. Morley E. Shaver, brother of the bride. Miss Doherty presided at the organ and during the offertory Miss Florence Leahy rendered very sweetly Cherubinis' Ave Maria. After the wedding breakfast served at the bride's home, 264 Reid street, Mr. and Mrs. Geraghty left for New York and on their return will reside in Toronto.

ARMY HUT FUND DRIVE IN FULL SWING TO-MORROW

To-morrow morning bright and early the different teams in the campaign for the Army Hut Fund under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus will start out on their rounds to canvass everyone and everywhere the prospects look good in securing even a dollar. The various leaders and team captains have been chosen, the city has been divided into 21 districts with a team for each district and there can be no doubt but that everyone with a desire to contribute even the smallest amount to this worthy object will be given every opportunity to do so. A special committee composed of Messrs. V. Eastwood, V.J.McElderry, Pennyfather will look after the heads of the different manufacturing establishments in the city and both these gentlemen are experienced and efficient campaigners. Another special committee, composed of Messrs. V. Eastwood, V. J. McElderry, W. H. Dunsford, J. R. Corkery and R. Denne, J. J. Duffus, Thomas Barrie, W. S. Merrell, G. O. Cameron, J. I. Allen and W. J. Maher will take care of the business sections of the city and with this team of veterans, well known to all, they should easily head the list although Messrs. Breyfogle and Pennyfather are willing to wager they will be sadly disappointed. The rivalry between these two teams will be interesting to watch All the other districts are being well looked after by enthusiastic and aggressive canvassers and the objective then in this city should be easily reached and passed. Headquarters for the campaign for the week have been opened up in the south side of Barrie Bldg. which has been fitted up for the occasion where canvassers and citizens may come at any time for information. Telephone connections have been installed and the results of the canvass each day will be given to the press. Attend the mass meeting therefore, in the Opera House tonight. Admission is free and ladies especially are invited. Get all the facts, aims and objects of this worthy campaign on behalf of all our gallant Canadian soldiers regardless of color or creed and be ready with your contribution big or small when the canvassers call upon you.

Mr. Joseph Wearing Is the Chairman

Citizens who have received their allotment of 70 per cent. of coal are advised to husband this supply by using whatever fuel substitutes they can obtain, for they may find no coal available when their supply is consumed. Furthermore, their applications for the remaining 30 per cent. will not make much impression upon the new Fuel Commission. This is one of the first announcements of the Commission. Mr. Joseph Wearing was elected chairman, and already the work is beginning to take shape. At a conference with the dealers on Saturday night, the latter proposed that the Commission receive all orders for coal in future and designate the deliveries. This plan will be considered shortly.

The dealers agreed to limit their orders to two tons in the future, with the exception of a few four ton lots that have been paid for.

The Commission emphasizes the fact that it needs the co-operation of the public if its work is to be successful. There must be a greater use of substitutes to cover the expected shortage of coal this season.

INCREASE IN SALARY FOR REV. J. R. WEBB

Finance Committee's Report Was Adopted.

At the close of the morning service at Murray street Baptist church yesterday, the congregation met to receive the report of the officers concerning convention delegates. When this matter had been attended to Mr. L. J. Pettit, chairman of the Finance committee, read the unanimous recommendation of that department that the salary of Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor, should be increased three hundred dollars a year. With a few complimentary remarks regarding the work of the minister and the wisdom of the Finance committee's report, Mr. Vincent Eastwood moved its adoption. This was seconded by Mr. W. R. Breyfogle and carried enthusiastically by the membership.

$15.50 PER HUNDRED MAY BE FIXED FOR HOGS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 27.—Guarantee to farmers of a minimum price of $15.50 a hundred pounds for hogs during the war is recommended by National Agricultural Advisory Committee in a report submitted to the food administration. Though the food administration poses no power to fix definite prices for hogs or for corn, the report points out that prices may be regulated to a great extent by restricted orders for the export trade.

How Canucks Made Over Five Mile Advance

Brilliant Co-operation Between Different Branches of Service Scored Big Victory—Canal du Nord Was Thought to be an Impregnable Defence Line.

4,000 PRISONERS TAKEN

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES IN FRANCE, Oct. 1.—Some connected account may now be written of the battle of Bourlon Wood, which, presenting some extraordinary difficult tactical problems, was only surmounted by the skilful leadership and brilliant artillery work and gallantry of all arms.

The attack was a complete surprise. Captured staff officers admit that the Canadian Corps yesterday penetrated five miles and captured over 4,000 prisoners and more than 100 guns, these including two complete batteries with horses and limbers. An attack somewhere was anticipated, but not where it took place. The enemy regarded the line of the Canal du Nord as impregnable. It was so from the Sensee River as far south as midway between Sains-les-Marquion and Inchy-en-Artois, that shut out the canal front on which the Canadian Corps established itself early this month.

Swamps and flooded areas made the line of the canal impassable, but immediately east of Inchy-en-Artois a canal stretch of 3,000 yards was still uncompleted and therefore dry.

Works Formed Embankment.

These works are not situated in the valley bottom, but form an embankment of its eastern slopes and this natural stronghold is reinforced by a series of canal lifting locks, each in itself a fortress. From the canal the ground slopes up to the dominating heights of Bourlon Wood, these slopes being intersected by the Marquoin trench system on the reverse slope looking down on Cambrai between Rillencourt and the Canal de St. Quentin. All this was made familiar by the battle of Cambrai last November.

A purely frontal drive, only three thousand yards wide, must have been foredoomed to failure. Its momentum must have broken down before heavy flanking attacks from the inviolate northern enemy defence. The daring strategic plan therefore decided upon, and only to be carried successfully out by each unit engaged fulfilling to the minute its alloted task, was to use the practical three thousand yards as the handle of a fan, whose ribs would open out once the canal was passed.

How Prisoners Were Taken.

Thus the movement initiated by a line due east would develop north-east and so gradually sweep north until the canal was captured.

It was this fan-like movement that netted the bulk of the prisoners. Those troops entrusted with the storming of the canal had a sharp and bitter contest. Infantry units from almost every Province of the Dominion took part, all reaching their first objectives to the minute where they entrained, while fresh troops passed over them on to further objectives. They would not be denied and although they had spent cold, wet nights in the open, their dash and team-work were not less than they had displayed before Amiens. But superhuman efforts by the infantry would have gone for nought had not the Canadian artillery proved equal to the solution of this new and difficult problem.

At the Amiens kick-off our batteries pushed right after the infantry and so maintained an accurate and dominating barrage in front of their advance of many thousand yards. Here the canal offered an insuperable obstacle to such tactics. Batteries must be maintained two thousand yards back to give the infantry room to deploy, and after these had captured the canal a minimum of three hours must elapse before our engineers could throw a bridge over it of sufficient strength to carry the guns.

Artillery Support Excellent.

What was actually done was that immediately zero hour struck, certain batteries already limbered up, started off and got to the canal on the heels of the infantry. Their range from the western canal bank covered our second objectives and before that was passed other batteries had streamed across the canal and took up the work beyond. The entire gunnery programme was extremely difficult and could only be carried out by the very best artillery.

This was because the jumping off line was on a very narrow front and fanned out so tremendously from three thousand to nine thousand yards that it meant concentration of batteries that offered the enemy a tempting target. In addition, due to the depth of the barrage, 700 rounds had to be brought up with each gun. The extension of the barrage previously described, covered the operation until the canal was crossed and then our batteries spread out fan-like to conform to the advance of the infantry, and in taking these new and hitherto unascertained positions instant accuracy was required if our barrage, instead of protecting, was not to fall on our own ranks.

Aeroplanes' Fine Work.

Another novel feature was our splendid counter-battery work. The enemy moved his batteries about continually, and for this purpose had 105 battery positions in front of our advance. These had all been correctly spotted by our artillery airplanes, which at the kick-off flew low over the enemy's positions, reporting by wireless, not where his batteries were, but what positions were empty, thus enabling our artillery to concentrate their fire on occupied positions only.

The record of the Canadian engineers was remarkable. Hardly had the battle opened before they were engaged in pushing in their light railways, which were immediately employed in bringing up ammunition and taking out wounded. Their greatest triumph was the bridging of the canal. Little assistance could be rendered by the tanks in reducing the opposition because of the canal. But certain of these found a crossing low down, and did good work on the right flank. For the main part our infantry had to depend upon the barrage and their own exertions.

A Limitation On Furniture

Matter Is Under Consideration by War Board.

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—The limitation of patterns and woods used by Canadian furniture manufacturers during war time is under consideration by the War Trade Board, but as yet no decision has been reached.

Recently in the United States an arrangement was made, largely by agreement with the furniture manufacturers to stop the manufacture of certain elaborate lines of furniture and to conserve woods specially needed for airplanes or other war munition manufacture. Canada has already prohibited the import of furniture from the United States except under special license, and the further step of limiting Canadian furniture output to essentials may be taken if the investigation now pending proves it to be necessary.

The Allies Are Chasing the Turks Fourth Army

West Indians and Anzacs Perform Big Feat in Capture of Amman—Prisoners on Ponies.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN PALESTINE, Oct. 1.—We are around west and south of the Sea of Galilee.

At Semakh, on the south, the Turks fought with desperation. There was heavy street fighting, developing to the allied advantage.

The Turkish Fourth Army, a portion of which has already been captured at Amman, seems in for trouble.

I have just returned from witnessing the mounted men's triumphant capture of Amman, and can speak of the splendid handling of the troops in a country where nature had raised enormous barriers against an attacking army.

The Anzac mounted division east of the Jordan was assisted by some infantry, including a battalion of British West Indians, whose gallant bayonet charge on the Jordan's banks won the admiration of the colonial veterans.

They drove the Turks and Germans out of Amman, though the presence there of Germans indicated what deep importance the enemy set upon this section of the line.

At the moment when Allenby's plans overwhelmed the two Turkish armies in Palestine, the Anzacs began a movement to harass the Turkish Fourth Army over the Jordan. They had to get across several miles of flat country under enemy observation, and enter the Gilead Mountain chain, almost impenetrable, except for one pass to Es Salt. Until the pass was won only pack transport was possible. The cavalry moved up goat tracks and were in Es Salt on the third day after the operations began east of the Jordan.

Canny New Zealanders.

The enemy fearing an advance against the town months ago, made a strategy road west of Es Salt, and had wired one valley, and all the approaches thereto had been covered by many machine guns. The New Zealanders declined a frontal attack. They got over the crags of the hill, threatened the enemy flank, and compelled a retirement on the town. There was not much fighting at Es Salt. Between 600 and 700 prisoners were taken.

On September 24 the cavalry got to Suweileh, half way on the Amman road, and at dawn yesterday began operations against Amman. An Australian light horse brigade moved from the right in the Ain Sir direction, continually driving over the rough plateau the Turkish cavalry.

Prisoners on Ponies.

Infantry accounted for a number of detachments of prisoners, mounted on little wiry ponies, very unlike the British mounts, causing surprised interest as they passed through the lines. On the right the brigade made good progress, and at noon had got into excellent position southwest of Amman.

On the left a brigade of Australian light horse likewise made energetic progress. A small part got astride the railway north of Amman and removed two rails as a train approached from the south. I saw it derailed. The troops got out and escaped in the hills, while the little demolition party walked away on the other side of the train.

At three o'clock the New Zealanders rushed into the town. As I looked over the ancient citadel I saw their patrols creep up south-east of the hill, followed by the main body, who forced the enemy, chiefly relying on the weight of his machine gun fire from the crest, and went through the town before dusk.

"You might as well have it," whispers temptation, but your Canadian Patriotism says "No!"

THE tempting suggestions of selfishness meet no response from a patriot.

For he knows that selfishness and self-indulgence are just now the allies of the Hun — they fight on Germany's side against Canada.

When the devil-whisper says "You might as well have it," every true Canadian answers "No!"

Except for the bare necessities of life, we should not be spending five cents a day.

For every expenditure we make on things not absolutely necessary directly affects the fighting strength of Canada and her allies.

The materials that go into the making of things you can do without are needed for our soldiers overseas.

Many of those materials which enter into our unnecessary purchases are brought from other countries and occupy precious space in ships; space sorely needed for those cargoes which can be used for the winning of the war.

The labor that fashions the things we unnecessarily use is labor which could and would be employed to real advantage in the production of war necessities.

Knowing all this, how dare you divert a single unnecessary dollar from your country's war effort!

The shame that must inevitably follow your every self-indulgence, at so grave a time, will be your fitting punishment —if you persist in buying the things you merely want and do not need.

Resist indulgence, cultivate thrift—for thrift is an evidence of patriotism.

And the money you save by thrift will be yours to lend to your country whenever the call comes.

THE WIFE

By JANE PHELPS

LIFE'S THRESHOLD

CHAPTER I

Ruth Maddon had promised to marry Brian Hackett, a handsome young lawyer. Bryan was poor, but both he and Ruth planned that soon he would be getting large shares from wealthy individuals or corporations. So, one beautiful day in the fall, when the leaves were turning from red and brown to gold, they were married.

"I'll not give you a cent if you marry him," Ruth's wealthy aunt had said. "Not that I have anything particular against Brian, but you'll neither of you be happy. He is accustomed to economizing, to going without things—you know he worked his way through college—while you are accustomed to a different sort of a life. How will you like to wash dishes and make beds? He won't be able to afford a servant. Look at your hands! How long will they look as they do now? No, Ruth, if you marry him before he has succeeded in making something more than a lawyer's clerk of himself, you need expect no help from me!" When her aunt pressed her lips together as they were after she had delivered the foregoing speech, Ruth knew there was nothing to do but to accept as final whatever she had decided. But—Ruth was young and youth is hopeful.

"I can give you a fairly comfortable home, Ruth, though, of course, nothing like the one you have with your aunt. But I'll soon make more money, and then we will show her that I can take care of you as well as she can." Brian had said to the girl he loved.

Ruth was in love, so had faith that Brian knew what he was talking about and had promised to marry him in spite of her aunt's objections.

FIRST LOVE

Ruth Maddon was an orphan. Her widowed aunt, Mrs. Clayborne, had taken her into her home when Ruth was only ten years old, and had cared for her and indulged her ever since. Ruth was now twenty.

The small Southern town in which Mrs. Clayborne always had lived, was the home of a relative of Brian's. He had visited them and Ruth had fallen in love with his handsome face, his strong physique, his manners. Then, too, his ingenuous wooing had taken her "off her feet," as her aunt expressed it. When he returned home to a mid-western city—he wrote such long, loving, eloquent letters, that Ruth, in her inexperience, saw everything in the future as he pictured it. When her aunt gave voice to her doubts of Brian's inability to care for her niece, Ruth would produce one of the letters and read it aloud. No one could fail to be convinced after listening to what he had written—so she thought.

But Laura Clayborne was made of sterner stuff. She saw only the silly visionings of a young man in love, and the foolish trust of an inexperienced girl, who's life had been one of ease and luxury in as far as creature comforts were concerned.

Since her husband's death, the year Ruth lost both her parents and came to her aunt's home to live, Laura Clayborne had not left the small town in which she lived, save ones, when she was obliged to go to New York on business connected with the settling of her husband's estate.

Ruth never had been away. Her aunt did not believe in boarding schools and neither could she bring herself to part with Ruth. So tutors had been engaged and Ruth's education had gone on right at home.

ARTISTIC INCLINATIONS

For a child Ruth had evinced a passionate love of the beautiful—in nature, in surroundings, in clothes—and her taste was sought by her aunt, when making any changes in the old colonial house of its furnishings.

The house still remained such as it had always been, a wide verandah on one side and a sleeping porch, being about the only changes. But the interior had been altered, redecorated and refurnished, until now it was one of the most luxurious homes in town. Mrs. Clayborne had given Ruth a free hand in the renovation of part of the house, and these rooms were exquisite. Ruth had studied the work of the best decorators, and had been wise enough to take from them only what was adapted to the old-style architecture; these ideas she had combined with her own, and the result had been really a most artistic and luxurious home for herself and her aunt.

She loved this work. She loved to handle the rich stuffs of which the draperies were fashioned—the tapestries, the silks and laces which she was allowed to order. Her own rooms, a tiny sitting room, bedroom and bath, were done in palest rose color. The rugs had great sprawling branches of wild roses woven in them; the draperies were of rose silk and lace with the bedcovers to match. The furniture was of dainty shapes, the desk of rosewood, the bric-a-brac appropriate to the rooms of a young girl, yet not one piece too many—as would have been the case with many girls who were allowed to have whatever they wanted. The other rooms too, were all beautifully and appropriately furnished. But in both her own and her aunt's private apartments, she had allowed her ideas of beauty of color and material full sway.

Strike Cost 15,000 Families Their Coal, Experts Estimate

Assert Also That Idleness of Miner One Day Deprives Allies of Twenty-Five Three-Inch Shells.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 30.—Fifteen thousand families already have been deprived of their winter's supply of coal by the strike of 25,000 anthracite mine workers that began here six days ago, but now has dwindled down to a few thousand workers, it was estimated.

Mining experts have figured that the idleness has prevented the mining of 150,000 tons, placing the average output of each miner in a day of eight hours as eight tons. Ten tons, they estimate, is the conservative supply for each household.

"For every day that each mine worker lays off there results the loss of twenty-five three-inch shells over there," says P. B. Noyes, director of conservation of the United States Fuel Administration. "The strike as a whole then would cause a loss to the Allies of at least half a million shells to date, which is a big factor in killing the Huns. For it is estimated that just that much coal that one miner turns out in a day is required for the work in other forms necessary to turn out twenty-five shells.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Spark and Tinder

By WALTER JOSEPH DELANEY

Ralph Walters was the tinder, touchy, easily aroused, a perfect volcano of wrath when he started in. The spasm passed, he was moody, stubborn, a man of few words, too proud to acknowledge his fault and seek to make amends, but sensible of the fact that he had been irrational and deserved censure.

His wife, Mary, was the spark. She had had family advisers and flew to pieces whenever her technical rights were invaded in the slightest degree. Only the trifles of life interested her and her husband as fully ignored them.

"You think so much more of your relatives than you do of myself, you had better go and live with them."

"I shall do just that," snapped out his hysterical helpmeet, and she did. Of course her family sided with her, and Cousin Felix Barclay, who was a lawyer, saw self-interest in litigation and called upon Ralph.

"You can tell Mrs. Walter that if she does not return to her home within a week there will be no home to come to," and he spoke the truth. He sold all the household furniture, realized on the personal property, accumulated a little over a thousand dollars, and sent it to Mary with no word accompanying it. Then he disappeared from town and no one knew whither.

A year went by; it was a hard one for Mary, for time and memory had opened her blinded eyes. Cousin Felix "invested" the greater part of the thousand dollars and lost it. Mary's mother died. Her married sisters indicated clearly that they could not support her, and Mary was compelled to work to earn enough to keep body and soul together in a wretched little room, and did penance for her treatment of a man who had more than catered to her expensive whims.

At the darkest hour of her poverty and struggles Mary received a strange letter. It purported to come from Phineas Marks, a lawyer in Arizona. He informed her that he had been authorized to remit her seventy-five dollars monthly. "I am instructed not to divulge the details of this bequest," he wrote, "but you may consider it as appertaining to the estate of your dead uncle, William Barr."

Now William Barr had gone west four years previously and had never been heard from again, outside of a rumor that he and a number of others had perished in a snowslide in Utah. Mary at once arrived at the conclusion that some property of her dead relative had in some way been discovered and was truly thankful to receive sufficient to keep her from drudgery and the grinding domination of poverty.

She rented a neat little cottage, took two schoolteachers to board, and life seemed again worth living, except when she thought of her absent husband. She made some efforts to locate him, but without the slightest success.

One day there came a knock at the door. Mary opened it to reel back with a cry of consternation, of terror. Older, thin, ragged, supporting himself on crutches, was Uncle William Barr.

"Don't you know me, Mary?" spoke the poor wreck of humanity piteously.

"Yes, but—but you died," gasped Mary incoherently.

"No, I didn't," said her visitor. "I nearly did several times. I'm going to soon, and, Mary, I haven't a penny or a roof to shelter me. What can you do for me?"

"You are welcome to stay here Uncle William," replied Mary pityingly, for time and trouble had developed her real compassionate nature. "I haven't much, but I will share what I have with you. But the money that has been coming to me from your estate?"

"My estate?" repeated Uncle William vagnely, and this led to explanations all around. "I never sent you any money. And you're not living with Ralph? Oh, Mary! I see it all. The lawyer out west—did you say his letters came from Warrenton, Arizona?"

"Yes, Uncle William."

"Then I guess the truth. It is your husband who has been sending you the money. He worked me in so as to hide his good, kind soul. Mary, he is a noble man!"

Mary cried as though her heart would break. Then she began to expatiate on Uncle William's theory. It

Another 100,000 Men?

The character and extent of Canada's continued participation in the war will be one of the subjects to be considered by the Government when the Prime Minister and his colleagues come home with first-hand information from the Inner Councils as to the need of the situation.

The Military Service Act limits to one hundred thousand men the number of men which can be raised from its operation. With upwards of seventy thousand already secured it is expected, and also apparent, that by fall the full quota will have been obtained.

The question then will arise as to whether the limit is to be raised. If it is not, the specific limitation to one hundred thousand will probably be removed.

In some quarters the proposal has been advanced that another hundred thousand should be authorized, but the matter has never been officially considered. In the natural course of events all will depend upon how the military situation develops in the coming months and the extent to which reinforcements are needed. The Premier, as a member of the War Cabinet, will be fully advised as to what is called for overseas, while the man power essential to domestic requirements will be a big consideration in any further policy to be determined.

Canadian and American Soldiers.

"Man for man our soldiers have a higher moral standard than the men of any army of any other nation engaged in the war; and when in this connection I speak of our soldiers of Canada as well as the soldiers of the United States. Any man who tells you the contrary is a liar, and the truth is not in him. This is not an offhand alibi; statistics compelled by our own surgeons form the truth of it; and any man who stands up anywhere on our continent and says that the soldiers who have come from our side of the Atlantic to help lick Germany are contracting habits of drunkenness or that they are being ruined by the spreading of sexual diseases among them utters a deliberate and a cruel slander against North American manhood which should entitle him to a suit of tar-and-feather underwear and a free ride on a rail out of any community."—I. S. Cobb, in Saturday Evening Post.

Clemenceau's Strenuous Life.

Long years ago M. Clemenceau, France's premier, was dubbed the "Tiger," and no man has ever better lived up to his nickname. At nineteen he was flung into prison for shouting "Vive la Republique!" with his arms round a lamp-post. Today, nearly sixty years later, he is as pugnacious and defiant as ever.

He is a born fighter, and, with the exception of a brief period which he spent as teacher in a girls' school, his life has been one long, turbulent battle. He fought more duels than any other man in France, has brought down one cabinet after another, and is the most popular man in France.

Museum Gets Aviator's Talisman.

An English penny which he carried as a talisman in all his hazardous flights over the German lines was given by Pat O'Brien, lieutenant in the British aviation corps, to the Rev. W. Herbert Burk for the historical museum connected with Washington memorial chapel, Valley Forge. O'Brien visited the museum with Major Dugmore and Captain Powell as guests of Colonel John S. Mucklo.

The Dreaded Message

IT is the women that have suffered most in this terrible war—

"For men must work
And women must weep."

Theirs has been the worry and anxiety. The watching and waiting in constant dread of what might happen.

Because mental suffering is far more distressing and debilitating than physical pain and discomforts women have had the greatest burden to bear.

The strain has been both severe and long, and the result is an alarming increase in diseases of the nerves. Nervous headaches, neuralgic pains, nervous prostration and exhaustion, restlessness, irritability and melancholy.

These are some of the indications of nervous breakdown.

The building up of an exhausted nervous system is oftentimes a somewhat tedious process, but with the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you can be sure that restoration is both natural and lasting.

Get out into the fresh air as much as possible. Seek the companionship of healthy, cheerful people, and depend on this food cure to enrich the blood and supply to the depleted nerve cells the nourishment essential for their restoration.

Mrs. S. N. Hurst, Barrie, Ont., writes: "About thirteen years ago, owing to a shock I had received, my nerves simply got the better of me. I could not sleep at night nor work in the day time. I suffered from a trembling sensation in my stomach, which kept up continually. I doctored for about a year and a half without getting any benefit. Then someone advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did so, and at first was nearly discouraged, but as I was finishing the first box I found I was getting a little better. I then continued the treatment until I had taken six boxes, and during this time seemed to be getting stronger and better as time went on. The trembling in my stomach ceased, and I was able to eat and sleep without any difficulty. I am very grateful for having been advised to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, as I had about given up hopes of ever getting any relief. I therefore gladly recommend the use of this treatment to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

In order to be sure of getting the genuine Dr. Chase's Nerve Food it is only necessary to see the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, on the box you buy. 50c a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Through Rebellion and Re-building Alone Can We Develop Our Individuality and Grow and Achieve

—Says FERN HOWARD.

Discontent is a great thing. To follow the groove of history or conventionality or what "they" think, is to kill individuality, warp the will, and clog the workings of even bodily life. The courageous people of the world have been the rebels—the clean, far-seeing prophets.

"I owe my success to the fact that when I was twenty-three years of age, I was dissatisfied with thirty-five dollars a week," said a well known financier. "I was very ambitious."

And no doubt it is true that had this man been contented with thirty-five dollars a week, he would now be making even less. For to satisfaction is due the death of ambition.

And to follow in the groove of conventionality is just as fatal. Had Napoleon been influenced by what "they" would think, his name would not now be mentioned in the annal books for those who follow.

The first essential to human progress is to have convictions; and the second, the courage to follow them. Nietzche once said that, "The exertion of power is laborious and demands courage. That is why so many do not exert their just rights — because their rights are a kind of power, and they are too lazy or too cowardly to exercise them."

It is only when discontented countries revolt, and the people quarrel with oppression, that they obtain their freedom.

And it is equally true of the individual. Through rebellion alone can one develop individuality, free the will and obtain the freedom that is necessary in order to go forward and upward to greater achievement.

And so if you want to amount to anything, shrug your shoulders, look at what you have done, and say, "That will never do." And out from your sense of discontent there will emerge the conviction that you can do infinitely better, and that courage will make of you a free individual. For through honest rebellion comes freedom.

Lemon Juice For Freckles

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

A BUILDER OF HEALTH

Nothing can be of greater assistance in building up the system than Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for this food-cure enriches the blood, and nourishes and restores the feeble, wasted nerve cells, thereby and naturally the body and mind regain vigor and energy, and you feel again the joy of living which comes only to people in good health.

ADVISES BED WHEN FIRST SYMPTOMS OF INFLUENZA APPEAR

"If you feel any of the symptoms of influenza, whether of the Spanish, American or Canadian types, don't fight it—go to bed."

This is the advice given by Dr. Hastings of Toronto, when asked if he had any message for the citizens, in view of the prevalence of Spanish influenza in some of the cities of the United States, particularly Boston. "The great trouble is they think that they can fight the disease, and stay up until symptoms of pneumonia develop." The doctor emphasized the importance of isolating persons suffering from influenza.

A Drop On a Touchy Corn

Instant relief! Then corn or callus lifts off with fingers

Just think! You can lift off any corn or callus without one twinge of pain.

A Cincinnati man discovered this ether compound and named it Freezone. Any druggist will sell a tiny bottle of Freezone for very little cost. You apply a few drops directly upon a tender corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears, then shortly you will find the corn or callus so loose that you can lift it right off.

Freezone is wonderful. It dries instantly. It doesn't eat away the corn or callus, but shrivels it up without even irritating the skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, as well as painful calluses, lift right off. There is no pain before or afterwards. No soreness or smarting. Women should keep a tiny bottle on the dresser, and never let a corn ache twice.

FALL TERM OF THE CLASSES IN THE Y.W.C.A. OPENS TO-DAY

The Association Has Closed a Very Successful Summer Season—Classes Organized

With the 1st of October comes the Fall Term of the various classes in the Young Womene's Christian Association. The summer months proved to be a very successful season in the Swimming Department — many new members joined the Association, a large number of girls and young women learned to swim, as was shown by the splendid exhibitions shown last week—and the pool was a most popular place during the hot weather.

In the Physical Department, Miss Littlefield will conduct the gymnasium classes, and following is the schedule for the weekly classes:

Monday — 4.30-5.30, Senior School Girls; 8.00-9.30, Business Girls' Beginners' Class.

Tuesday — 4.30-5.30, Junior School Girls; 7.00-9.30, Club Girls' Classes.

Wednesday — 3.30-5.30, Junior Girls; 8.00-9.30, Advanced Class.

Thursday — 10.30-11.30, Special Ladies' Class; 8.00-9.30, Business Girls' Intermediate Class.

Friday — 4.30-5.30, School Girls' Basket Ball; 8.00-9.30, Ladies' Class.

Saturday — 9.30-10.30, Juniors; 10.30-11.30, Babies' Class; 2.00-3.00, Junior Club Classes; 8.00-9.30, Business Girls' Basket Ball.

A limited number of private pupils will be taken. Pupils must consult the Physical Director before joining classes.

Classes Arranged.

In the Educational Department, several classes have been arranged. Those who are interested in the study of French will have an opportunity of joining a class under a most competent teacher. Mrs. S. J. Morris has just recently come from Paris, France, where she spent the last six years as a High School teacher of languages. The association is pleased indeed to hve secured Mrs. Morris with her wide teaching experience and her thorough knowledge of the French language. Mrs. Morris will teach her pupils either individually or in class if preferred.

A limited number of pupils in the study of Expression and Elocution ilwl be taken by Miss Winnifred Parker. This Department was commenced last year, and for the ebnefit of those who wish to continue the study arrangements may be made for private lessons.

First Aid and Home Nursing classes will be conducted as formerly under the direction of Dr. G. S. Cameron. Announcements of these classes will be made a little later in the season.

Reading Circle.

Any young girl or young woman who wishes to learn dressmaking or millinery, may join classes in these subjects and receive instruction under competent teachers, and other classes not already mentioned will be formed if there is sufficient demand. The Young Women's Christian Association aims to give all assistance possible to those who are trying to better themselves and will provide instruction in any subject required.

A reading circle is being formed to follow the course of reading arranged for the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle. This course is really a cycle if four years, the topic for this year being "Britain at Bay." The material for study includes four books by eminent writers, and a weekly magazine devoted chiefly to current events. Further particulars regarding this reading circle may be obtained at the Y.W.C.A. office, and other announcements will be made. It is hoped that a large number will be interested and will join the reading circle.

The Girls' Clubs in the Y.W.C.A. offer opportunities for gymnasium work, recreation and study. Why not be a club girl? Form a club in the place where you work and use the Club Rooms at the Y.W.C.A. building as your headquarters.

Lectures and entertainments and social evenings will form a large part of the winter's programme, and will be announced from time to time through the press.

Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, it's all the more important that you should have the other tried-and-true remedy for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill every night; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

Steamer Mariposa Believed Lost

Canadian Press:

PORT HURON, Mich., Sept. 30. — The steamer Mariposa is believed to have foundered on Lake Huron. Word was received here this afternoon from Goderich that a hatch cover, life preservers and wreckage bearing the steamer's name, is coming ashore there.

GRAIN MARKET

In the option markets yesterday there were sharp declines on receipt of news of the Bulgarian armistice. Still further restrictions on trading announced by the Chicago Board of Trade also had a depressing effect on prices. In the cash markets receipts are still comparatively light, though cash oats at Fort William are quoted a little easier on No. 2's, but no other grades quoted. Barley continues firm, with a good demand.

Manitoba wheat — No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2, $2.21 1-2; No. 3, $2.17 1-2; No. 4, $2.11 1-2, not including tax, in store, Fort William.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 86 3-8c., in store, Fort William.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.31; No. 3 winter, $2.27; No. 2 spring $2.26; No. 3 spring, $2.22, basis in store, Montreal.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 76c. to 78c.; No. 3, 75c. to 77c., according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, new crop, $1.07 to $1.12.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Ontario Flour — War quality, $10.75, Toronto-Montreal, $10.75, new bags.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal; shorts, $41.40; bran, $36.40; feed flour, not quoted; middlings, not quoted.

Hay— Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $19 to $20; No. 2 mixed, $17 to $18 per ton; straw, car lots, $9 to $9.50.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards —Receipts yesterday, 323 cars, with 6,181 cattle, 345 calves, 2,466 hogs, and 2,868 sheep and lambs.

Heavy supplies of cattle yesterday brought prices down about 50 cents per cwt. lower than last week's averages. There was a good run of heavy in the market, but the packers, after advertising that heavy steers were wanted, suddenly discovered that they did not want them so bad as they thought they did. The result was considerable disappointment on the part of the shippers, some of whom declared they would ship their heavy stuff to Buffalo after this. There was some inquiry for choice handy weight butchers for the local trade, and these were rather scarce. The market was very slow, and at noon but a small proprtion of the total offerings had been sold.

Hogs were unchanged for yesterday, but packers are quoting 50 cents lower for to-day.

Everyone Should Drink Hot Water in the Morning

To feel your best day in and day out, to feel clean inside; no sour bile to coat your tongue and sicken your breath or dull your head ;no constipation, bilious attacks, sick headache, colds, rheumatism or gassy, acid stomach, you must bathe on the inside like you bathe outside. This is vastly more important, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do, says a well-known physician.

To keep these poisons and toxins well flushed from the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels, drink before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from your pharmacist. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless except a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Drink phosphated hot water every morning to rid your system of these vile poisons and toxims also to prevent thier formation.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became saturated with an accumulation of body poisons, begin this treatment and above all, keep it up! As soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and purifying, so limestone phosphate and hot water before breakfast, act on the stomach ,liver, kidneys and bowels.

STRING GOES HIGHER, NO SIGN OF A DROP

STRINGLESS PARCELS MAY BE ADDED TO LIST OF WAR-TIME MEASURES.

String has gone up again. It is likely to go still higher, too, according to reports which have been given by the twine manufacturers.

Retail dealers in string say that since the beginning of the war it has gone steadily forward in leaps and bounds, and a pound of string that sold in 1914 for 35 cents is now selling at 75c, and in some cases 85c. They have said that the high price of string makes the goods in the tied parcel cost more also. The most recent rise, however, came at the beginning of September, when an advance of 12 cents was stated by the dealers.

Again the war seems to be the cause of the rise. Manufacturers say that in normal times Italian and Russian hemp is used in manufacture of certain kinds of twine. They say that the Russian market is practically closed now, except for a few stray orders which have been on the road for some time now. The Italian hemp is still available, though in very small quantities.

Indian jute has acted as a substitute for these two hemps. One of the causes given for the last rise in string is that the crops in India have been considerably damaged by storms.

"We expect to make another advance shortly," said the manager of a twine manufacturing concern.

"There are so many reasons for the advances in the price of twine made from jute that it would be difficult to enumerate them all. Submarines have sunk quantities of it; the demand is bigger than it has ever been before, and the supply smaller; some of the markets are closed, and it is also being used in the manufacture of all sorts of war materials where it has never been used before. A short time ago no jute was available, as the British government commandeered 75 per cent. of the growth for war purposes."

DON'T BE DYSPEPTIC.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

For Thrift

TO win the war, Money is needed. So that—Thrift is a War Service. Every dollar you save instead of spending thoughtlessly, releases labour in some form—labour sorely needed for war purposes.

¶ Thrift is enforced in the use of many things today, such as flour, sugar, and coal, by the simple expedient of limiting the amount one may buy.

¶ But thousands of extravagant habits flourish unchecked, and these are contributory hindrances to an early peace. Such habits are accomplices of the Kaiser.

¶ For instance, there is no excuse for a man hiring another man to shave him. It wastes time, money and vital labour. You can shave yourself better with a Gillette Safety Razor in five minutes.

¶ Buy a Gillette and wipe out the dollar a week expense. At the end of a year you have saved practically $52.

¶ With sucn a saving you can buy a $50 War Bond (the purchase of which enables the Government to produce 15,000 cartridges), and you still have the finest razor in the world, good for an unlimited number of inimitable daily shaves—shaves that leave the skin perfectly smooth. The touch of the Gillette is thoroughly agreeable to the most tender skin.

THE BOYS "OVER THERE"
Don't forget the boys "over there" use and lose more Gillette Blades than you would. Make a practice of enclosing a packet of blades in letters going overseas. Keep a CARTON of packets handy.

Road Opened for the Entrance of Allies Into Roumania and Russia

Russian and Roumanian Diplomats Foresee the Collapse of Germany's Policies in the Balkans.

REPORT CONFIRNED

(United Press.)
(By Joseph Shaplen.)

Washington, October 1. — Russian and Roumanian diplomats here today foresaw the collapse of Germany's policies in the Balkans and in the east. The signing of an armistice by Bulgaria on the terms made by the Allies was interpreted by the officials of the Russian embassy as a resumption of power in Bulgaria by the Russophile group of Bulgarian statesmen This it was declared would aid in the near future the efforts of revolutionary democracy of Russia to restore Russia's unity and independence.

The stimulant, officials pointed out would be both military and political. The virtual exit of Bulgaria from the war opens a road for the entrance of the allied troops into Roumania and thence to Southern Russia, and the Ukraine, where the population is fighting the German invaders, and eagerly awaiting outside help for a concentrated assault on the enemy. For one thing it was declared, the collapse of Bulgaria has already opened an anti-German revolt in Roumania against the Austro-German troops in Roumania, South Russia and the Ukraine.

MAY NOT BE NECESSARY.

Such an advance may not be necessary as the Bulgarian collapse is going to force Turkey to similar action. This it was hinted at the Russian embassy would at once release the strangle hold Turkey and Germany have obtained upon Caucasia, and may open the way for the British entrance into Caucasia and thence into Russia from Mesopotamia and Persia.

The Russian embassy has received a cable confirming the report that Princ George Lvoff, formerly premier if the first Provisional Russian government, is on his way to America to inform Ambassador Bakmetieff, and the American government of the latest events in Siberia and Russia. Prince Lvoff is coming as a representative of the Omsk Siberian (Russian) government, but will actally voice the politics of the new allRussian government recently fomed at Ufu.

WILL NOT PAY ATTENTION TO ARMISTICE FEELERS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 1.— The British government does not intend to respond to Turkish armistice proposal feelers until they are officially received, it was learned authoritatively this afternoon.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 1. — The Berlin Tageblatt mentions Count Von Bernstorff as a possible successor to Chancellor Von Hertling.

Von Bernstorff, former Ambassador to the United States, at present is German Ambassador to Turkey.

Weather Has Turned Colder

Heavy German Counter Attacks Check the American Advance.

(United Press.
(By Frank G. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICANS WEST OF VERDUN, Oct. 1.—The Germans are frantically rushing reinforcements into the Argonne region in an effort to block the American advance. The enemy apparently is determined to make a permanent stand on his present line rather than fall back to the Brunhilde Stellung defences. Intense fighting continues, with American infantry and artillery on the aggressive.

Heavy German counter attacks are slightly blocking the American advance. Their infantry, in attacking, are armed almost wholly with light machine guns. Their artillery is increasingly active and is using great quantities of gas. The weather turned colder and clearer over night, facilitating the fighting.

A PANIC IN GERMANY

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(3.45 p.m. despatch). — A peace demonstration took place in Berlin on Saturday, according to news received here to-day. The crowds assembled in front of the Bulgarian Legation at the German capital, necessitating police intervention. The rioters, according to the information, got the upper hand of the authorities and committed excesses. A number of statues were destroyed.

GREAT EXCITEMENT.

London, Oct. 1. — There is greatest excitement in Germany over the defection of Bulgaria, judging from the special despatches received here from Holland. On Saturday the excitement amounted to a panic, according to some reports. The panic has affected the Berlin Bourse where industrial stocks slumped violently.

Panic also struck parliament, and newspaper circles and public offices

Confidence is Failing.

Alarm brought forth instant demand that "something be done." A despatch to the Daily Mail from the Hague says the demand is for somebody possessing confidence of the Germans and their allies to replace present military oligarchy, but opinions clash regarding who this vague personality might be. All reports indicate a decided cleavage between Junker and Conservative classes and class represented by Socialists and Radicals, who on this occasion have the support of some Centrist and National Liberals.

FELL FAMOUS TREES

Canadians Have Started on Devonshire's Estate.

London, Oct. 1.—The Canadian Foresters this week started felling the Duke of Devonshire's woods on the Chatsworth estate in Derbyshire, and it is expected the work will extend to eighteen months or two years. From Scotland there comes the complaint that the Canadian Foresters are being used to replace the Scottish civilian woodsmen, who, it is said, are more skilled in his work than the Canadians can prove themselves in Scotland. This complaint generally should not be taken too seriously.

TURKEY IS NOW CUT OFF FROM GERMANY

Effects of the Bulgarian Armistice Will Soon be Noticeable—Military Measures Follow.

WIDE POSSIBILITIES

(United Pres.)
(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The effects of the Bulgarian armistice upon Austria and Turkey will probably soon be noticeable. The widest possibilities are opened by the elimination of Bulgaria. The most immediate result is expected by many to be a separate peace with Turkey, due to severance of its communications with Germany

The haste with which Bulgaria signed the convention indicated the nation's readiness to concede every Allied demand. Knowing Bulgaria's past record the Allies were in no mood to let her off on any terms. They demanded every concession consistant with justice.

The announcement of Bulgaria's downfall caused a wild outburst of jubilance on the Paris Boursee.

No Separate Peace.

The United Press learned authoritatively that at present there will be no separate peace with Bulgaria, and political decisions affecting that country's future will be taken. Only military measures follow the signa of armistice. The Bulgarians are beaten. That explains and clarifies the situation at present,' one authority stated.

The victorious advance of the Allies toward Uskub led the Bulgarians to throw down their arms with sudden fervour. Before hostilities ceased yesterday noon even German reinforcements were unable to prevent the capture of many prisoners and immense booty.

WAR SUMMARY

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Associated Press to-day issues the following summary:

Cambrai was in flames to-day as the British were breaking great holes in the Hindenburg lines from Cambrai to St. Quentin. Germans set fire to Cambrai apparently in the hope of destroying the great quantity of supplies there before the British could surround the town, which already is encircled on three sides. North of St. Quentin the British have taken Venhuile, west of Le Catelet. Further south they have reached a point east of St. Quentin and have captured Levergies. In Belgium, King Albert is leading the Belgian and British armies to further successes and is rapidly driving into the heart of a net-work of German railroads centred about Ghent. General Allenby in Palestine has thrown his cavalary far to the north of the Sea of Galilee and they are reported to be 2 1-2 miles from the important railroad junction of Damascus. On the Mediterranean coast the French mounted forces are approaching Beyrout, northwest of Damascus.

TURKEY WILL FOLLOW.

There are indications that Turkey will follow Bulgaria's example in giving up the war. Following absolute defeat of her armies and the defection of Bulgaria there would seem to be no other step possible for that country. As a result of the threatening political aspect of the situation which has arisen the German Government is facing a ministerial crisis. Imperial Chancellor Von Hertling has resigned from office and was closely followed by Foreign Secretary Von Hintze. This morning it was reported from Amsterdam that Vice-Chancellor Von Payer, who has held that office since November 9, 1917, had also quit. Amid the crumbling of its Cabinet, Germany is hearing the rumbling of a mighty storm that has broken over the western battle line. Grim tidings from the front, kept secret from the German people for the past two months, now are freely discussed by newspapers and a wave of what closely resembles hysteria, is reported to be sweeping over that country.

WILL REPEAT THE NATIONALITY MINSTRELS

The St. Peter's Dramatic Club repeat the Nationality Minstrels tomorrow evening at the T.A.S. Hall. The Club has played in all the surrounding towns and always had crowded houses together with a wish that they would some time return. The concert will start sharp at 8:15 o'clock. Entire proceeds will be given to the Knights of Columbus Hut Fund Campaign.

HINDENBURG TRYING TO HOLD AMERICANS

"CARRY ON."

No phrase born of the war is so terse or full of meaning as the two words "Carry On!" They mean "Do your duty!" They mean everything that makes for earnest effort in the individual and the nation.

They are a mandate for you, the civilian at home, as well as for the soldier.

Our army cannot "Carry On" unless the home folks "Carry On" also. The way to do it is to save. That is your part in the present war; and it will still be your part, after peace is declared. Save that you may Lend—lend for Victory. Canada expects that duty and at least that degree of sacrifice of you. It is the sole condition under which she can "Carry On!" Your duty is as plain as that of the soldier in the trenches. If you don't save you are refusing to serve. Don't be a slacker. You'll regret it when slacker times come.

BELGIAN-BRITISH FLANDERS ADVANCE CONTINUES RAPIDLY

All the Enemy Guns in One Forest Were Captured by the Belgians—Towns Captured.

HEAVY FIGHTING

(United Press.)
(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 1.—The Belgian-British advance in Flanders is continuing rapidly despite some of the most terrific fighting of the war.

The British at one point brought their big guns up and established them on a ridge facing a German battery on another ridge only 600 yards away. The opposing artillery blazed away at each other until the enemy guns were entirely silenced.

The Belgians have taken Dixmude, following street fighting which centred about the town hall. Four fresh divisions are reported to have reinforced Germans opposite Belgians, including the 100th regiment which sacked Dinant early in the war.

Guns Captured.

All enemy guns in the Houthulst Forest were captured, bringing the total taken by the Belgians up to more than 300. The British have taken about 100. One British division advanced 12,000 yards (about seven miles) in one day. The British are well east of Moerale (four miles south-west of Roulers), and hold Ferhand. A British general entered Cheluveit astride a captured German pony. The fighting to the southward from the north of Cambrai to St. Quentin is bearing out the expectations that the Germans would fight for every foot of their strong defences. For the past several days the enemy has resisted every effort to completely clear him out.

The Boches always reappeared at some unexpected point, leading to the theory that they were using tunnels from their main line, but to-day's experience resulted in the belief that instead they were filtering in through deep ravines.

For their success in capturing Bellecourt the Americans had a much smaller loss than they expected in the form of casualties. The number of wounds proving to be slight, was one of the satisfactory features of the fighting. Against this unavoidable expenditure of lives there are Le Catelet, Guoy, Nauroy and all the towns and villages between, captured by the Americans.

MUST CARRY EXEMPTION PAPERS

A Warning to All Citizens.

It has been brought to the notice of the Chief of Police that several persons of military age are not carrying the necessary military exemption papers, etc.

All citizens are warned that they are liable to be stopped and called upon to produce the same and should at all times have these papers in their possession.

Perseverance, plus a reasonable amount of common sense, is the secret of success.

American Front is Only Ten Miles Wide Between the Argonne Forest and the Meuse.

RECKLESS SLAUGHTER

(By J. W. T. Mason—United Press).

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Von Hindenburg is throwing his reserves into the battle against the Americans north of Verdun with unexampled prodigality in a desperate effort to prevent General Pershing from closing the Luxemburg exit out of France.

The American front is scarcely more than ten miles wide between the Argonne Forest and the Meuse. Von Hindenburg has already piled seven fresh divisions into this area, and is preparing to send more.

In consequence of the desperation with which the Germans are contesting the American movement down the Meuse, the progress of General Pershing's advance is necessarily slow. It calls for a higher degree of skill and strategy than any other combat in which the Americans have been engaged.

Force a Wedge.

The Americans might be tempted to force a wedge formation northward along the banks of the Meuse with some degree of rapidity, but if they did this they would themselves be in a pocket, and would offer the opportunity to Von Hindenburg for a strong counter attack. The fact that the Argonne Forest is on the left flank of the Americans is also an impediment to their advance. The Germans are heavily entrenched in the Argonne region, and have not yet been expelled from its admirable concealments for machine gun nests. If General Pershing were to move forward to any considerable degree without fully protecting his left wing from an attack from the Argonne, he would give Von Hindenburg an opportunity to direct a telling fire against the American flank.

French Advancing.

The French are now advancing on the west side of the Argonne. It is possible that with the French on the west flank and the Americans on the east flank of the forest, the Germans can be pinched out. If this manoeuvre is successfully conducted it will be much easier for the Americans to speed up their offensive along the Meuse. Von Hindenburg, however, will certainly continue to slaughter his own man power recklessly in an attempt to hold the Americans.

The possession of Luxemburg highway, passing through St. Enay, 12 miles north of the American front, is too vital for him to count the cost of its retention.

1,000 Applications for Coal Have Been Filed

The number of applications for coal received by the Fuel Commission is approximately one thousand, Mr. Joseph Wearing, the chairman, stated to-day. This means that from one-fifth to one-quarter of the homes in Peterboro have not yet been supplied with even one ton. The figures indicate the problem that confronts the commission, and only two months remain in which this deficiency may be overcome.

MINISTRELS TO REPEAT ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

The Nationality Minstrels will repeat their entertainment at St. Alphonsus Lyceum to-morrow night. The proceeds will be contributed to the K. C. Huts Fund. This minstrel show made a hit on its first presentation a short time ago, and its merits, apart from its object, is worthy of another capacity house.

INFLUENZA CAUSES TWO DEATHS AT RENFREW

RENFREW, Oct. 1.—An epidemic of influenza is seriously affecting the industries and school attendance. One shell factory is closed and the schools this morning had only a 25 per cent. enrollment. Two deaths are reported.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED.

Allies at Vladivostok Aim Measure at Enemy Agents.

Vladivostok, September 30. — Martial law has been decreed at Vladivostok and in the district of Vladivostok, by Colonel Butenko, provisional commander of the armed forces in the maritime province. The measure is directed against enemy agents.

THE KAISER ACCEPTS HERTLING'S RESIGNATION.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 1. — The Kaiser in accepting Chancellor Von Hertling's resignation, sent him the following message:

"I desire that the people shall co-operate more effectively than hitherto in declaring the fate of the Fatherland. It is therefore my will that men sustained by the people's trust shall co-operate in the rights and duties of government."

British Near Damascus

Gen. Allenby's Troops Only Two and a Half Miles Away From Important City.

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 1.—British forces were last reported at Tiberas, on the west shore of that body of water. Arab troops, however, seized Berat, the important railway junction thirty miles east of the Sea of Galilee, early in the British offensive. Damascus is only 180 miles south and west of Alepho, where it is believed General Allenby's and General Marshall's troops may form a junction.

The existence of Damascus as a city dates back to the dawn of history. It was the Governmental seat of a kingdom which reached the height of its power in the ninth century before Christ. It is one of the four terrestial paradises of the Mohammedans.

The City of Beirut.

Beirut is the chief seat of Syria, and is about 70 miles north of Acre, where the Allies were last officially reported in their operations along the Mediterranean Sea. Its population is about 150,000, the same as Damascus. It is connected with the latter city by railway.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—British troops are within four kilometres (two and a half miles) of Damascus, and the fall of the city is momentarily expected, the "Echo de Paris" declared to-day.

At the same time French cavalry is advancing on Beirut.

Damascus, the principal railway and commercial centre in Palestine, is sixty miles north-east of the Sea of Galilea.

No More Rank Insignia for Army Chaplains

LOUISVILLE, Ky., —Chaplains in the United States Army will hereafter wear no insignia of official rank, retaining only the cross, according to a War Department order just received by Major A. A. Pruden, commandant of the school for chaplains and approved chaplain candidates at Camp Zachary Taylor.

Great dissatisfaction among students at the school is said to have been caused by the order and it was reported that more than one hundred members of a class of 252 who are to be graduated Thursday had wired to authorities of the churches to which they belong and to members of Congress protesting against the War Department's action.

No reason for the War Department's action was given.

WAR DEPARTMENT ORDER FOLLOWED RULING FOR GENERAL PERSHING.

WASHINGTON, D. C.— War Department regulations providing that army chaplains shall wear only the cross indicating their calling and no insignia of rank follow a ruling made by General Pershing and which has been in effect in France for several months. It was indicated at the War Department that there would be no disposition to alter the regulations because of any protest which might be received from the chaplain students at Camp Zachary Taylor.

FORD STILL A PACIFIST

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 1—At the Republican State Convention, Chairman Hayes denounced Henry Ford, as a pacifist, who opposed war and the Democratic candidate for senator, an unbeliever in the American soldier.

Boches Appeared in Large Numbers and Held the Attacking Forces Back—Tunnel Mopped Up.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

(By Lowell Mellett—United Press).

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 1.—New York troops to-day are securely holding the main Hindenburg lines leading southward from Le Catellet. They sent back one hundred and fifty additional prisoners last night.

The New Yorkers reached Gouy (adjoining Le Catellet on the east) their final objective, yesterday morning. The Australians who followed the same path in the afternoon are still engaged in a desperate fight with the Germans, who had sprung up in great numbers here, hindering the Americans from going right through.

The uncanny appearance of the Boches is explained through the discovery of a system of underground tunnel passages following the territory between Gillemont Farm (two miles west of Le Catellet) and west of the Hindenburg first line.

The New Yorkers, keeping pace with the troops from Tennessee and the Carolinas, failed to discover the traps, but the Australians waded directly into them. The Australians at first thought the Americans had been cut off and fought coolly under the incentive of assisting their Yankee comrades.

Kept Pouring In.

Germans from the crack Eighth and Fifty-Fourth Divisions continued pouring in from the left, giving the Australians one of the stiffest fights of their history.

In the meantime the New Yorkers held tightly to their principal objective, and the Boches were unable to repair the breaches in their line. When the New Yorkers saw the nature of the resistance which was before them, the southerners skilfully re-aligned themselves, making the whole front safe. The southerners then deliberately mopped up the whole tunnel. The air gunners, showing themselves at the entrance, were ordered to instruct them to come out. The entire bag numbered more than 200.

Investigation revealed that on the water running through the tunnels floated barges of every description. These were used as billets for officers, ammunition houses, and one had a movie machine rigged up in it. The barges extended inward half a mile to a point where the tunnel is 150 feet below the surface.

British Official.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Oct. 1. — (Official). — Under the threat of the speedy capture by the British, the city of Cambrai has been set on fire by the Germans. British troops last night continued their closing in movement on Cambrai. They captured Proville, to the west of the city, and Tilloy, close by on the north-west. Further south, on the front between Cambrai and St. Quentin, the town of Vendhuile has been taken possession of by the British and Canadians. North of St. Quentin, the British wedge has been thrust still further into German held territory, and the town of Levergies has been captured.

The battle was resumed this morning in the Cambrai-St. Quentin sector.

The statement reads:

"Our attack north of St. Quentin continued yesterday afternoon. We captured Levergies after sharp fighting in the neighbourhood of the Foch is fighting five great t once and winning them all.

WHAT IS NEEDED

ctorious progress of the allies ded incentive to the purchase y Bonds. The enemy is cav-om the effect of the gigantic at are being hurled against ywhere. "We have reached mit of the war," says Field Foch. "It will be like a ball town hill which gathers speed s."

ake the victory complete and however, General Foch tells what is still required. "We want more and more tanks", he declares, "more and more airplanes, more and more automobiles, and vast quantities of munitions."

Canada's new victory loan is needed to provide these things which Foch needs to finish the triumph of the Allies. The more munitions and war machinery available for the use of our troops in France, the quicker will be the end of the war and the smaller will be the Allies casualty lists. Money is needed to carry on Canadian war efforts and to finance the manufacture of munitions in Canada. From one source and one source alone can that money come from the people of Canada. The call will be made shortly and there should be no doubt as to the answer. The Canadian people at home should be ready to doubly subscribe the amount necessary so that the word can go out to the world that Canada "carries on".

FOR THE BOYS OVER THERE.

It is certain that if every citizen of Peterboro could have heard the remarks of Sergt. McLean at the mass meeting in the Grand Opera House last night, the objective of the Knights of Columbus Army Hut campaign would have been reached before noon to-day, the first day of the campaign. This earnest Scotch-Canadian, a veteran of the present war, and before that a soldier of the King in Africa and India, brought the war home to his audience in a way that few speakers heard in Peterboro have done, and his graphic, simple story of the sacrifices over there, makes the sacrifices and discomforts we have to sustain over here seem small indeed.

The need of giving every possible assistance to the Army Hut plan, because of the comfort and entertainment they would provide for the alied soldiers in France and Belgium, was the keynote of Sergt. McLean's speech, as it has been of the endorsation given the project by other veterans of the Great War. The men who have been "Somewhere in Hell," as Sergt. McLean picturesquely described it, know what the Army Huts mean to their comrades who are still carrying on, and they have on every possible occasion unhesitatingly approved of and assisted in this work.

Peterboro's campaign opened this morning and will continue for the balance of the week. Every citizen who has the welfare of our gallant soldiers at heart should support the Army Hut plan as a practicable, effective method of assisting those who are risking all to make the world safe for us.

The line of communication of the army that is going to reach Berlin, Sergt. McLean pointed out, must be kept open, and that line leads directly into Peterboro from the front. The people over here must be behind the army with all the support and assistance possible. The dawn of a brighter day for the world is breaking, and we must not forget the debt we owe to the men who are bringing victory daily nearer. As the Canadians in France are carrying on, so must their kinsmen at home carry on until the final triumph of the forces of liberty and democracy.

Help the Huts; they are going to help the boys.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Thanksgiving Day would be an appropriate time for Turkey to give up the ghost.

We may expect the German War Office to announce the departure of Bulgaria from active participation in the war, in terms something like this: "According to pre-arranged plans, and without interference by the enemy, Bulgaria has retired from the war. The movement was a complete success."

The Austrian reinforcements in Bulgaria are pretty much in the position of the gentleman in the song —"all dressed up and no place to go."

With Turkey holding out for more money before she will go on with the war, the Germans can now realize the position of the National Baseball Commission in the recent world series.

The Canadian people who are complaining that the month just closed was the worst September they ever remember may take considerable consolation out of the fact that it wasn't a very good month for the Germans either.

There is glory enough for everyone in the magnificent fighting of the allies on the western front, but there should be a special niche in the Hall of Fame for that Midland Division which made the marvellous crossing of the Scheldt Canal on Sunday morning.

PRIVATE EDWARD PAYNE,

Killed in Action, October 1st, 1915.

In memory of Private Edward Payne, who was killed in action on October the first, nineteen hundred and fifteen:

Short and sudden was the call
Of one so dearly loved by all,
The blow was great,
The shock severe,
We little thought his death so near,
And only those who love can tell
The pain at not saying
The last farewell.

—From the Family.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my mother, Mrs. David Byers, who passed away October 1st, 1917:

"We would not call her back again,
For she is better far
From sin and sorrow she is safe,
Within the gates ajar."

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

Two Very Popular Ford Models

The above two closed models of Ford cars have recently become very popular with the Canadian buying public, so much so that a very large percentage of buyers, have chosen either one of these models, which by actual experience have proved exceptionally comfortable and satisfactory for summer driving as well as being perfectly comfortable during the cold days of Fall, Winter and Spring.

It is regrettable however that just now when they have become so popular, the Ford Motor Company have but a very limited number available until after the war. We will however be glad to fill any orders accepted while the stock lasts and as a special inducement we have decided to store in our new garage free of charge from now until next Spring, any Ford Sedan or Ford Coupelet purchased this Fall. This will give the owner an opportunity of driving his car during the Winter when he so desires, which should prove to be a great convenience.

The material and workmanship on these two models are equally as good as on any $4000 to $5000 car and the riding qualities are exceptionally comfortable, together with being perfectly warm in any weather, explains the reason why these two models have gained such popularity.

Now is the time to purchase for as stated above when the very limited quantity available are placed, there will be no more until after the war is over and the automobile business resumes its normal condition.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER IS WHAT GOD DEMANDS

Stirring Message by Rev. Mr. [illegible] at Last Night's Meeting in the Brock Street Tabernacle—The Church is Running After the World.

SUBJECT OF NIGHT'S MEETING.

Dr. Honeywell's messages in the two opening addresses of his evangelistic campaign in Peterboro have been directed essentially to the Christian people of the city. There has been no trail hitting or appeal for conversion. Instead he has taken the ground that if a revival is to be started in Peterboro it must begin first with the Christian people of the city. In his opening address Sunday night the emphasis was placed on the power and importance of prayer. A revival cannot be worked up, but must be brought down from Heaven by the power of the Holy Spirit, and for this reason the earnest prevailing prayer on the part of the Christian people of the city is essential. Last night Dr. Honeywell dwelt on the importance of prayer and the need for revivals. The argument so frequently brought forth now and that revivals are unnecessary was effectively combatted during the address. There was a splendid attendance of the choir last evening and one or two new hymns were sung. As the choir becomes accustomed to working together its effectiveness is increasing. A splendid solo was given last evening by the leader, W. S. Dixon, whose baritone voice is exceptionally fine, his articulation being distinct and flute-like in clearness.

The Sermon.

In this service I wish to speak to you on the great need of revival, and the conditions which will bring it about, said Dr. Honeywell by way of introduction.

In former dispensations Psalmist prayed: "Will thou not revive us again that Thy people may rejoice in Thee?" Special times to favor Zion were predicted and recognized when fulfilled. The poet in the darkness cried out—"O Lord, revive Thy work, in the midst of the years make know, in wrath remember mercy."

The growth of Christianity as it is recorded in the Book of the Acts and traced in the Epistles exhibits periods of declension in which the apostles and evangelists set to arouse the people, encouraging them by special promises and accounts of the blessing of God upon their labours.

The Epistle to the Seven Churches, in which the apostle represented as receiving the word from Christ Himself, recognize the possibility, and declare the fact of spiritual decline and vehemently exhort those who have lost their first love to repent and do their first works over again.

And these admonitions and the appeals are strengthened by the assumption that on spiritual condition of the church depend in a large measure and accessions to it from without of such are being saved.

Who that ever reads the Bible can doubt as to the divine origin of revivals. Look at the great religious awakening under Moses, Joshua, David and Josiah. Think of the results of the confession of their sins when the great gathering listened to Ezra as he read the law.

Converted Revivals.

The majority of the professing Christians in our churches to-day have been converted in revivals. The majority of the teachers were converted in revivals and the majority of the millions in the church has fitted for heaven were trophies of revivals. When we drop the spirit of revivals we have lost our power. Poor friends of the church and of God are those who deny revivals.

We have revivals in politics. Every four years our political evangelists go up and down the land preaching their own political doctrines until our country is set aglow with political revival.

We have revivals in business. Everywhere we go we find business men using every legitimate and many of the illegitimate means to increase the trade and extend their business.

We have revivals in pleasure. Every once in a while we see some old sport and amusement that has long been forgotten revived and brought into public favour again.

We have revival in dress. How many times we see some old style that has long since been discarded, come into service again.

A Specialist.

The evangelist is simply a specialist. These days are days of specialists along all lines. In medicine we have our specialists on the eye, ear and throat. We have specialists on lung difficulties, on abdominal and nervous diseases. Their presence in the medical field is no criticism on the skill of the regular practitioner. In law we have those who are specialists as criminal lawyers. Others are corporation lawyers—others code and statutory lawyers. In every walk and round and realm of life to-day, you find the specialist. Why not the evangelist?

Some say the day of revivals is passed. There never was a greater falsehood uttered. It may have passed with you, but not with God. The church has been victorious just in proportion as it has been evangelistic, and any church that is not evangelistic is a blight to a community.

The most effective way any one can show his utter insensibility as a citizen and his absolute indifference to the moral good and spiritual welfare of a community is to oppose a work like this that has for its only aim and object the saving of men and women from sin and hell and the bettering of our community. So much for the revival.

What is a revival and when is it needed? A revival is an increase of religious interest. It is needed when there is a worldly spirit in the church. This is a busy age—a commercial age. The world is growing dark with commercialism. Our great trouble to-day is that we are drunk commercially. It is a money-making craze and a man's success is not judged by his moral influence or character but by the brick blocks he may own along the street or the amount of real estate he may have recorded in his name in the county records.

Campaign Notes.

In his announcements last evening Dr. Honeywell emphasized the importance of prayer being continued throughout the city and asked the people who are willing to allow their homes to be used on Tuesday and Friday mornings, from ten to ten-thirty, to either phone their pastors or to Rev. Mr. Doner, chairman of the Spiritual committee, and give their names and addresses. Women who are willing to lead these meetings are also asked to report in the same way. Later it is expected to have meetings for business men through which it is hoped to reach the business men of the city.

To-night's Address.

To-night Dr. Honeywell's address is intended mainly for the business men of the city. It is an address which business men in other centres have heard with delight and desired that their employees should hear it. To-morrow night's subject will deal with the home problem, allied with it is the school problem. Parents and teachers are especially invited to hear this. Friday evening the boys and girls of the Collegiate and the older boys of the public schools will be guests at the meeting, when Dr. Honeywell is to speak on "The Secret of Success or How to Win."

The boys and girls of King George school from nine to fifteen years of age are to hold a special meeting this afternoon in the Mark street church.

This Afternoon.

At three o'clock this afternoon Mrs. Russell and Mrs. Dixon are to address a women's meeting at the Y.W.C.A.

Dr. Honeywell announced last night that in the opening meetings of his campaign people frequently complain that they do not catch all that he says. This, he believes, is due to his rapid delivery. Complaints would disappear as to the campaign progresses and people become more familiar with his style.

Business Meeting.

Following the meeting last evening there was a general meeting of the executive and all the committees. Messrs. Wm. Madill, S. R. Armstrong and G. W. Powell were appointed a committee to confer with the members of the Board of Education to see if arrangements could be made to have Dr. Honeywell address a meeting of the pupils of the Collegiate Institute.

Messrs. J. O. Fife, J. C. Smith, Geo. Robertson, G. W. Gilman and Rev. R. Pogue have been appointed a committee to see what arrangements can be made to address meetings of the employees of the shops and factories in the city.

Rev. Messrs. Webb, Doner and Brown are acting as a committee to arrange for afternoon prayer meetings in the churches on certain days and to decide in what churches the speakers associated with Rev. Dr. Honeywell can best arrange to address meetings, several churches having applied for their service.

An extension committee has been appointed with the object of reaching the places near Peterborough, such as Lakefield, Norwood and Havelock. This committee is composed of Rev. Mr. Mallott, A. E. Prest, Dr. Middleton, Richard Lees, R. J. Kidd, L. J. Pettit and H. B. Cowan.

Heating Arrangements.

The sudden change in the temperature yesterday and the smaller attendance led to many finding the building cold, although fires were burning in several stores. To-day arrangements have been made to start the fires early and to keep them going in all the stoves so that the building should be properly heated. As the committee has not had experience in arrangements of this kind before it will be two or three days before all matters of this kind are finally adjusted, but it is expected that by to-night the heating will be in good shape.

PETERBORO SOLDIER SHOT THROUGH LUNGS

How Pte. Percy Bertrand Met His Death.

Mrs. Percy Bertrand, 502 George street, has received the following letter from Corp. Harry Tanner concerning the death of her husband, who was killed on August 28, 1918.

August 31, 1918.

Mrs. Percy Bertrand:

Dear Friend,—I must tell you some very sad news as I expect you have already heard about your husband being killed, and I certainly feel very sorry for you all as he always was such a good fellow, and to me he was the best chum I ever had. Really, I thought as much of him as my own brother. We got into a very hard fight and he was killed not more than ten feet from me. I wasn't near him as both of us were corporals and we had to look after our platoon, but he had one of the boys he knew well with him. Your husband told him to give all his belongings to me and to send them to his dear wife and mother. He lived for about 15 minutes after he was hit. He was shot through both lungs so he didn't suffer long and I hope and pray that he is better off in that great home beyond where there are no sorrows, or trials. I will send all his photos and his flute, Military Medal Ribbon and a few letters which he had in his pockets. In his purse is a dollar bill which he has carried in his pocket ever since he came out.

I must close now hoping that God will be with you all, and comfort you in your great sorrow as he has been most merciful to me, and I never shall forget my chum. I remain,

Your sincere friend,

Corp. Harry Tanner,
No. 195222, 18th Battalion,
France.

P.S.—If there is anything you would like done to his grave I will try and find it if I am near that part of the line.

MAMMA, DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

LOOK AT TONGUE! MOVE POISONS FROM LIVER AND BOWELS AT ONCE.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels, need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, does not eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, remember a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All the children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages, and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see if it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Time is money, according to the adage, yet some men spend a great deal of time trying to borrow a little money.

BOARD OF TRADE ENDORSE STREET RAILWAY EXTENSION

Meeting Held Last Night at Which Many Problems Were Discussed.

The Executive Council of the Board of Trade held their monthly meeting last night in the Board Room of the Toronto Savings & Loan Company, and among other business, decided to apply to the Attorney General of Ontario, for leave to appear before the Board of Railway Commissioners for Ontario on an application for extension of the Street Railway to serve parts of the city now without Street Railway service.

The Chairman of the Housing Committee reported on the work of the Committee, and the Secretary reported on the deputation to the C.P.R. Passenger Agent at Toronto for better service to and from Montreal. Both reports were insatisfactory, and further action will be taken.

"GET TOGETHER"

It was also decided at the meeting that monthly or fortnightly luncheons would be held by the Board at which short speeches would be made dealing particularly with civic problems, and the first luncheon will be held on the 11th. of October, if possible, and will be in the nature of a "Get Together Meeting." It is hoped by the Executive that this meeting will be the means of increasing interest in the work of the Board, which has not been appreciated by the citizens generally, owing to the work having been carried on quietly.

At the first luncheon it is proposed to outline the work accomplished, and the citizens who attend are assured of a surprise at the extent of the work done.

EMPLOYMENT FOR RETURNED MEN

The local office of the Soldiers' Aid Commission is advised from the Toronto Office, that openings are now available for the employment of several men, returned men, to act as guards at the Industrial Farm, Burwash, Ont. The initial salary is $55.00 per month, with uniform, board and lodging. Application should be made to Mr. C. F. Neelands, Superintendent, Industrial Farm, Burwash, Ont.

Also several returned men to act as attendants at the Newmarket Military Hospital, Newmarket, Ont. The initial salary is $50.00 per month, with board, lodging and uniform. They prefer men about forty years of age, either married or single. Apply to Mr. H. J. Bassett, Newmarket Military Hospital, Newmarket, Ont.

The information, as above, is supplied through W. D. Read, Inspector of Branches, the Commission, and may be relied on as authentic.

Was Presented With a Clock

MR. JOHN FAGAN WILL MOVE TO TORONTO.

Mr. John Fagan, 413 Sheridan street of the Package Department of the Quaker Oats was presented by the "boys" with a handsome clock as a token of esteem and regard for their fellow workman.

Peterboro, Ontario,
September 28, 1918

My dear Mr. John Fagan,—We have gathered together on the occasion of your departure with the feeling that we could not let you leave our midst, without trying to manifest to you in some small way, our appreciation of your sterling worth as a workmate. One that was at all times on the job and met you with a kindly word and helping hand and as a token of our regard for you, we ask that you accept this clock, and whenever you look upon its face we trust that you will recall the many well-wishers that you left behind you in the Package Department of the Quaker Oats Company of Peterboro.

Signed on behalf of "the Boys".

Mr. Fagan made a suitable reply thanking them very much for the present. Mr. Fagan is moving to Toronto.

Presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Young

Lee Street Residents Are Moving South.

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Young, Lee street, on Friday evening last, when their neighbours gathered at their home to bid them farewell before they leave for their new home in the south end of the city; and to show the high esteem in which they were held by their numerous friends Mrs. Austin presented Mrs. Young with the gift and Mrs. Johnston read the address.

THE ADDRESS

The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Young,—

We, your neighbours, on learning of your departure from our midst, are gathered here this evening to express in some small way our appreciations of your kind dispositions whilst friends and neighbours with us.

While in our neighbourhood we enjoyed your kindness and friendship very much. While we find it hard to find words to express our feelings we ask you to accept as a small token of gratitude this gift, not for its intrinsic value but to show our kind feelings towards you. We know that you are not going to leave this city but we will welcome you back here any time. We wish you good luck in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the neighbours,
Mrs. Austin,
Mrs. Woods
Mrs. Drummond
Mrs. Braden
Mrs. Calvert
Mrs. Lowes
Miss Lowes
Mrs. Johnston

IN REPLY

Mr. and Mrs. Young thanked their many friends for their kindness towards them. They also asked their neighbours to come and visit them in their new home. The evening was spent in music and singing after which refreshments were served and then the gathering broke up with the singing of "God be with us till we meet again" and "God save the King."

This Will Remove Hair of Fuzzy Growths

(Toilet Tips.)

A safe, certain method for ridding the skin of ugly, hairy growths is as follows: Mix a paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is entirely harmless and seldom requires repeating, but to avoid disappointment it is advisable to see that you get genuine delatone.

FIVE DEATHS OCCUR AT SYDNEY FROM "FLU"

Sydney, Oct. 1 Five deaths have resulted here and in North Sydney during the week-end from Spanish influenza, those dying being two children of D. D. MacDonald, North Sydney, Ivan O. Hart of Sydney; Seaman John Crilly, and American sailor, attached to the aviation corps in North Sydney, and Corp. James T. Smith, an American soldier. The body of seaman Crily is being shipped to the home of his parents in Washington, D. C. Washington has been wired for instructions on the disposal of Corp. Smith's body.

It is possible that the schools, theatres and churches will be closed here as there are many serious cases of the malady.

During the epidemics in New Waterford, it is said that there were 1,200 cases and that one doctor attended 500. The situation there is now well in hand.

Vital Statistics For the Month

Decrease in the Number of Deaths —Building Permits.

A decided decrease in deaths and marriages and increase in the birth rate is shown in the city by the statistics for the past quarter and month.

Deaths	18	31
Marriages	16	34

Building Permits.

The building permits also have increased for September, 1918, when 15 were issued, amounting to $3,475. In September, 1917, seven permits were issued, amounting to $980.

THE WEATHER

The month of September is usually one of the most pleasant months of the year, but not so in 1918. Out of the thirty days composing the month rain came down on twenty-one. The total amount was 5 inches. While this is not a record for the month it has been exceeded but once. The warmest day was the 3rd, with 82 degrees; the lowest temperature was on the morning of the last day, 31 degrees. This was the first occasion below the freezing point. This Tuesday morning the figures were 29 degrees, or three points below freezing.—W. P.

PTE. GEORGE COLLINS DIED IN KINGSTON

Was a Member of the 93rd Battalion.

At the Military Hospital, Kingston yesterday, there passed away Private George Collins, son of W. J. Collins, of 295 King street. Private Collins left Peterborough with the 93rd and served for over a year in France, and in the trenches lost his health, being returned to Canada on sick leave. He was a much respected member of Murray Street Baptist Church. The funeral service will take place at eleven o'clock on Thursday morning from the above address to Norwood cemetery. Rev. J. R. Webb will conduct the service, assisted by Rev. A. J. Doner.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Being absent from the city at the time Mr. O'Reilly's letter appeared in the Examiner, I was unable to make any reply earlier. I wish to say that so far as his remarks in reference to the Peterborough Milk Products Limited, are concerned, they are not correct.

The price paid by our company to the farmers for their milk has satisfied all whose milk we have bought. From five to ten farmers produce all the milk we retail in the city, the rest being used for our condensed milk product.

If Mr. O'Reilly will compare the prices we pay all season with other plants using milk for similar purposes, he will find we are well above the average price. As to the Toronto firms offering a larger price, Mr. O'Reilly is at liberty to sell his milk to them if he so desires. We are not buying from him. If he wishes to sell direct to the consumer at 10c. per quart, he can do so, and should do so, seeing that he saves the extra 2c. that it costs to clarify and pasteurize milk.

I have tried on three different occasions to get the milk vendors to amalgamate and put in force a systematized delivery system, believing that more can be paid the producer and at the same time give the consumer his milk cheaper. Where 35 to 40 men to-day are delivering milk in this city, 12 men and rigs can do the same work by not crossing each other's territory. 1 cent per quart could be saved in delivery alone.

I would also ask Mr. O'Reilly how it is that the other men who are producers and vendors to-day are not selling at 10c. per quart? Our system of clarifying and pasteurizing costs 2c. extra for this work. When the producer delivers direct to the consumer, many of them from a can—no bottling, and no bottles to lose—they are charging more, proportionately, than our company.

I am quite willing to co-operate with the producers to bring about any system in the present time of stress and strain demands, if they are willing to look on all sides of the question—the producer, the distributor and the consumer—and not take the one view only, as Mr. O'Reilly does himself alone.

Your obedient servant.
G. A. GILLESPIE.
